ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

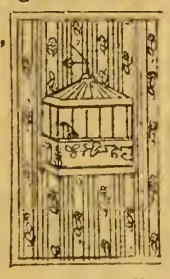
MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS



catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

A SPLENDID SINGER.

32, Rydal Street, Leigh, January 10th, 1910,—Bird arrived safely, and gives every satisfaction. A splendid singer. P. Gibbon to W. Rudd.

WELL WORTH READING—YET NOTE, THEY ARE NOT MY WORDS.

1A, St. John's Street, Chichester, January 10th, 1910,—I received the Seifert Roller safely, and he just suits me to a T. His song is most beautifully mellow, not a harsh note in him. This is the case of the bird recommending the man, not swank on paper, as a lot do, alas, and then a wrong 'un, for you trust in paper talk, especially if you don't deposit. I got bitten finely last year by not depositing my cash, that's what makes a lot of would-be fanciers shy; but I always found you the same (genuine) and always up to your statements in fanciers' papers; full value every time. Well, sir, I will close with my best thanks to you. F. J. Rook to W. Rudd.

CONTEST SINGERS

Scifert Rollers of the highest excellence, brothers to my recent silver cup winners at Leeds, Wakefield and Bury this season; Schoolmasters and contest singers, 20/- to 60/- each; hens, 10/- each; every bird guaranteed bred by myself and wearing closed club ring; not imported hot-house plants that die off when you have had them a week or two.—Foulds, 213, Brunswick-st., near Owen's College, Manchester.

FOR YEARS PAST.

I have publicly invited intending purchasers of Rollers to have one of my Leipzig Rollers on a week's trial, and one from elsewhere at any higher price, on similar terms; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not a far better bird at lower price, return it to me, and have the whole of your money back. I am frequently publishing letters from persons who have done this and they tell me that my birds have beaten birds costing twice and even thrice the money elsewhere. I now have an enormous stock of pure Leipzig Rollers, all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, Nightingale jug-jug, bell harp and flute notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark chopping, or any other harsh notes whatever, price 6/- and 7/- each; special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, etc., 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a few special Scifert contest Rollers, fit to win contests immediately, 15/-, 17/6 and 21/- each. These contest birds are exceedingly soft and melodious, with lovely deep "round" rolls, etc., and are guaranteed of same strain, and bred by same man that won first prize of £60, with 6 of these birds, at Hamburg, on Nov. 21st last. Leipzig Roller hens 2/- each, 3/6 couple. I also have a large stock of Hartz cocks (often sold as Hartz Mountain Rollers), in full and vigorous song, day and gaslight, at 4/6 each, seven for 28/-; Hartz hens, 2/6 couple. These Hartz cocks are exceptionally loud, free songsters, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where a good loud singer is required. Special Roller singing cabinets, with folding doors, 2/6 each. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/6 each. The following letters are entirely unsolicited, and full name and address is given with each one, so that any sceptical person can make fullest enquiries as to my statement. "19, The Crescent, Worsley. Dec. 10th.—Sir,—I must say the Roller you sent me has far exceeded my expectations. He is a real good one, singing both day and gaslight, and what music. Yes, he is a gem, and I am more than satisfied.—Yours, C. Ridyard." "Pershore Road, Gt. Hampton, near Evesham.—Dec. 11.—Sir,—Thanks for Hartz cock you sent me a month ago; it is best songster I ever had. Thanking you for honest and prompt dealings.—Yours, Ernest White." "29, Clifford Road, West Stanley. Dec. 6th.—Sir,—Received Roller in splendid condition; this makes the seventh from you in 12 months. It is a champion songster; they have all given every satisfaction. Thanking you for prompt and honest dealings.—Yours, Wm. Roe." "6 Belle Vue Terrace, Penzance. Dec. 8th.—Sir,—Rollers to hand safely; many thanks for sending two such good birds; they are both singing now. It is a pleasure to deal with such an honest man.—Yours, A. Eddy." "Harness Stores, Bylleet. Dec. 2nd.—Sir,—Received three Schoolmasters, all in best of health. All these are singing grand, as I write this card. Thanking you for your selection.—Yonrs, F. Eyes." "22, Union Terrace, York. Dec. 2nd.—Sir,—Roller arrived safe; my friend is delighted with it, and I think it a beauty. I like your new style of sending them out.—Yours, H. Brough." "6 Derby Square, Preston, Lancs. Nov. 29th.—Sir,—Lelpzig Roller arrived safe, and is more than I expected for the money. He started singing before being unpacked, and will sing while I hold the cage in my hand.—Yours, J. Holmes." "Mountain, Pantygasseg, Pontypool. Nov. 30th.—Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller safe. He is singing all right. I give you credit as a packer.—Yours, G. Calder." "18, Henry Street, Hyde, Manchester. Nov. 28th.—Sir,—Allow me to thank you for your business methods. The Roller is singing splendid, as I write this, and his changes of song are a surprise to me, and all who hear him. I have heard birds that have cost three times the money that I would not exchange him for, and I have myself given more, and they were not a patch on the one you sent me.—Yours, J. Thorley." "15, Gordon Road, Finchley, London. Nov. 25th.—Sir,—Please send three Hartz cocks and box cage. The Hartz cocks I had from you last year still sing splendidly, and give every satisfaction.—Yours, W. Green." "51, York Street, Baker Street, London. Nov. 26th.—Sir,—Received the 4 birds yesterday, in good condition. The Hartz cock I am delighted with. He is a beauty. I have heard expensive Rollers that he would bear comparison with, and the Roller hens are fine birds, and would sell for double in any shop about here.—Yours, M. Hollins." Kindly note: All are safely and warmly packed, and sent on full week's trial, on receipt cash, or "Cage Birds" deposit system. I take all risks and refund cash promptly if every satisfaction not given. See British Bird column.

ERECT BELGIANS.

Champion Norwich or Yorkshire Songsters, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6. Cages 3d. extra in all cases, and all sent on one week's approval to any part of Great Britain. I pay all carriage back, and either refund your money in full, or exchange the bird, whichever you prefer. This seems to me straight sailing enough for any reasonable person to be satisfied with.

To Beginners.
If you cannot afford a big price, send for a pair of my correctly matched Norwich at 8/6 or 9/6; and now note this.—In most cases where you send for pairs at this price, you are sent two buffs, often both marked birds—this is where you do not get what is required—well, I send you one marked, and one clear, one buff, and the other yellow. Travelling cage 3d. extra. Then for 3/6 I will send you a Double Breeding Cage, fitted with everything complete, for an immediate start. Total for Birds and Cage 12/3 for 8/6 birds, or 13/3 for 9/6 birds. But I would strongly recommend you to have my Cage No. 100; it has sand drawers, and is fitted with sanitary furniture throughout, and the price is only 5/-.

My special matched pairs of prize bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Lancashires, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-; Cinnamons, 8/6, 9/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Lizards, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6.

Easy Payments by joining my Original Bird Club.

The first ever brought to the notice of fanciers; the first payment system, with its many objections, is double as old as some of those who claim so much for it. To use an old saying, it is as "old as the hills," but has neither their beauty nor usefulness.

MIDLAND COUNTIES BIRD BENEVOLENT AND D.S.

After one of the most successful year's working in the history of the society with Skylark singing contests, the members are calling a special general meeting this Friday, January 14th, to consider the formation of a section for Canaries, etc., which should prove a great success. The society have had a considerable amount of assitance offered them by some of the well-known Midland fanciers, and fanciers generally cannot do better than give this meeting their support, which is called for 8.15 p.m. Will fanciers please note?—W. MARTIN, Sec.

HARTLEPOOLS C.B.S.

Annual meeting held at headquarters, the Y.M.C.A., Whitby-street, W. Hartlepool, January 5th. Mr. J. W. Papple, the hon. sec., gave a brief account of the past year's work, and was pleased to state that never in the history of the society was there such a credit balance as that with which they started the present year, notwithstanding the dire failure of the open show in October last. When one remembered that the society were the pioneers of the extended classification of Yorkshires in the North of England, it was lamentable to see such small numbers. However, with prompt payment of prize money, and close attention to management, they still hoped to win the patronage of exhibitors. The encouragement they had received from Mr. Nicholson, of Stockton-on-Tees, gladdened his heart. The following resolution was carried with acclamation:—"That having regard to the great kindness and assistance shown us by Mr. Nicholson, and the whole-hearted manner in which he supports the cage bird Fancy, we hereby have great pleasure in electing him the first hon. life member of the Hartlepools C.B.S." October 29th was fixed for our open show. Votes of thanks to the auditors (Messrs. Ronald and Williams), the chairman (Mr. I. Robinson), and the secretary (Mr. J. W. Papple), having been passed, the election of officers for the ensuing year—with Sir Christopher Furness a president—concluded a most helpful and enthusiastic meetiug.—ERNEST WOODHEAD, Hon. Sec., 38, St. Paul's-road, W. Hartlepool.

Subscriptions, 4s. per bird per annum (members not to enter more than two birds).—G. ROSTRON and T. SLATER, Secs., Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, Blackburn.

Canary. Mr. R. Hunter (Ormskirk) was appointed judge. The same gentleman, who is a fancier with 30 years' experience, kindly promised to give his reminiscences on the different varieties of cage birds at the April meeting.—T. H. TIFFEN, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, the "Feathers," Great Chapel Street, Westminster, Dec. 30th. Present: Messrs. Trower (in the chair), Maxwell, Newley, Dewhurst, Cooper, Askew, Wyse, Crabb, Dobson, Plumbridge, and Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. A letter was read from Birmingham show. It was proposed and carried that under the circumstances points gained by members at Birmingham show count for the club cups and medals. Correspondence was read that had passed between Mr. Ramsden and the secretaries. It was proposed and carried that Messrs. Crabb and Cooper should interview Mr. Ramsden to see if matters could be arranged respecting the British and reserve judge at the Crystal Palace show. The secretaries handed round a silver medal presented to the club by the Toronto C.B.S.; it was very much admired. It was proposed and carried that this club acknowledge receipt of same, and forward in exchange two of the club's silver medals. The following new members were elected: Messrs. H. J. Hawes (Forest Gate), M. Preston (onoreditch), C. A. Tyson (Sloane Street), and H. J. Hireson (Southall). A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

STOCKSBRIDGE AND DIS. C.B.S.

The 1st annual general meeting was held on Jan. 1st, Mr. Thos. Kaye in the chair. The principal business was the reading of the balance sheet for the year and election of officers for 1910. The Rev. W. C. Edgington, M.A., was re-elected president, and Mr. T. E. Battye was added to the list of vice-presidents. Mr. Thos. Kaye was re-elected chairman. Owing to the resignation of the secretary (Mr. Harry E. Wilkinson), Mr. Fred Elliott was appointed hon. secretary and treasurer, with twelve members to form a committee, by whom the future business of the society will be transacted. The special prizes given for most points gained by nominated birds at the two shows held, were won by:—1st prize, Mr. Alf. Jarvis (22 points), 18/-; 2nd prize, Messrs. Micklethwaite and Wormleighton (11 points), 9/-; 3rd prize, Mr. Howe (9 points), 3/-. Mr. Alf. Jarvis also won special prize (pair of Yorkshire stock birds) given by Mr. H. E. Wilkinson for most points gained in Yorkshire and Norwich classes. Mr. R. Howe won silver medal for washing competition, held in Nov. The balance sheet showed a balance in hand of 10/5, which is considered satisfactory on the first year's working. Six members' shows are to be held during the current year—1 table and 1 pair show, 2 first feather shows, and 2 winter shows An excellent syllabus was prepared, including papers, lectures, a washing exhibition and competition, etc. Six new members were admitted, which brings the total membership up to 32. A vote of thanks to the retiring secretary for his past services, and to the chairman, brought a most business-like meeting to a close.—FRED. ELLIOTT, Hon. Sec.

Twitterings.

Our show was a grand success, thanks to your paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. Bole, hon. secretary of the Kingswood Show.

Will secretaries kindly note that I have changed my address to 8, Bellfield Avenue, Musselburgh, writes Mr. James Smeaton.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. T. L. Hancocks, hon. secretary of the Crewe O.S., to 61, Hungerford Road, Crewe.

The Ilkeston C.B.S. have decided to hold their next open show on November 26th and 28th, 1910. Will secretaries please note?—THOS. SMITH, secretary.

At our recent show, competition was confined to members, but we hope to hold an open show shortly, writes Mr. J. Lindsay Deas, hon. secretary, Wembley F.A.

Report of Dalbeattie Show credits Hunter with winning third prize in the British Goldfinch class, whereas I was the winner, writes Mr. James McNeillie (Maxwelltown).

We are extending entries until Monday, January 17th, write Messrs. Elviss and Mouncy, the hon. secretaries of the Spalding Show, which is being held on January 20th.

Allow me to offer my best congratulations on the ever increasing vitality of CAGE BIRDS, the fanciers' "Vade mecum," which we could not do without now.—JAMES F. DEWAR (Edinburgh).

Our club is in a very flourishing condition, writes Mr. J. Dixon, hon. secretary of the Choppington and Dis. C.B.S., and there is promise of a large number of new members for the next season.

At the recent Scottish National Show, writes Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart), it was a Snow Bunting that I was 3rd with, and not a Blackheaded; the latter stood 4th, shown by Mr. T. Erskine (not Henderson).

A telegram from Mr. D. John, secretary of Llanelly Show, to be held on January 18th, states that entries are short, and that the entries closing date has been extended to Sunday's first post, January 16th.

I have never missed your valuable guide (CAGE BIRDS) this six years weekly, and your Christmas number was a grand success. I always look for the end of each week to get your paper. It is a grand guide.—CHARLES QUINN.

I was pleased to read in CAGE BIRDS issue of January 1st, Mr. A. J. Holloway's article on "How I Rear and Tame my Cage-bred Budgerigars." As I am a beginner it has taught me something, and I thank Mr. Holloway for it.—A READER.

The Pair Show mentioned in my report is postponed from January 19th until January 26th, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. secretary of the Northern Y.C.C. I trust the members will bring out their best then for Mr. Maddison to judge.

In the results of the O.N.P.C. Competitions given in CAGE BIRDS last week, the winner of Mr. Ramsden's special should have been given as Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles, instead of Mr. H. Snowden (novice section).—O. MITCHELL, hon. secretary.

I have again taken over the duties of secretary to the Hartlepools C.B.S., owing to the intention of Mr. J. W. Papple to proceed abroad. Will those sending communciations to the society please address them to me?—ERNEST WOODHEAD, 38, St. Paul's Road, West Hartlepool.

My letter of last week, writes Mr. E. S. Lugg (Lewisham), may read somewhat misleading, for Messrs. Spillers and Bakers, Ltd. have catered for the cage bird Fancy for a number of years with their various mixtures, so that our London extension is not altogther a new departure.

Miss J. M. Grimes (St. Leonard's-on-Sea) writes to thank CAGE BIRDS for the splendid volume she received as a prize from the Hastings and St. Leonard's Bird Show. Miss Grimes has taken CAGE BIRDS for some time now, and finds it the most useful and interesting of any bird journal she has had.

The Guisborough and District "Priory" C.B.S. Annual Show held on New Year's day, in Chaloner Hall, was opened by Miss Chaloner, as Mrs. Chaloner was unable to do so through ill health, and proved a success by the kind help of both Mrs. and Miss Chaloner, and the members.—R. MAYS, hon. secretary.

Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show exhibitors having surplus stock should note the limit and stock classes provided at this show. There is an ever increasing demand at the Palace Show for decent birds at moderate prices. Entries close Saturday, January 22nd. No extension.—J. W. Ramsden, show manager.—(ADVT.)

We are holding a members' show at the White Swan, Market Place, on January 15th, writes Mr. J. E. Wood, secretary, Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. The classification is a good one, and the show will be well worth going to see. Open at 2.30 p.m., admission free. We extend a hearty invitation to all fanciers.

OBITUARY.

Mr. T. TURNER (Clitheroe).

It is with great regret that I have to report the death of Mr. T. Turner, the chairman of our society, on December 31st, in his 32nd year, writes Mr. R. Lambert, secretary, Clitheroe C.B.S. He had been very successful during the show seasons of 1908 and '9 with his birds, and much sympathy is felt for his bereaved wife and four young children.

For the purposes of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL we shall be glad to know in the course of the next few days the full addresses of the secretaries of the following societies: Wallsend Linnet S.C., Cannock and Dis. C.B.S.; Dawley and Dis. C.B.S.; Hightown Junior C.B.S.; King's Head B.B. and M.C.; Marazion and Western Dis. B.F.A.; Raunds and Dis. F.S.

I have taken over the secretaryship of the Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S., and hope, with the assistance of the members, to increase the membership and interest in the Fancy in the district. I hope all members will subscribe to your valuable paper, in which all meetings will be announced.—FREDK. RACKHAM, hon. secretary, 162, London Road, South Lowestoft.

"Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—for December contains articles by Mr. E. J. Brook (on the nesting of the Black Lory), H. Gray, M.R.C.V.S. (on Diseases of Birds), F. Howe (on the Wryneck), H. Goodchild, W. T. Page, and others, besides a goodly array of interesting notes and an index to the contents of the journal for the past twelve months.

Up to time of writing entries do not average one per class, and as this does not appear to be very promising, my committee think it wise to make an appeal through CAGE BIRDS. We have therefore decided to extend the date of closing to first post Monday morning, January 17th. We trust fanciers will respond and give us a bumping entry.—J. GRIFFITHS, secretary, Trodegar and Dis. F. and F.F.S.

The January issue of "British Birds" (one shilling net, Witherby and Co.), is again an interesting number, and includes, among others, articles on Ravens and Crows (by Mr. F. Heatherley, F.R.C.S.), and "Sequence of Plumages in British Birds—The Missel-Thrush Song-Thrush, Redwing, and Fieldfaro" (by Mr. C. B. Ticehurst, M.A., M.B.O.U., etc.), besides many notes and numerous excellent illustrations.

There was an error in Carlisle Show catalogue. In the yellow green class, Mr. Wilson was credited with 1st, whereas I won that, and have received prize money and cards. I have taken your paper, CAGE BIRDS, regularly for years. My bird has been in the cards every time out, and is only a very young one—h.c. Manchester, v.h.c. Liverpool, 1st Sale, 4th Altrincham, which I think not so bad.—S. M. NELSON (Carlisle).

An Offer to be Taken.

A firm of the very highest repute in the bird-seed trade is Messrs. Jas. Carter and Co. (the King's seedsmen), of 237 and 238, High Holborn, London, W.C.; for quality and purity their goods have gained the warm commendations of many famous bird-keepers, and it is universally acknowledged that for general excellence they are rarely equalled. Carter's special bird seeds (in packets), Parrot food, and grit sand should be enquired for at all stores and seed shops; they will please you. Readers who buy their seeds in bulk should send to the address given above for free samples and prices of the choice German summer rape, Spanish Canary, hemp, and other seeds specially imported by Messrs. Carter, which this firm will forward to readers who mention CAGE BIRDS when writing to them. Higher-class seeds cannot be obtained.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

The vitality of the cage bird cult in general and of CAGE BIRDS in particular is splendidly shown by this the eighth birthday anniversary number of the paper. It is, we may point out, issued at a time of political stress, and at a moment when the bird trade is in none too active a state owing to various causes which need not be here referred to. All records are broken with it and broken in the handsomest fashion. The total of advertisements exceeds by many hundreds the highest figure ever reached in the paper's history; the value given to readers from the instructive and artistic standpoints was never greater. Viewed from any angle, we believe this number to be thoroughly representative of the great and important industry the bird "Fancy" in this country has grown into. Exactly what part our once little journal has played in the progress of the love for birds its readers can best judge, but it will not be inopportune for us to record at such a moment as this our heartfelt indebtedness to the bird-keeping community as a body for their splendid recognition of such efforts in its behalf as we and our staff have been able to make. For the many and invaluable services rendered us by readers of all ranks and classes, we have frequently expressed our thanks, but no words of ours could sufficiently convey the deep sense of gratitude with which we review the work of the past or the hopefulness with which we view the future. We never have yet rested on our oars, and we do not now propose to do so. There is plenty to do, and much more to accomplish, but with our readers' aid it will be done. To them we appeal; for them we strive. By them are we content to be judged.

The members of the Clitheroe and Dis. C.B.S., writes the secretary, Mr. R. Lambert (21, George Street, Clitheroe), have decided to promote a draw for Mrs. Turner (the widow of our late chairman), and the members have given a dozen or more birds to be drawn for. If any secretaries of other societies will assist in the selling of tickets, we shall be much obliged.

I have to tender you my best thanks for notifying in "Twitterings" my resignation from the L.C.B.A., also for your kindly remarks. It is quite true that I have at all times endeavoured to promote the interests of the society of which I have been a member many years, but I cannot claim to have been one of the founders. My severance will in no way affect the friendly relationship that exists between myself and the vast majority of the members. What small meed of notoriety may have come my way I have neither sought nor bought. Primarily, I keep birds for my amusement, and should they be the innocent cause of my getting more annoyance than amusement, which has been the case of late, I shall have to cut their life-long acquaintance, and that in no undecided fashion. I should have sent you this letter last week, but was away on the Continent on business, having received a cable during the Christmas holidays, and leaving immediately after same.

"Cage Birds" 1910 Annual.

Readers must not overlook the fact that advertisements for "Cage Birds 1910 Annual" should reach us not later than Tuesday next, January 18th. Do not lose this opportunity of securing world-wide publicity for a whole year at an extremely low cost; remember that advertisers in the past have been astonished and pleased with the business their announcements secured for them. We also take this opportunity to remind secretaries that January 20th is the last date for receiving particulars of their clubs for insertion in the Directory to the Cage Bird Societies.

A Gentle Reminder.

Our Literary Competition up to the time of penning these lines has not drawn anything like a good response from bird-keepers. We trust this will be remedied before the date of closing (January 24th). There must be hundreds amongst our more-or-less "seasoned" readers who can relate their experiences in the hobby—experiences that will help the beginner when negotiating the stony path that leads to success. There should be no other incentive needed to get them to sit down and write their essays. What can transcend the lending of a helping hand to those in need of it? But here, all who compete have a chance of sharing in nine guineas worth of prizes—and a chance which is fair to everyone, as a perusal of the rules given on another page this week will at once show. Literary ability is not all that is required, for mistakes in grammar and spelling will not count against any competitor, as it is information based upon practical experience that the judges will be looking for, and we quite recognise that this and scholarly ability do not necessarily go hand in hand. There is still plenty of time to compete if the matter is taken up now.

Our Christmas Competitions.

We hope in our next issue to announce the results of our Christmas "Conundrum" and "Painting" Competitions. Remember that our "Literary Competition" closes on Jan. 24 next.

A Study in Yorkshire Canaries.

Specially written round Mr. Norman's Coloured Plate

By F. ARMSTRONG.

It affords me the greatest pleasure to be invited to undertake to write an article on what I beg to term "The Marked Yorkshire Bird." This term will include both the "Cinnamon and Green-Marked Yorkshire" (so ably illustrated in the plate presented along with the Birthday Number of our premier cage bird journal). I will endeavour, as far as possible, to make the article as interesting and as clear as I can.

I will endeavour to explain first some of the terms used in the "Yorkshire Fancy." Some of them I had a little difficulty in understanding, especially during my early days in this fascinating hobby. The terms "ticked," "foul-marked," "evenly and unevenly marked," caused me no end of trouble—to understand where one ended and the other began; but thanks to the kindness of such prominent judges and fanciers as Messrs. Mundell, Battye, Broadley, Wilman, and others, I was at last able to overcome this difficulty.

The Term "Ticked" Tackled.

I propose to take the terms in the order above given. First, the term "ticked"; many times have I heard the question asked and discussed in the valuable columns of CAGE BIRDS: "What is a ticked bird?" A "ticked bird" is one having dark feathers on thighs, rump, or any part of an otherwise clear body; it may also have a mark on one eye, wing or tail, but not more than one such technical mark, separately or in addition to any other variegation on its body. These should be judged according to the scale for "clear" birds. In the Cinnamon-ticked Yorkshire classes the presence of dark feathers on the thighs and underflue of a bird cannot well be admitted, because variegation in this variety in some form or other is the object aimed at; therefore, it is necessary that a well-defined Cinnamon mark or tick must be clearly discernible.

I am sorry to say that this has not always been strictly adhered to, which led to the "dropping" of the ticked bird for a season or two.

Again, the point arises, "What about the so-called 'invisible tick'?" This term is a misnomer, as it is impossible to have a tick which is invisible. I take it it is a mark which it is exceedingly difficult to find, being on the underside of the flights, or on parts of the body covered by the flights or long feathers. These birds, in my humble estimation, ought to compete in the clear classes, with deduction of points for the same, as in the case of discoloured beak, legs, or feet, on an otherwise clear-bodied bird in the clear classes. The tick, in my humble estimation, should be distinct, and should not require the birds being handled in order than one may discover it, or even an exhibitor's notification where the tick is to be located. Another important reason is that it might be possible to exhibit it as a ticked bird at one show and clear at another. There would then be no temptation for a fancier to be dishonest.

"Technical Marks" Simplified.

Perhaps I had better explain here what is meant by "technical marks," as I find so many do not understand what is meant. Technical marks are those found only on the eyes, wings and tail. A cap-marked bird whose cap extends to, or even below, its eyes, or a whole dark tailed bird does not possess two technical marks. The eye markings must be separate, and the tail marked on both sides to constitute technical marks. I give this because I have found novices making this mistake this season.

There is a vast difference between what we in the National Green-marked Yorkshire Canary Club and the Green Canary Club term a "foul-marked bird." A foul-marked bird is one which has a splashed or marked breast. It must also have two or more technical marks before being allowed to compete in classes where the N.G.M.Y.C.C. patronage is given. Even then points are deducted for this foul-mark. In fact, many of our judges ignore these birds entirely, or nearly so, no matter however good their other Yorkshire properties may be. The foul-green, according to the Green Canary Club, is a bird possessing one or more light-coloured (grey) feathers in either wings or tail, or both. This is clearly demonstrated by CAGE BIRDS' artist in the plate.

The Highest Form of Variegation.

An "evenly-marked bird" has the highest form of variegation; it is, therefore, desirable that the object of breeders should be to try for the nearest approach to evenness in markings, whilst still retaining all the essential Yorkshire qualities in their birds. So that while form and approximate excellence in markings will count above equally good form and merely irregular variegation, superior form will count above anything. An evenly-marked bird must be what is termed "four-pointed" (both wings and both eyes, as is so ably illustrated in the plate), or "six-pointed" (both eyes, both wings and both sides of the tail). The more precise the markings the better; those on the eyes should go round like the rims of a pair of spectacles. The outer, long flight feathers (in the Green or Cinnamon) should be light, and the short flight feathers green or cinnamon, according to the variety.

This bird has been almost entirely neglected for a long period in the Yorkshire variety, whilst in the Border Fancy it is exceedingly strong, and may be bred with a fair degree of certainty. The N.G.M.Y.C.C. has now included the even-green-marked in its classification, so that breeders have some encouragement to try to breed what I believe to be the beau ideal of the Yorkshire family, and a bird which takes premier position over the Clear Yellow.

"Evenly-Marked" Scale of Points.

I give also the scale of points, or standards.

MARKINGS: Eyes, for neatness and regularity of outline and for distinctiveness, 25 points; wings for exactness, decreasing in value as the marking extends beyond the secondary flights, 15 points; tail for exactness, 5; making 45 points. SHAPE AND POSITION: For symmetrical proportions, fair size, and erect carriage, 30 points. FEATHER: For short, compact body feather, and close carriage of wings and tail, 15 points; COLOUR: Pure body colour and brilliance of marking, 5 points. CONDITION: Specially for sound feather, 5 points; TOTAL, 100 points.

An "unevenly marked Yorkshire" (Green or Cinnamon) may have two, three or five technical marks on eyes, wings, or tail; separately or in addition to any other variegation on its body. A bird with four or six marks, if variegated on the head or body, is also considered an unevenly-marked bird. Ticked or unevenly-marked birds have also to be judged according to clear bird scale, unless the unevenly-marked have special classes; then they are judged according to the standard or scale provided for Yorkshire cinnamon-marked birds.

This grouping of clears, ticked, and unevenly-marked birds I consider an injustice to the latter, especially if he is to have points deducted as per scale. It is far more difficult to breed an exceedingly good, green-marked bird possessing the type and quality than either a clear or ticked bird, as the stock required for breeding the same is difficult to get or breed at present. I am trusting, now that encouragement is given to breed this beautiful specimen of Canarydom, and that stock will be bred to ensure a fair degree of certainty in its production.

"Unevenly-marked" Scale of Points.

I also include here a scale of points or standard for both the green and cinnamon-unevenly-marked Yorkshire (type and length as for other Yorkshire varieties).

SHAPE: Head, small and round, skull narrow, 5 points; neck, moderately long, straight, 5 points; shoulders, narrow, rounded, and well filled, 5 points; back, long, straight, and well filled in, wings long and evenly carried, 5 points; breast, round and smooth, the body long and gradually tapering to a neat waist, 5 points; legs, long, without being stilty, thighs well clothed, 5 points; tail long, straight and closely folded, 5 points; making 35 points. FEATHER: Short, close, and tight, for compactness of body feather, and close carriage of wings and tail, 15 points. POSITION: Attitude erect, with fearless carriage, head, neck, back and tail in a straight line, 20 points. MARKINGS: For approximate excellence in markings and nearest approach to evenness, 15 points. COLOUR: Pure body and brilliance of markings, 5 points. CONDITION: Health, cleanliness, and sound feather, 10 points; TOTAL, 100 points.

I trust the two scales included will be of use to many of my fellow-fanciers, as I feel certain very few of the scales are in existence, and only in the possession of the older body of fanciers. The explanation of the terms I have given are the standard ones, which I have tried to make as clear and precise as possible.

The Uses of the Different Birds.

I will now endeavour, as far as I can, to give my own personal experience of the uses of these different birds in my breeding-room. Perhaps the experiences of some of my readers may differ more or less in detail, but it is only by the free interchange of these experiences that knowledge is gained, and the Fancy we have at heart progresses.

My experience in the breeding of the Yorkshire bird has now extended over a period of thirteen years, and still I find I have much to learn; the more I study the less I feel to know. A hobby, whatever it may be, to be fascinating must consist of numerous experiments with the idea of improving it. If we had no failures or disappointments the pleasure which success brings would not be half so great.

In this article I am only dealing with the uses of the marked bird (so that type, size, and quality must be understood), and how I utilise it. After numerous experiments I have come to the conclusion that the best method by which to obtain a clear bird with abundance of colour is by the use of a green ticked bird, not a cinnamon ticked one. I mate a good yellow ticked cock with a smart clear buff hen; then I have a fairly good chance of obtaining what I am aiming at, viz., "colour." In nearly every case there is a preponderance of ticked birds in the progeny. The pairing of clear birds results in loss of colour, if nothing less.

I might here say I have never gone direct to the self or foul green to obtain my colour, being content to introduce the green blood through the medium of a heavily-variegated bird.

Our Calendar.

Two Himalayan Gems.

By FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "Garden and Aviary Birds in India," etc.

India may fairly claim to have been the first country to introduce startling novelties into aviculture; we have all heard of Solomon's peacocks, and in the latter ages the Indian Green Parrakeets delighted the Roman fanciers, while, so vast and varied an assortment are the Indian birds, that new species even yet arrive as pleasant surprises. Since leaving India, about seven years ago, I have seen more than one kind of Indian bird imported here which I never saw for sale out there. The two lovely birds illustrated upon CAGE BIRDS charming Calendar, however, were quite familiar to me in India, as small numbers of both were regularly brought down from the Himalayas every winter, the only season at which these mountain birds were procurable in Calcutta, for the hill races do not like the hot season in the plains any more than we Europeans do; besides which, they no doubt have their crops to look after all summer.

The two birds of which I am about to speak—the Silver-cared Mesia and Rufous-bellied Niltava—were, like many others, brought down in broad square flat cages of split bamboo, each divided into about a dozen small compartments perhaps eight inches square, with one bird in each of these. The whole cage, top, sides and floor, was made of wicker bars, with inside feeding and drinking cups of earthenware, and the birds used to arrive clean and in show condition.

Relatives and Rivals.

The Silver-eared Mesia (Mesia argentauris) is a very near relative of the familiar Pekin Robin, and, to many people's minds, excels it in beauty, its colours being more striking and varied, while its shape is more slender and elegant. In fact, I have heard people say about a specimen which I had in India that it was the prettiest bird they had ever seen. The plumage of the Mesia is, however, inferior in quality to that of its common relative, being more open in texture, and not of that close exquisite silkiness which is so admirable in the Pekin. In the matter of sex difference, however, the Mesia has a distinct advantage, for the hen, though equally beautiful with the cock, and at first sight indistinguishable may be at once known by having the tail-coverts, both upper and under, cinnamon instead of scarlet. The young are described as lacking the black on the head, but the only fledgling I ever saw had it, though the whole plumage was very dull, and the bird looked as much like a cock Blackcap as one of the species.

This specimen was reared in Mr. R. Phillipps' aviary, but perished by accident just before it was full grown, and the like fate befell a nest they had at the Zoo. Before long, however, someone will rear this species, as it seems more ready to breed than almost any other soft-billed bird, and very few have been over here to be experimented with.

In their wild haunts in the Himalayas, the birds build in bushes, constructing a cup-shaped nest of dry leaves and moss—a very abundant commodity there—and lining it with fine roots of a light colour. In this respect it differs markedly from the Pekin Robin, whose nest, otherwise similar, is lined with dark materal. The eggs hardly differ from those of that bird, being pale green scantily speckled with rusty, the set is three or four.

The first specimen of this bird ever seen in England was sent by Mr. E. W. Harper to the Zoo, and throve well there for several years; the few others that have been imported have shown themselves equally hardy, and some have done well on the show bench. The bird should be treated like the Pekin Robin, and should, if a single specimen, have one of these birds as a companion, as it is very sociable. From what I have seen of the species, it seems to keep the beauty of its colours better indoors than in an outdoor aviary.

A Glorious Flycatcher.

The Rufous-bellied Niltava (Niltava sundara) is, if anything, a more beautiful bird than the Mesia; no brush can do justice to the enamelled richness of the lighter shades of blue which adorn its plumage, and recall the hues of the Tanagers and Kingfishers. There is, however, in this species a very marked sex-difference, the hen, of which, by the way, I have never seen a living specimen, being of a plain uniform brown, only relieved by a spot of turquoise blue on each side of the neck. This bird is more of a fruit-eater than are Flycatchers generally, and so will be found rather easier to keep, though less hardy than the Mesia. In the Himalayas its nesting-habits appear to be not unlike those of our Spotted Flycatcher, except that it builds nearer the ground; its open nest of moss, lined with fibres or fur, being found in crevices of rocks, or banks, or at the roots of trees.

Although this species reached the Calcutta bird-dealers in about equal numbers with the Mesia, I have seen few specimens over here, one being the beautiful male exhibited by Mr. Russell Humphreys, so I have no more to say about it, except to recommend it to all aviculturists as a gem of the first water. The Germans seem to get hold of it oftener than we do, as is the case nowadays with so many of these choice oriental soft-bills.

In conclusion, I would point out that it could be possible for any aviculturist who had the opportunity to go out to India between October and March to bring home some of these and other good Himalayan soft-bills. He would find hotels not only at Calcutta, but at Kurseong and Darjeeling in the nearer hills; probably he would not need to go so high as the latter place, as in winter those birds would be found lower down the hills. He should take with him plenty of meal-worms, dried flies, and dried ants' eggs; as bread, eggs, and meat would be readily obtainable, it would not be necessary to take ready-made food, and good cages would be obtainable in Calcutta.

The remainder of the birds portrayed will require no introduction to our readers. The Blackbird, so charmingly depicted by Mr. G. Rankin, in the top left-hand panel, is a general favourite, his bold manner, striking appearance and highly melodious song captivating the hearts of all who love the birds of our countryside. Mr. Norman's beautiful panel in the top right-hand corner shows us a grand specimen of the popular Norwich Plainhead (about which some prominent breeders and exhibitors have something to say in this issue); also a fine example of the Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid. Mr. Goodchild's characteristically artistic and life-like panel of the Mesia and Niltava completes what we venture to hope will be a much-appreciated calendar, one which will find a place upon the walls of every bird-lover's home.

A Group of Gems from Foreign Climes.

Specially written round Mr. Goodchild's Coloured Plate.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

As a sort of introduction, I may state that I have no intention of writing a monograph on the beautiful species depicted on Mr. Goodchild's exquisite drawing, but rather to describe their demeanour under cage and aviary life. It must not be taken for granted because the birds are so charmingly portrayed together on our plate that they can be so kept in captivity, not even in the largest outdoor aviary; the Gold-fronted Green Bulbul, Orange Hangnest, and Blue-winged Siva must not be associated with birds smaller or weaker than themselves, or ultimate disaster will be the result.

What Can be Done?

An indication of what may be done in the way of keeping birds together will be gathered if I state that in a comparatively small garden aviary I have kept the Plumbous Redstart, Blue, Maroon, Scarlet, and Superb Tanagers successfully, with an admixture of the small Ornamental Finches. Nevertheless, individuals must be studied, and if a bird shows any inclination to run "amok," it must be put in "durance vile" (that is, caged separately) for a time. After a while he may be turned into the aviary again—but I must lay stress upon this point, that any aviculturist who keeps a mixed community of birds together in one aviary, must keep them under watchful observance and remove, at any rate for a time, any individual becoming abnormally pugnacious. In fact, the aviculturist who wishes to be successful, whether he keeps his birds in cages or aviaries, must study them as individuals in the first place, and as a community in a secondary sense.

The plate specially appeals to me, as several of the studies were made from my birds, while the background, beautiful as it is, does not do justice to the fine, natural flight, 50 by 50 feet of my esteemed friend and fellow aviculturist, Mr. Willford, of the Isle of Wight.

The same beautiful effect is possible for one and all, and the course of procedure to attain such, very simple. The main point to keep in view is to strictly limit your ardour, and only keep a given number of birds in a given space—seed-eaters are more destructive to plant life than either the insectivorous or frugivorous species—not more than one pair should be kept to each square foot of the ground area. In the aviary named the plant life consists of common laurel, spruce, larch, box, hops, Virginian Creeper, while nasturtiums and Michaelmas daisies are used for ornamental effect. The ground area is a well-kept lawn, while along one side runs a bank of coarse growing grasses and weeds. The shed in the plate indicates the arrangements for night quarters, dry space for food hopper, etc.; the structure itself is merely light wood framing to carry half-inch mesh wire-netting.

Now a word as to cages. I prefer the semi-box type to any other; that is, the front and half the top open wirework and twigs of branches for perches.

It will save needless repetition if a paragraph is here given to the dietary of the species depicted on our plate. Milk sop, soft food, ripe fruit, sponge cake, and live insects, will cover the needs of the species portrayed. In the aviary it will be sufficient to provide the foods named and leave the birds to help themselves; but when they are kept in cages, there is great need for individual study, as though the range of diet may be the same, even with birds of the same species, owing to variable demeanour, it must be modified—one will even refuse mealworms, another soft food, and again another will practically subsist on ripe fruit; while a very important point is, that a quiet sedative bird cannot have so liberal a diet as one that is active and vivacious all the day, for individuals of the same species vary even to this extent. In the winter our mainstay is the mealworm, but in the summer give the birds as much variety as you can obtain. A good way to procure such is to take a stout butterfly net and draw it through long grass, in the hedgerows, etc., according to convenience, and empty it into the aviary, while almost any insect, larvæ or pupæ to be found in the garden will send our aviary pets almost wild with delight, and tend to their general well being.

From India's Coral Strand.

The Gold-fronted Green Bulbul (Chloropsis aurifrons). If all the laudatory adjectives in the English language were launched at this exquisite gem from India's coral strand, it would not over-rate its charms or exaggerate its beauty or demeanour, whether as a pet bird in a roomy cage, or as an inhabitant of an aviary containing inhabitants not weaker than itself. I shall make these remarks more or less a personal narrative of my bird, whose portrait adorns the coloured plate.

In the winter he occupies a cage 33 by 18 by 30 inches high, while during the summer months he enjoys, with about twenty or thirty (Parrakeets, Sibias, Ouzels, Cardinals, Rosy Pastors, etc.) the liberty of an outdoor aviary about 13 by 10 by 6 feet high. In the winter in his cage he seems perfectly happy, and if the door be opened will alight on the hand for a few mealworms or to suck a grape dry. Interesting and beautiful as it is under these conditions, it is in the summer time that I enjoy it most. How exquisite it is on the wing: and how tame and confiding! The difficulty is to get into the aviary without the bird coming out; not that this would matter, for it would go into the aviary again on one's shoulder; but the danger in suburban London is cats! With us it indeed is:

Cats to the front of us!
Cats to the right of us! Cats to the left of us!
And Cats to the rear of us!!

This is our woe and tribulation, and it stands in the way of our developing the homing traits of our birds. When in the aviary the bird is all over one's person, eating mealworms or fruit from the hands, even suffering itself to be handled; and it will lie on its back in the hand in no apparent hurry to right itself, and then it merely goes to the perch or on the hand or shoulder, and does not fly away. These traits sometimes lead to their being over-fed, becoming inordinately fat; and in such condition they fall an easy prey to disease or sudden death. Therefore, observation must be kept, and at the first sign of undue obesity, a few doses of Dinneford's magnesia should be administered, and the more nourishing part of its dietary lessened.

To its other charms must be added that of song. If this is not very connected, the notes are full and rich; it also possesses the power of mimicry in a very marked degree, copying the songs of other birds even the harsh scream of a Conure or Cockatiel.

Before passing on to other species I feel I ought to just quote the distinctions between the Gold-fronted (C. aurifrons) and the Malabar (C. malabarica). The former has a blue throat as well as moustachial streaks, while the latter has only the moustachial streaks blue. The throat right up to the base of the lower mandible is black. When my specimen first came to hand there was no blue discernible upon the middle of the throat, but now it is fully adult, it is distinctly blue, and therefore, to my great disappointment aurifrons and not malabarica, the rarer species as I had hoped.

A Starling-like Beauty.

Orange or Jamaican Hangnest (Icterus jamaicaii).—Again an exquisite species, similar to a Starling as to form. As to colour, with the plate before us, it is almost waste of space to dilate upon its beauty. It also possesses the true Starling characteristics of digging its bill closed into its food and then opening it out. In this instance, also, I shall practically confine my remarks to a narrative of a single bird, viz., George of the Zoo, now alas "departed," and much missed by many—merely remarking that I have not had outdoor accommodation for my Hangnests. Though tame and taking food from the hand, they have never been encouraged to come out of their enclosure (4½ by 2¼ by 4ft. high) in my greenhouse bird room. At the present time but one survives out of the trio of a few years ago.

For several years I enjoyed the company of George during my numerous walks through the Western Aviary at the Zoo, and his absence is now much missed. He was absolutely fearless. He was very fond of exploring my person, while he has sadly marred the surface of more than one hat. Yet he was such interesting company that I never missed paying him a visit during my almost weekly attendances at the Gardens. I may be pardoned, perhaps, relating one of his most interesting tricks. If a slide match-box was given him, he would insert the point of his beak in one end, open it, thereby prising the box open. But he did not always find the succulent mealworm he had been taught to expect. You could grip him round the body, in fact, literally maul (if my readers will pardon an almost vulgar expression) him, and he seemed to enjoy it; in fact, when thrown off on leaving his enclosure, he would fly straight back to you—practically asking for more. With all this, he enjoyed a lengthy life among his numerous admirers.

This is a record of the tamest Hangnest I ever came across—in either a large aviary or a cage. If time can only be given to them, the process of taming is not difficult—the birds will face almost anything for a mealworm, and soon become fearless with those they know. In a room they should be trained to come out of their cage; they can always be enticed back again by putting a mealworm in the cage, and in a comparatively short time they will freely come on to your person and take tit-bits from your fingers. For cage, all that is required to keep them fit is a roomy one, cleanliness, and food (as already stated) supplied fresh daily. A fly round the room as convenience permits will be a great help towards keeping them in the very finest condition. This species, too, has more than average merit as a songster, though the song is not a very sustained one.

One of the Hardiest.

The White-Eye (Zosterops palpebrosa).—I am writing of the Indian species, and all bird keepers should seek to obtain palpebrosa, as though they all require much the same treatment, once over the hardships of importation, this species can be kept out of doors all the year round, providing the aviary has sufficient covered-in accommodation to keep them dry and space for exercise at the same time.

Experiments with Cinnamon Blood.

By OSCAR J. SMART

It is a matter of some surprise to me that Norwich Canary breeders should have experimented so little with cinnamon blood, while the Yorkshire breeders have distinct and beautiful varieties of cinnamon-marked birds.

Cinnamon Norwich Plainheads.

It is true that the Norwich man has something to lose (in the first generation, at any rate) by crossing his birds with the Cinnamon; but I question whether, in the long run, he will not be infinitely the gainer by such a practice. I purpose setting down here the results of experiments made by myself and friends in this direction, and to show the conclusions which such experiments have lead me to form.

In the first instance, a self-cinnamon cock was used, mated to a clear Norwich hen. The greatest care was taken to see that both were pure-bred (from a colour point of view, of course), as any out-cross would have had very far-reaching effects on the progeny. The young from this pair consisted of five foul-green cocks, five foul-cinnamon hens, and one cinnamon-marked hen. I noticed that only the hens showed any signs of cinnamon feathers, and subsequent experiments have proved that it is necessary to have cinnamon blood in both parents (although it is not essential that it shows in the plumage) to produce Cinnamons of both sexes.

The foul-greens were cocks; and I have never bred a green hen this way, although when the colour of the parents is reversed, viz., a clear cock to cinnamon hen, such are quite common, as also are the green cocks. These Greens must be looked upon as hybrids or off-colours, and which, contrary to Mendelian principles, do not breed true when mated together.

The progeny of this Cinnamon Norwich cross are, viewed as show birds, anything but satisfactory, being more or less nondescript in appearance, dull (or smoky) in colour, somewhat long in feather and browed nearly as much as some Crestbreds. The cocks I have found especially liable to lengthy feathering; but some of the Cinnamons were tight and neat, possessing full chests and bold heads, two features which, as may be imagined, make them invaluable as stock birds.

Two Show Birds.

Our next experiment was a step forward. In the following year we made three matings of more than ordinary interest, two of which must be looked upon as entirely satisfactory. We crossed two of the birds from the previous year's mating inter se (i.e., "amongst themselves"); one of the foul-green cocks we mated back to a clear hen, and we procured a perfectly clear cock for one of the foul cinnamon hens, making sure that the clears were clear-bred for at least three generations.

The inter se mating was carried on by a lady friend of mine, and it was from this pair that we obtained the most unexpected results. We paired the best-coloured foul-green cock to the best-typed foul-cinnamon hen; and clears, greens, cinnamons, splits, fouls, ticked, and marked (both greens and cinnamons), appeared among the progeny. Cinnamon feathers occurred in both sexes. Colour, size, and type were all vastly improved, while to our surprise we had two typical show birds. One of these was a clear buff and the other a self-cinnamon; both buffs and both cocks. They were of exceptional size and type, rich in colour and abundantly frosted. But what pleased me most was the lovely quality of feather, more especially in the clear, which was soft as down and glossy as silk.

This same cock (the foul green) was also run with a clear hen, and from this mating some very fair clear buffs were bred, several indifferent green and splashed birds, but not a single cinnamon feather. This, however, was strange, as I have never since failed to breed cinnamon hens from a similar mating. The buffs from this pair were ideal in type and shortness of feather, but they were poor in colour and rather small. The hens should have made good stock birds. The foul-green and splashed birds were quite useless, save as songsters.

Are Black Canaries Possible?

From a similar mating that same year I obtained some nondescript Cinnamon hens and a yellow Green hen, almost black in colour, which is worthy of note, because, when mated to a clear buff cock the following year, she bred me some of the richest yellows I have ever seen, spoiled only by being small.

Another of these foul-cinnamon hens was put to a clear yellow cock, and here, again, some very rich yellow Green hens were bred, some large Green cocks, and some clear and unevenly-marked cocks. All these birds were tight and short in feather, while the browing so pronounced in the first generation was thoroughly erased in the second.

One of these Green cocks was again paired to a clear hen, when the cinnamon stamp was absolutely lost in the progeny, although the excellent quality and colour of the feathers still bore witness to the beneficial effect of the cinnamon blood. One cinnamon-marked hen appeared from this mating, the rest being perfectly clear. Two of these clears paired together have given a beautiful rich cinnamon-ticked yellow hen, of fine quality and substance.

The Greens bred from cinnamon crosses are extremely smoky in colour, but when mated together they produce very rich cinnamons, and are, therefore, valuable stock birds, although quite useless for Green breeding. The fact of these cinnamon-greens having produced cinnamons when purchased by someone ignorant of their ancestry, has undoubtedly given rise to the erroneous assertion that "Cinnamons were in the first instance bred from Greens"; a statement with absolutely no foundation.

Does Cinnamon Spoil Green?

To sum up, I consider that quality of feather, colour, and occasionally size, may be gained by the proper use of cinnamon blood, but that it is useless to expect any improvement before the second or third generation; that it is advisable to breed with a little cinnamon blood in both parents if the best results are to be obtained; and that although both good cinnamons and good clears may be bred from the Cinnamon-Norwich cross, it can have nothing but a bad effect on the Greens.

The many beautiful varieties which may be bred from this cross should, in my opinion, be given some encouragement on the show bench. It is a thousand pities that the foul or pied Cinnamon should be looked upon as little better than a mongrel, when, with a little encouragement, the bird might easily be improved and bred up to a state of high perfection. I am convinced that their value, even as stock birds, will never be fully realised until they are recognised as exhibition birds, too.

"JACK": THE MARVELLOUS TALKING STARLING

An account both amusing and instructive of an exceptionally talented bird.

By T. H. FERRAR.

I AM unable in this article to deal with peculiarities of the Starlings' wild life (such as their screaming when feeding their young, etc.), but will give a full account of my experiences in the rearing from the nest, feeding, taming, and teaching of the common Starling. The subject-in-chief is, of course, my accomplished bird "Jack," whose marvellous power of mimicing the human voice in talking, laughing, whistling snatches of melodies, and also in the reproduction of other birds' songs (particulars of which I will enumerate), I venture to assert is unequalled. To any who very naturally may be sceptical on the subject, I may say that I have sent the Editor of CAGE BIRDS names and addresses of people who can vouch for the veracity of my account; or they may come and see the bird, and so judge for themselves. In order that readers may not run away with the idea that "Jack" is an "exception to the rule," I may say that at different times I have kept three Starlings, two males and a female, and both of the males talked. The first certainly only said two or three words, but he came to me an adult. The female only emitted her natural notes and gave no "impressions." The second male is my present bird. Should anyone be desirous of trying his (or her) hand at rearing a young Starling I advise them to adopt the following regimen (which is perfectly simple), but it must be coupled with gentleness, patience, kindness and common sense.

"JACK'S" EARLY DAYS.

"Jack" came into my possession four years ago last May, a nestling about three-parts fledged, and at the outset I kept him and his two brothers (or sisters) in a flower-pot which I fashioned to represent a nest. I fed them upon soaked bread, crushed hemp, small worms scoured and cut up, and any other insects I could find in my garden (wood-lice, small beetles, spiders, flies, etc.), all of which I mixed together and moistened; and about twice a day I gave a little water by dipping in water the small piece of stick which I used as a "feeder," and dropping a little down their throats when they opened their mouths. This treatment I continued until they left their improvised nest for a very large Magpie's cage, and as soon as I saw they drank I made the food hardly so moist. Although they very soon learned to feed themselves, they preferred being fed with their "feeder" (or by hand) for a long time. They were perfectly tame, attained by my never approaching them brusquely; in fact, I always induced them to come towards the hand in which I held the food. It was about this time that they all escaped from the cage; two flew away, but "Jack," being the tamest, I was able to recapture him.

A few days after this I noticed he had, as I at first thought, a bad cold, which I attributed to his bathing too frequently. He was continually sneezing, but as this developed into an intermittent gaping and gasping for breath, I treated him for a not uncommon ailment of insectivorous birds—namely, worms in the throat. I placed my bird in a box about 9 inches square, comparatively air-tight, into which I puffed the smoke of some fairly strong tobacco for a few moments. This caused the bird to sneeze and cough more than ever. Upon opening the box and releasing "Jack," I was delighted to see on the bottom of the box a worm about three inches long and about the thickness of stoutish twine (resembling a small earthworm), and from that moment "Jack" was completely cured—he has never experienced a recurrence.

Whilst on the subject of maladies, I may say that my bird has only suffered from two during the four years I have had him. The second illness was in the autumn, two years ago, when he shed his feathers, but produced no new ones, and at length was almost bare chest, back and neck being quite so. I first treated him for mite and similar troubles. I expected at this time to find him dead each morning when I came down. I eventually consulted my friend, Mr. Herbert Davidson, who keeps many soft-bill birds (including Starlings), and our consultation resulted in my giving up the packet food and getting various ingredients separately from those well-known specialists, Messrs. Trower & Co. The change in the bird was almost magical, for in less than two weeks from the time of the change I noticed new feathers sprouting, and in a month "Jack" was in perfect plumage, quite fit in every way for the show-bench.

A VERY UNUSUAL OCCURRENCE.
Two nestling Cuckoos in the same nest, that of a Meadow Pipit.

Here is the formula which, should any readers have an insectivorous bird similarly afflicted, I strongly recommend them to adopt: 4 parts rather fine biscuit meal, 1 part dried flies, 1 part ant eggs (best), 1 part crissel, ½ part crushed silkworm pupæ. About 3 parts of a teacupful to be given fresh-made every morning; to be made moist (but not sloppy, or like a pudding). This may appear on the face of it complicated, but small quantities of these ingredients can be had. My Starling, which has had no other food for the past two years, with the exception of a little "table scraps" (but no meat), lettuce or cabbage leaves, etc., in the winter, costs me 2½d. to 3d. per week.

I may add here that, in addition to my adult bird I have this year had six young ones from three different nests, all tame, well and hearty. One of these I put through its juvenile paces for my friend, Mr. G. H. Chirgwin, the "White-eyed Kaffir," whom I was delighted to see favouring your readers with a characteristically humorous account of his birds in your recent Christmas Number.

A REMARKABLE REPERTOIRE.

In the autumn of 1905, when "Jack" had almost completed his first moult, I noticed he was evidently endeavouring to imitate my voice. When trying to coax him to take a meal-worm from my hand, I would say: "Come on, come on, Jack." The resemblance was very vague, sounding like "coo-uvae," as well as I can describe it. I then repeated (when putting my hand in the cage) "Come on, Jack," more slowly and distinctly. I then began to notice an improvement each day, and in a short time my efforts were rewarded by hearing him say, with perfect distinctness: "Come on, come on, Jack." Encouraged by this success I repeated other short sentences, and as soon as either myself or wife discovered his "trying," as it were, one of them, I would drop all the others until (like the first "Come on, Jack,") he had got it correctly. In a like manner I instructed him in other sayings, many of which, however, he never, as far as I could discover, attempted. But to make up for this apparent inattention to us, he has on his own initiative said and whistled items which it was not intended he should imitate. For instance, at times, when some unusually loud noise occurred, as the slamming of a door or window, or a big bird flew overhead, or swallows swooped in near proximity to his cage (I kept him in a large cage in the garden), he would be startled and frightened, and in order to sooth or console him I would invariably say, "Poor Jack, whatever is it?" One day, to my surprise, I heard him say "whatever" fairly distinctly. My wife, being anxious that he should complete the sentence, would say "Whatever is it?" with so much emphasis on the last two words that "Jack" now also says "Whatever is it?" distinctly, an amusing story of which I will relate further on. As he was by this time well advanced in the execution of his natural sounds and whistles, I tested his "ear for music" by whistling a few notes of a tune repeatedly—namely, "Molly"—and he succeeded so well that I was encouraged to continue this part of his education. The outcome of it all is his following full "repertoire," all the items of which are clearly enunciated and whistled respectively. More frequently than not he performs them without a "break," with, however, this exception: my wife when whistling "Pop goes the Weasel" to him would (as most ladies do who are not adepts in the gentle art of whistling) moisten her lips in order to prepare them for the ordeal, and in doing so emit a "clicking" or soft "smacking" noise, and "Jack" hardly ever whistles this little tune without making this same "smacking noise" too, often three or four times. The imitations of the Canaries and the Pekin Nightingale he, of course, copied direct from my birds.

WHISTLING: Refrain of H. Lauder's song, "Killiecrankie"; imitation of myself whistling my dog Nancy; the Roller Canary (complete song and trills); the Pekin Nightingale or Robin (complete short song); "Pop goes the Weasel"; G. H. Chirgwin's popular whistle, "Half a pint of mild and bitter."

TALKING: Clever little Jack; Whatever is it? There's a little dear; Kiss poor Jack; Kiss dear little Jack; Kiss poor dear little Jack; I say, Jack, come on; O dear, O dear; Kiss poor little Nancy; What ho! Jack; Come on, Jack (sometimes coaxingly, at others sternly); Come on, Jack, say something; Don't be silly; Kiss your Jack, come on; imitation of my wife's laugh; Dicky, dicky, dicks (imitation of my wife's call to the Canaries).

It will be noticed that the words "kiss," "little" and "Jack" occur very frequently, but the variety of tones the bird adopts entirely prevents the sentences when uttered from being so monotonous as they may appear in print. The manner in which at times (by chance, of course) a few words will follow a tune at the last note is most amusing. As an instance, when finishing the first part of "Killiecrankie," he will say "There's a little dear" (a term my wife often uses to him) and laugh. Or in imitating the Canary he will sometimes break into "Dicky, dicky, dicks, whatever is it?" Again, if I whistle a part of a tune, or Chirgwin's whistle, and stop in the middle, "Jack" will pick me up and finish it. Although this is most amusing, I consider it a bad plan to let him do it frequently, as it is apt to cause the bird to break the tune, as it were. In fact, experimenting in saying "Whatever—," expecting "Jack" to finish with "is it?" I find he will never do so, but, on the contrary, he sometimes repeats only "Whatever," and then laughs! So I would advise teachers to always say or whistle the full item, which should not be too long. The explanation of why he says "Come on, Jack," in two distinct tones is that sometimes it is said coaxingly to him, while some time back I had difficulty in getting him to return to his cage, and

Jack studying the songs of the Roller Canary and Pekin Robin

I'm afraid I used to lose my patience and call to him very sternly, "Come on, Jack!" Now (with apologies to Bobby Burns) I hear mysel' as ithers hear me!

I have mentioned that the first tune we tried to teach him was "Molly." He seemed to get the "hang" of half-a-dozen notes, but got no further, and eventually dropped what he had learned. This is the only instance that I can recall where he has forgotten, either by "accident or design," anything that he has once learned. But of many little sayings that we have attempted to teach him he has never uttered the semblance of a note or word. So, I take it, the result is achieved by means of the intuition of the pupil. When it is discovered that the bird on its own initiative is imitating, he should be assisted by the master repeating the words or tune he is attempting. As my own bird copied the daily singing of my Canaries and Pekin Nightingale perfectly, repetition, it would appear, is the chief factor to be relied upon. After the item has been thoroughly learned the bird will intermix it with the natural sounds he emits, without the aid of the prompter.

Concerning the docility and tameness of the Starling in a domesticated state, there is a prevalent and entirely fallacious idea that insectivorous or soft-billed birds will not talk unless their tongues be cut (or slit) with a "silver sixpence or threepenny-piece!" so the recounting of two episodes proving conclusively the clearness with which "Jack" talks may be of interest.

I keep him now in a rectangular-shaped cage, 2 ft. 10 in. long, 1 ft. 6 in. high and 1 ft. 6 in. deep, but he is allowed to fly about the room, mostly at breakfast and tea times, when he will at once fly either on to my own or my wife's hand and wait until he is given some little tit-bit, though he will proceed to help himself if he is kept waiting long. He will then fly off to a part of the room, returning to our shoulders or hands from time to time. The salt box upon which he is depicted in one of the accompanying photographs is a source of great delight to him, and as my wife caught him frequently in this box of salt when he was taken into the scullery for his bath, etc., she has now removed the salt, and the box is given entirely over to "Jack," which he seems to understand, as he is most pugnacious should we attempt to turn him out. It is interesting to watch him fly direct into the box when the lid is quite shut down. He accomplishes this in his flight by inserting his beak in the small slit between the box and the shut lid; by opening his mouth he raises the lid, when he squeezes himself in. This is done so rapidly that it appears as though at the right moment the lid opened of its own accord.

He is also especially fond of perching on my wife's hand or arm when she is sewing, and, providing she does not make too rapid a movement, rests on the needle hand for preference, watching the plying of the needle with great interest and curiosity; and it is astonishing how he, with the assistance of his wings, maintains his equilibrium. When I am reading aloud his favourite spot is as close to my mouth as he can get, usually under my chin, holding on very tenaciously to the lapel of my coat. When looking into my lips as I move them in reading he will from time to time very gently insert his beak, prise them open quite wide, and look inside in sheer inquisitiveness!

Another quaint and favourite pleasure of his is to perch quite on the extremity of my knee, when in the winter I am sitting by the fire, and enjoy a "fire bath," as I term it, by extending his wings to their full capacity and puffing himself out so that he resembles a ball of feathers more than a bird—precisely, in fact, in the same manner that birds take a "sun bath," or bask in the sun in their wild state.

"Jack" does not at all like being handled (i.e., held in the hand), but when I do this he, while trying to release himself, keeps up a continuous talking and whistling. I can place him on his back on the table, or upon my open hand, where he will remain for some moments still talking, apparently quite oblivious to his unnatural position. But when the latter dawns upon him he is up in a moment and making for my dog's drinking water to have a bath. He is most obedient, and comes at once on my hand by my raising it and calling him. I have not the slightest difficulty in returning him to his cage. I simply make a movement with my hand towards his cage door and say, "In you go, Jack," when he at once obeys.

He is particularly fond of repeating "Come on, kiss poor little Jack, come on," and he is none the less fond of being kissed. My wife very often does this!

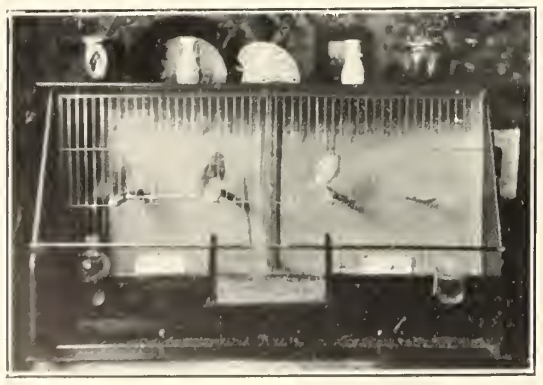
HAVE WE A PERFECT SONG-BIRD?

By W. E. Teschemaker, B.A.

TO bring the music of the woods and fields into his own home has probably been one of the aspirations of mankind from the earliest dawn of civilisation. This undertaking is difficult enough to-day with all our modern resources, but to the prehistoric aviculturist it must have presented difficulties almost insurmountable, and we may almost class it with the many beautiful dreams that mankind has dreamed only to awake to the stern realities of life!

THE SINGER AND THE SONG.

Let me in the first place explain exactly what I mean by the term "song-bird," and I will ask our readers to carefully note this definition, because otherwise they are hardly likely to agree with my conclusions. Firstly, then, a song-bird must be easily procured; secondly, it must be easily kept; thirdly, it must take kindly to cage life, and, lastly, it must sing if possible in every month of the year.



Having thus defined a song-bird let us see if we can now define bird-song that is to say, the ideal bird-song. We will admit that there is music in the song of almost any bird, more especially when the latter has a natural background; but, just as in our younger days our musical taste was probably well satisfied with some popular waltz tune, but as our musical experience increased we became more critical, so, as our avicultural experience grows, we find that our taste demands something more refined and more artistic in bird-song.

The first condition, then, that our more cultured taste demands is that bird-song must not be a repetition of any set phrase or phrases—the singer must improvise, so that, as he proceeds from tour to tour, we can never tell what he is going to sing next; secondly, there must be no actual discords to offend the musical ear; and, lastly, what we require is chamber-music, that is to say, something not too loud to be enjoyed in an ordinary room.

THE GREATEST BIRD ARTISTES.

And now let us briefly review the world's greatest songsters and see which one of them, if any, will answer our requirements.

Of all North American singing birds the most popular is probably the Mocking-bird (Mimus polyglottus). There is much that is delightful about the song of this species—its great variety and compass and clever imitations—but unfortunately it is never heard at its best in a cage, and the tyrannical disposition of the bird itself makes it a most dangerous inmate of an aviary.

CAGE FITTED WITH GLASS ARRANGEMENT TO OBVIATE SEED-LITTER.

Made by Mr. F. Thomas (Ramsgate).

Years ago I had a Mocking-bird in a small outdoor aviary which used to sing most charmingly; it would imitate a Thrush, Starling, or Lark to perfection, but would completely spoil its song by introducing a life-like imitation of the cawing of a Rook. These discords and the great difficulty of procuring any North American birds since the passing of the Act prohibiting their export exclude the Mocking-bird under our definition of a perfect song-bird.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN PATTI.

In South America there is probably no finer songster than the Solitaire (Myadestes obscurus), whose music is thus described by C. W. Beebe:

"Not a sound broke the silence, save the gentle tinkle of water falling upon water. Without warning from the green depths at one side there came several notes, creaky and harsh in tone, and suddenly these seemed to melt and run together into a volume of marvellous sweetness. The plaintiveness of the Pewee, the tinkle and gurgle of the Bobolink, the rich liquidness of the Wood Thrush; all these characterised it, but it differed from all, excelling the songs of all other birds in depth of feeling and sweetness. It was the mystery and beauty of these tropical ravines embodied in song. Such was the song of the Solitaire, one of the marvels of Mexico, for which we had long hoped. It came and died away before we realised what we had heard. Soon, from the next turn in the arroyo, came an echoing sweetness, and at last fainter, as from a great distance, a third took up the incomparable theme."

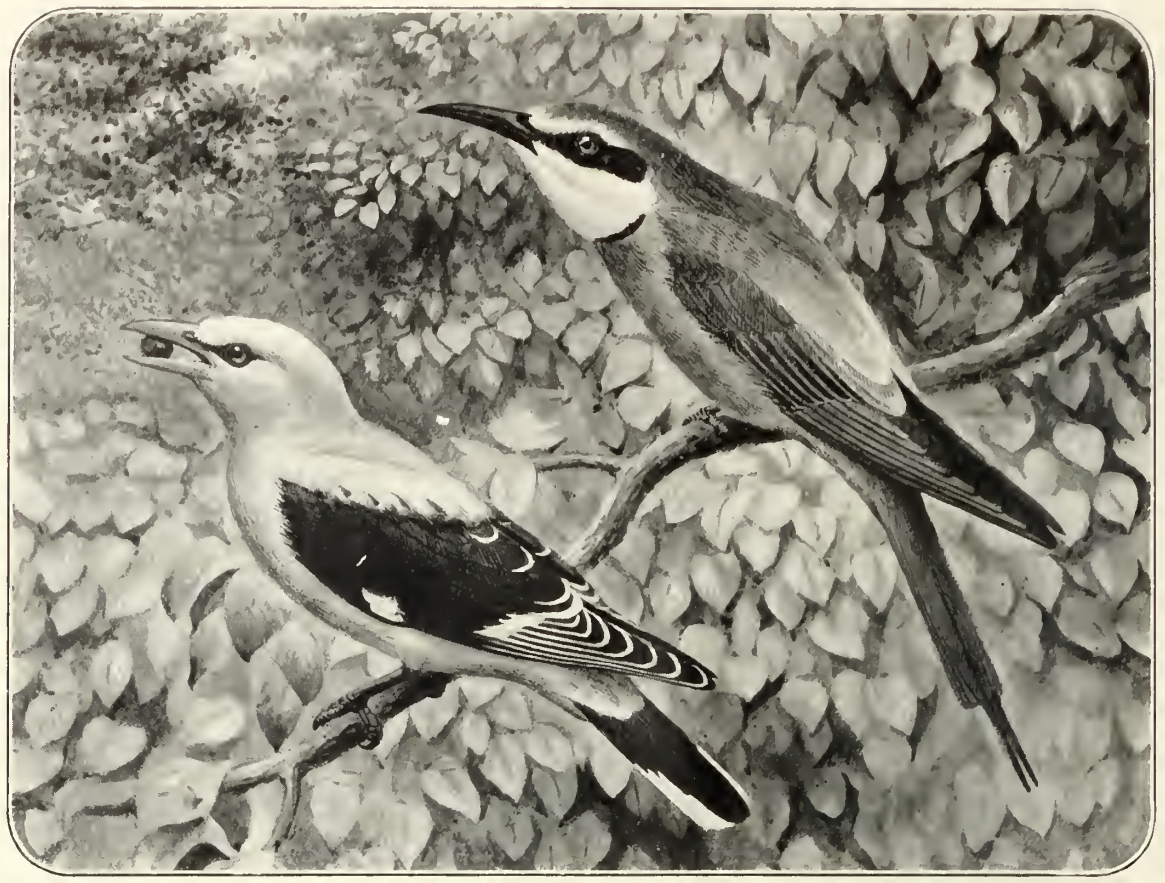
The Solitaire, however, is one of the rarest of imported birds and is also said to be a shy singer when caged, so for our purpose it is useless. There are several other songsters of great merit among the South American avifauna, but, alas, they only appear at intervals of years in our bird-market. One of these, the Argentine Blackbird (Turdus fuscatus), is at present singing beautifully in my own aviary.

Of all the Indian singing birds none probably is better known in this country than the Shama, which may be said to come very nearly to our ideal—it takes so readily to cage life, is so companionable and amusing, besides being endowed with vocal organs with which it can, if it likes, produce the most marvellous effects. Unfortunately the Shama reserves its rarest vocal efforts for special occasions, and as a rule it gives us little more than some rather sweet warbling, varied by some weird and rather loud runs and trills.

I have had several Shamas and all have sung much the same way, though now and again, under the influence of some special excitement, I have heard them sing most wonderfully. Its high price is also against the Shama; for have we not stipulated that our ideal song-bird must be "easy to procure"?

A SAINTLEY AMONGST BIRDS.

Amongst European birds we have some very fine songsters, especially certain of the Rock Thrushes. I shall never forget the first time that I heard the Blue Thrush and the Pied Rock-Thrush singing in a wild ravine in Italy. Unfortunately the Rock-Thrushes are by nature wild, and for this reason they seldom sing well in a cage.



The Germans, however, give the preference among all the songsters of Central Europe to the Sprosser (Daulias philomela), and I think rightly. In Morris's "British Birds" may be seen a coloured drawing of this species resembling a small Thrush, with a boldly spotted breast, but the Sprosser in real life is exceedingly like our English Nightingale in style and colouring, though quite one-third larger.

The glorious song of the Sprosser is also a close imitation of that of the Nightingale, lacking some of the sweetness of the latter, but of much greater volume. I had one which sang for an entire year, with the exception only of the three weeks during which it was moulting, and every morning and all the morning its triumphant notes would ring through the house. That same season a Nightingale nested only some two hundred yards from my garden and I had a good opportunity of comparing the two vocalists. The high notes of the Nightingale could be heard even a quarter of a mile away, but the Sprosser's voice was much fuller and more powerful and might be called a deep bass in comparison with Nightingale's tenor.

The Sprosser has nearly all the qualifications we require in our song-bird, being extremely hardy, as well as a very free singer, but unfortunately it has just one drawback—its notes are too powerful for any room. To convey some idea of the volume of sound it can produce I may mention that I had at one time ten young cock Roller Canaries being trained under a Queck Organ in my bird-room, and, when the whole ten and the Organ were in full swing, if one stood outside the room one heard nothing but the Sprosser.

CULTIVATED SWEETNESS.

The above reference to the Roller Canary reminds me that I must not overlook this modern song-bird, "made in Germany." We certainly have here a bird "easy to procure" and "easy to keep," but, without wishing to disparage in any way the Germans or the result of thirty years of their systematic breeding, I must confess that I consider the Roller Canary a dismal failure from the point of view of its song.

"IS MOTHER LOOKING?"

Young Canaries photographed on a spray of Hawthorn.

The best birds in the technical sense—that is, those most free from faults, sing a monotonous and dreadfully artificial ditty, which they repeat over and over again without any variation. The worst birds have rather more variety, but they have the same ear-splitting notes which we deplore in the Norwich Canary; and all Rollers after the moult, unless re-trained, tend to revert to the characteristic song of the ordinary Canary.

Before leaving the birds of Europe we may briefly refer to an Oriental song-bird on which the poets have conferred notoriety, if not fame, namely, the Bulbul. I have heard many Bulbuls of many different species, but none that could sing, except one particular White-eared Bulbul (P. leucotis), and that one did not sing well. I think that anyone who takes the trouble to look into the matter will come to the conclusion that the Persian Bulbul of the poets was really Daulias dafizi, the Eastern form of the Nightingale.

THE FAVOURITE ISLE.

We have now scoured two continents without finding a song-bird that will quite meet our requirements. Shall we be more fortunate in making a selection among the birds of our own country? Amongst our British "Hardbills" we have a very delightful little songster in the common Linnet, especially if we are lucky enough to secure a good one; and in this connection we must not forget that it was the song of the Linnet and the sight of an English common in May, with its gorse in full bloom, that caused the great Swedish naturalist, Linnæus, to fall on his knees and give thanks to his Creator. The song of this species, however, is too lacking in variety and in compass to satisfy a cultured taste.

In our English Skylark and Woodlark, however, we probably have two of the world's greatest songsters. In my own aviary I have often heard the Woodlark pitted against some of the very best of the foreign Larks, such as the Calandra, the Crested Lark and the Siberian Black Lark, and it has certainly not been defeated. Neither of these species gives any trouble in an aviary, but, on the other hand, both require a good deal of attention in a cage, and they seldom sing freely in a room.

There is only one of the Warblers that we need seriously consider, namely, the Blackcap. I do not know who first made the assertion that the Blackcap was nearly, if not quite, the equal of the Nightingale, but the statement has been copied and repeated over and over again. The beautiful silvery notes of the Blackcap are certainly one of the delights of an English summer, but I cannot admit that anyone with a musical ear can even compare these two songsters.

The Blackcap does not exactly repeat itself, but its notes are all much alike. Anyone who listens attentively to a fairly good Nightingale can distinguish at least a dozen different tours, and the inimitable way in which the bird pauses between each phrase bespeaks the true artiste. Nevertheless, the Blackcap has very many good points. Anyone, for instance, who will catch a few cock Blackcaps in August and turn them into a sheltered out-door aviary will be surprised at the amount of winter song he will be rewarded with.

THE "QUEEN OF SONG."

And what shall we say of Philomel, the "Queen of Song"? We will admit that the song is unsurpassed, especially when it is heard at its best—that is, when a large number of birds are singing in keen competition. I have heard the song of the Nightingale in several countries, but it never made such an impression as on "one night in June" at Bagley Wood, near Oxford.

A party of four Oxford undergraduates had driven over to Abingdon one evening, and returning by Bagley Wood very much later than they ought to have been returning, were absolutely spell-bound by the chorus of Nightingales in the wood. I have often wondered since how many 'Gales were singing there that night. They seemed to be in every tree and every bush, and even within a few yards of us. It was after midnight when we got back to Oxford and none of us will ever forget that evening.

If we could only induce the Nightingale to sing freely in a cage we need not seek further for our ideal song-bird. But a Nightingale which will freely give us its true wild song at any time of the year except the month of May is indeed a rara avis.

I pass over our Blackbird and Thrush as being too loud for any room, and the same disability applies to the wilder, romantic song of the Ring Ouzel.

UNEXPECTED, BUT JUST.

Is there, then, no song-bird which will fulfil our requirements? Let me call your attention to a little bird with a red breast which may be seen in every garden in the land—our familiar Robin! Have you ever tried the Robin as a song-bird? If not, you must not laugh at my suggestion until you have made the experiment.

In the first place, consider how well it fits in with our definition. It costs nothing to procure, because we can catch one any day of the week for ourselves. It is no trouble to keep, and it will sing in every month of the year and every day of the week and every hour of the day. Its song is most varied and melodious in a state of freedom, while in captivity it greatly improves.

For years past it has been my custom to catch up two cock Robins every winter and cage them in separate compartments of a Crystal Palace cage in my sitting-room. Throughout the livelong day, and even long after the lamps have been lighted in the evening, my two song-birds will sing against each other. Please note that one never interrupts the other: each sings in turn, and, as it were, listens attentively to the other's performance, showing the true artistic temperament. How different from the Canary, which will invariably try to drown the notes of any other bird—and why? Because the Canary is simply trying to make a noise. Our Robin is trying to sing.

The song of the Robin is at times somewhat plaintive, but it has the greatest advantage of never wearying the listener. Lastly, let me mention that if one is leaving home one can release this song-bird with the utmost confidence that when one returns he will be easily caught up again.

Although it is perhaps natural to despise that which is common, it appears to me that we have the ideal song-bird at our very doors.

"JACK": The Talking Starling.

It is extraordinary how so many persons are under the impression that, in order to enable a bird to talk, etc., it is absolutely necessary to cut or slit its tongue. All men who keep "bird shops" seem to believe in this cruel practice. One man at a large bird and animal shop in the West of London told me only recently, in reply to my question as to the why and wherefore, that by "splitting their tongues it made them split the words"! And many of my friends who have heard my bird have invariably remarked: "Did you cut his tongue?" or, "Of course, his tongue is cut?" Only a few days ago Miss Elise Clerc (of the Alhambra), who is a breeder of fancy Canaries in a large way, after hearing "Jack," told Sir Beerbohm Tree (who keeps a lot of pets) her experience. That gentleman remarked: "A very beautiful bird, no doubt, but I should not keep one, as I do not hold with the cruelty of cutting their tongues!" I need hardly add that "Jack's" tongue has not been cut, and that (speaking from evidence) I consider the custom (if it exists) not only quite unnecessary, but ignorant and wanton cruelty. The following true stories as to the clearness with which the Starling can imitate without a split tongue will suffice to prove this.

Before going for our holidays last year some friends undertook to mind "Jack" for us during our absence, and he was given a small room to himself, the door of which was kept locked. Mrs. Warton, our friend, one day had a charwoman in, who, after she had commenced cleaning outside the locked door of "Jack's" room, rushed downstairs in a great state of perturbation exclaiming "Oh, marm, there's some people in that little room upstairs."

Mrs. Warton, to keep up the joke, replied, "Nonsense, what makes you think so?"

"Well, what did you hear?"

"I heard one say, 'Come on, kiss poor little Jack,' and the other said, 'Don't be silly!'"

And one morning when the gas inspector came to inspect the meter, "Jack" was in the kitchen, unobserved by that official, who had mounted the steps and was examining the index when the Starling exclaimed, "Whatever is it?" To which the inspector replied, "It's 2,000 less than the corresponding quarter, sir." For which I thanked the gentleman.

The Reformation of Mr. Bodger.

A charming account of the manner in which a Missel Thrush forsook its evil ways and became a respectable member of birdy society.

By FLORENCE E. RICHARDSON-GRIFFITHS.

Mr. Bodger was the possessor, at one period of his life, at least, of a violent temper and a most tyrannical disposition. It has been said that in Lancashire (his own natal county) the wives of the coal miners are not suffered by their lords to satisfy their hunger at the same time as themselves, but must take their meals separately. However true this may be, it is certain that Mr. Bodger had much the same idea. Mrs. Bodger, to tell the truth, led a dog's life. Little pleasure was this unfortunate lady able to take in the fine appearance and noble bearing of her spouse, for in his eyes she could never do right. From early morn till dewy eve, no peace, no rest; naught but harsh words and cruel blows.

Often and often have I appealed to him (for I owned the house in which they lived) to treat his poor wife more kindly. In vain. He would stare boldly into my face with his bright dark eyes, then as soon as my back was turned would start ill-treating her again. She, poor creature, was meek enough, and quite understood that she must never aspire to eat at the same time as her husband. But things grew much worse. I discovered when visiting them one day that Mr. Bodger had made a new rule, which was, in effect, that his wife must never eat or drink at all.

The Man in Blue Quite Helpless.

But, you may ask, where were the police? Why did not this poor victim of domestic tyranny invoke the protection of the law? Alas! the law could do little for Mrs. Bodger, for she and her tyrannical husband were a pair of Missel Thrushes. Their home was a small aviary, which they had entirely to themselves, with plenty of room for them to live very happily had they been disposed so to do. They were beautiful birds, and exactly alike until their quarrels in the early spring caused Mrs. Bodger to break her tail feathers and otherwise damage her plumage. She became a woeful spectacle, in fact, with broken feathers and bleeding head, while she was never allowed to bathe.

Several times a day I would go out to the aviary armed with a small cane, with which I kept the indignant Mr. Bodger at bay while his starving mate satisfied her hunger. Had I not done this, I am sure she really would have starved to death. It was quite pitiful to see her eat, while I stood by to protect her; often as soon as she saw me coming she would rush to the food and begin eating at once. I tried putting their food in two receptacles, one inside and one out. But it was no use. Mr. Bodger kept firmly to his resolution.

On one occasion I was greatly pleased to find that the tables had been turned, but Mrs. Bodger could not keep it up.

The Order of the Boot.

Very reluctantly I came to the conclusion that Mr. Bodger and I must part. He was splendidly handsome, very fairly tame, and I was attached to him, but his persistent persecution of his wife caused me at last (on an Easter Sunday) to open the aviary door and let him go. Joyfully he rushed out, flew round in a small circle, then on his great powerful wings seemed to rise straight up to the sun. Higher and higher he soared, and then we saw him swoop down towards some distant trees.

"Well, that is the end of Mr. Bodger. We shall never see him again," I said sadly.

But I was wrong.

Five days elapsed, during which Mrs. Bodger recovered her plumpness. She ate and drank whenever she liked, and took her bath when so inclined. In fact, she seemed to be eating all day, to make up, I suppose, for former privations. Not a sign of Mr. Bodger all the time. But on the sixth morning, lo and behold! he came into the dining-room early, when the room was being dusted before breakfast, entering by the door which opened to the garden. He then proceeded to hop all about the aviary, and when I went out to see him, he was perched on a hedge close by, warbling very sweetly in a low tone. He looked handsomer than ever, and, I must confess, I was glad to see him again. Some food from the aviary was put out for him, and he eagerly devoured it.

"This is the right sort of stuff," he seemed to say; "this is fit for a gentleman to eat!"

After he had made a hearty meal, a pie-dish-full of water was placed on the grass, and Mr. Bodger enjoyed all the luxury of a real civilised bath. Round and round he splashed—I never saw a bird enjoy a bath so much. Yet close to the house are a stream and a large pond, in which one would have thought he could have bathed to his heart's content.

Chastened in Spirit.

"Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home;" and so evidently thought Mr. Bodger, for on my opening the aviary door he rushed in with all speed! Mrs. Bodger appeared to take no notice at all of him, though I could imagine her thoughts to be anything except those of welcome.

But the wanderer who returned was a changed bird. I never again saw him lay a finger, so to speak, on his wife! From the moment of his return to the moment of writing (when Mrs. Bodger is sitting on her fourth nest of eggs), love and harmony have reigned in the Bodger household.

The couple soon began to build in a basket which I hung up from the aviary roof, Mr. Bodger fussing about very busily and turning round and round in the empty basket.

"An excellent site, my dear, for the nursery," he seemed to be saying. "You'll want clay and plenty of dried grass. I'll show you how it's done."

But it was Mrs. Bodger who did the work.

About this time I feared that Mr. Bodger on his travels had managed to get bronchitis, for a hoarse, wheezing sound was often heard coming from the aviary. But I soon discovered that this uncouth noise was Mr. Bodger's way of expressing his most tender feelings! Afterwards, when a fine young Bodger occupied the nest (for three of the four eggs first laid did not hatch), both parents always made this curious hoarse noise whenever they fed the baby.

When Mrs. Bodger began to sit it was wonderful to notice the "changed heart" of her husband. Any little dainty, such as a beetle or slug—and beetles were to the Bodgers the most delicious treat—he would promptly fly up to the nest with, and pop it into her beak. When she came off the nest he would encourage her to eat, and would guard the eggs carefully till she returned.

The Little Darling!

When the baby was hatched, his pride and fussiness knew no bounds. He seemed to be feeding the infant all day long, and I have seen many little playful disputes between the parents as to whose turn it was to feed the little darling On one occasion, while engaged in a struggle for the possession of a worm, I heard them shriek at each other just like two cats. The dispute ended in the worm breaking in two, and the Bodgers hurrying up to the nest, each with a half, and feeding the infant in turn.

I was not permitted to see the baby unless I managed it by stratagem, for directly I tried to get a peep, the mother, with every feather on end and looking nearly as large as a football, would rush up to the nest, snapping and biting, and hastening to cover the nestling, while Mr. Bodger would spread his wings half out and glare at me in the most threatening manner! I have spent many a pleasant hour watching the domestic happiness of the Bodgers.

In my bird-room at this moment I have a young one of theirs (from the second nest), which is the tamest and most amusing bird I have ever had. This young Bodger is nine weeks old, and has begun to warble very prettily. He is, however, a mischievous fellow, and sometimes gives my ear or neck a painful tweak when he is perching on my shoulder. He shares his mother's fondness for thin bread and butter! When ma is sitting, I can generally lure her from her nest by offering this dainty, which she will take from my fingers.

The Norwich Plainhead Canary.

Opinions and Experiences of Some Leading Breeders and Exhibitors.

Mr. ALBERT HIRST (Accrington).

Norwich Plainheads are hardy, and are most prolific breeders. They are, too, one of our most popular breeds of Canaries at the present time. They have undergone many changes since I started breeding them, twenty-three years since, but at no time, in my opinion, have they reached the high standard of excellence that most of our present-day show birds have attained. Since the advent of the Norwich Plainhead Club the Plainheads have made wonderful progress in type and quality, and in no county have I noticed such rapid progress as the Lancashire fanciers have made. The county has now become a veritable hot-bed for Norwich. This I put down to the fact that the fanciers have birds possessing size, and that they have paid more attention to the head points than is the case in some districts.

You must have good heads on your birds, for no matter how excellent in other points your bird may be, if it is pinched in head, it gets a "back seat" when the cards are given out. The head you will find on the winners has a short beak, a wide forehead, a gentle rise to the crown expanding to a broad back skull, short, full neck, and cheeks full and round, with no brow to give it a sullen look.

Keep an eye to the size of your birds, and remember that a good big one will always beat the good little one when they meet.

You must have good colour, too. That you will have to breed for, or you will not possess winners. Some of the strong advocates for type will tell you that they can get colour by cramming their birds with colour-feed. But that is all bosh! they cannot. How must we get it, then? With Green blood? Well, yes. But I don't like the grass-greens. I want those which show the bronze colour, as that means Cinnamon blood. I get my colour from the Cinnamon-marked, and the clear, pink-eyed Norwich; and I know many noted fanciers who keep a few Cinnamon-marks in their stock. Both my best Yellow cock birds, with which I won last season, were bred direct from Cinnamon-marks on the one side. In pairing up my birds I do not work on the balancing-up of points. All through I pick out the best cock and pair him to the best hen, and if they are both show birds, so much the better. But the cock must be of full size. I am not so particular as to size with the hen, providing she is typical and of good quality.—ALBERT HIRST.

Mr. Jas. WINTER (Edinburgh).

My experiences have been much like the average fancier's. I have enjoyed a fair share of success both in the breeding room and on the show bench, which I attribute mainly to setting apart a time for every duty and sticking to it, as without method no one can expect to be successful. With regard to the present stamp of exhibition bird, my opinion is that we are advancing nearer to the ideal each year, and with the help of the Press and the various Plainhead Clubs, I have no doubt that progress will be well maintained. I have found the Norwich Plainhead to be very hardy and a free breeder, and I would counsel all who are in doubt as to the best variety to begin with, to take up the "bird of quality and colour."—JAS. WINTER.

Mr. A. CHALMERS (Kirkintilloch).

My commencement in breeding the Norwich Plainhead goes back ten years, when I purchased my first pair, which bred very freely. But none of the produce were fit for open competition; and for two or three years later my fortunes did not improve to a great extent as far as winners were concerned. But I always got quantity. In the year 1903 I began to win in open competition, and have improved each year since, which the reports of your valuable paper (CAGE BIRDS) prove.

I find the Plainheads are easy to work with, compared with the Crests. My experience teaches me that pedigree breeding goes a long way to enable one to get at the right sort of bird required. I would rather breed from the worst specimen I ever saw, if it came off a winning strain, than I would breed from a superior bird that came by chance.

The most important points to be striven for, in my opinion, in their order are, first, type. The bird should have a dome-shaped head, and a short, thick neck with wide, nicely-rounded chest, short body, a tail to correspond, and close-fitting wings. The second point is quality—smooth and silky. The third condition—healthy, clean, and free from broken or frayed feathers. And, fourthly, colour—deep orange and level throughout. The stamp of birds winning at some shows is quite correct, and well worthy of the prizes won; at others the case is quite the reverse, the best birds remaining cardless. I wish your paper (CAGE BIRDS) every success.—A. CHALMERS.

Mr. H. WRIGHT (Norwich).

It was in 1868 that I first started Canary breeding, which I did with two pairs of Norwich Plainheads. Three of these birds were given to me by an old lady, the other, a clear yellow cock, had been our home pet for thirteen years, and, notwithstanding its age, it did well, and brought up a good lot of young ones. The bird died the second breeding season after. I was very successful, and I think it was in 1872 that I started exhibiting. This was in St. Andrew's Hall, Norwich, the same show that Messrs. Bemrose and Orm showed their colour-fed birds, sending the Norwich breeders into fever heat. My share was 8c. for a cage of four. There were no amateur classes then.

The type was slimmer in those days than now, and the bird a bit more leggy. A few years later, in the rush for size, Crest blood was introduced. Then followed the long tails, with the browed heads, etc., which are to be seen here and there even now; once in these faults take some breeding out. The fact is, I have never yet seen the Norwich Plainhead too big for my liking. As a fancier once said to me when judging a club show—"Here, do you like big 'uns?" "Yes," was the reply, "if they are good big 'uns, and have the following good points: wide and well-rounded head, freedom from browing, short beak, well filled-in neck, round and wide breast, good wide and round back, sharp and compact flights and tail." And I also want them to be feathered so thick that they look all in a piece.

I claim to be the first one to have washed birds in public. Amateurs used to persist in asking me to wash their birds for them; but I told them it was not fair to others. So I decided to give them a public washing exhibition. I have washed some hundreds of birds at different clubs without even one mishap. Sunlight soap I find is the best for removing the dirt which it does quicker than any other I know, and I shall still claim this whatever others may say. A friend of mine had his birds made as black as crows, through a lamp accident, and I washed the lot, and they came out like show birds.—H. WRIGHT.

Mr. STEPHEN TWEDDLE (Blackburn).

The Norwich Plainhead has become such a general favourite with Canary fanciers and is so largely kept that it would be difficult to suggest any method of treatment which has not already been made public. My own experience with this popular variety extends over a period of about 12 years, during which time I may claim to have met with a fair measure of success.

As regards breeding, two principal points which I think it is essential to keep in view are colour and head properties. I find the latter difficult to keep to the required standard, even with every care, and it is a common experience to find otherwise good birds spoiled through having weak, snipy headpieces. It is only necessary to notice the winning birds at our shows to convince the breeder of the necessity of keeping the production of good-coloured specimens in view, as well as aiming at the true Norwich type.

As to the best method of pairing, opinions will, of course, differ, but so far as my experience goes, the best results have been obtained from using a yellow hen and a buff cock. Birds bred this way seem to possess more substance, and generally come out well in head qualities. I like quality in the hen and plenty of size in the cock. I have bred a fair bird or two by "double buffing," but I have not experimented very extensively in this direction.

These are the general lines on which I work, and whatever success my birds have achieved may be attributed to keeping these ideas in mind. Every bird I have exhibited, I may say, has been bred by myself. The stamp of bird now being exhibited is, in my opinion, mainly on the right lines, but I think a little more importance might be attached to size and substance. The smaller birds undoubtedly gain a little in the matter of quality, but still, I think they are more easily bred than the "big good 'uns." However, if we all aim at the Norwich Club's standard we shall not get far wrong. Last, but not least, I may also say that I owe a fair amount of success to the efforts of my wife, as she is as keen a fancier as I am myself.—STEPHEN TWEDDLE.

A New Cage Bird Society for Brighton and District.

SIR,—It has been agreed to start a Cage Bird Society for Brighton and District, and we have arranged an inangural meeting for Wednesday, January 19th, 1910, at the King and Queen Hotel, Marlborough Place, Brighton, at 8.15 o'clock, when we invite all cage bird fanciers in the district and neighbouring towns to be present. We hope a great number will respond.

Goldfinches at Leighton Buzzard Show.

SIR,—My attention has been called to a "Twittering" in your issue of January 1, from Mr. J. Gough (Oxford), claiming first prize for his Goldfinch at Leighton Buzzard Show. What the explanation may be I don't, of course, know, but reference to my judging book clearly shows that the first prize was awarded to No. 892, which the catalogue gives as belonging to Mr. Burnell; No. 893 was placed "commended," and there is no name to this entry in the catalogne.

A Lowestoft Fancier's Recent Sad Loss.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to express my sincere thanks for the sympathy expressed by numerous fanciers in the very unfortunate loss I sustained with regard to my birds. Being a working man I can assure you the disaster came very hard, and I am afraid it will take me a very long time to recover myself. It was my intention to give up the Fancy altogether as this seemed to knock all heart out of me, but the following fanciers of Lowestoft did not intend I should: Messrs. Backham, Francis, Blackburn, Kirk, Bagshaw, Lang, Hatch, Parke, Catchpole, who have given me birds with which to start again. I have also received a pair from Mr. P. Victor Williams (Market Drayton, Salop). Their kindness is much appreciated by me, and I thank them very much. I hope one and all of them may have a very successful time this coming season.

A Visit to Kendal Show.

SIR—Allow me through your widely-known paper to thank the secretary of Kendal and District C.B.S., Mr. W. Vart, for the prompt settlement of prize-money; show held Jan. 3rd, the prize-money arriving 6th. I took a "day off" and paid a visit to the St. George's Hall, Kendal. It is just the room to place the birds to advantage. I was agreeably surprised to find how well the show was managed. Such an easy, concise method of working, which quite does away with confusion. The officers (secretary and treasurer, and committee, etc.) are always courteous in their manner when answering exhibitors' questions. You get a civil answer, instead of "I don't know," in an abrupt fashion. For a young society they leave nothing to be desired, and should be well patronised. Other societies round Lancashire would do well to take them for an example. There was a good display of British, especially Goldfinches, with no Siberians sent by "sharpers" to rob the honourable exhibitors of their right places; also a grand lot of mules, both rare and beautiful, which from the time of opening the show were a centre of interest, crowds round to admire them. Yorkshires were just a little scarce in number, but made up for this in the quality. Mr. Bostock won two 1st prizes, and as he is but a young beginner, I wish him success

How to Prevent Seed Litter in a Room.

SIR,—I am sending you a photograph of the cage which I made and exhibited at the show held recently in Ramsgate, and which was specially noticed by your reporter. I made it with the idea of catching the seed husks and thus preventing a mess about the room, and it is a decided success. It is 31 inches long and 18 high. The top is 10 inches from front to back, but the floor of the cage is 14½ inches wide. The sides are angled off as I have tried to show in the enclosed sketch. The ends are made of wood (from tea chests) and the back is of three-ply wood joined in the centre (also got from old tea chests from the grocer). The top is a piece of fretwork wood, ¼in. thick and 10 inches wide, and the bottom of thin deal. The fronts are made of punched bar and 14 gauge tinned wire. I have a wire partition, so it can be used as one or two cages. I cut a groove in each side for a piece of glass 8 inches deep, put in on the slant, so that the top of the glass is out from wire front about 6 or 7 inches. This catches the waste, as you can see by the photograph. Lifting the glass out, the waste is easily swept into a dust-pan, thus keeping the wife in "smiling humour.". It is oak stained and varnished, and looks very nice. The top can be used for photo frames and small ornaments, as shown. It stands in a recess, and is greatly admired by all who have seen it, and the idea may be useful to other fanciers. I have found some of the ideas in CAGE BIRDS useful, and perhaps someone will find this so; I shall be pleased to give anyone particulars. The photograph shows a variegated Mule and a Goldfinch on the left, and a Light Mule on the right.

Are there "Pot Hunters" in the Western Counties?

SIR,—Noticing a letter in CAGE BIRDS about fanciers not supporting shows, can it be wondered at, I ask, when you see a specialist always crowning every show in the district, never giving the novice the slightest chance of getting into the money, for which chance he has paid so dearly? The novice has been the back-bone of the Fancy, but cannot continue if the "up-to-date exhibitor" monopolises every local show, not even stopping out when the secretary of his own society is appointed to judge. How can you expect entries? We all like to see shows well-patronised; still, the novice must be encouraged, and the sooner our "up-to-date" exhibitors stay their hands for a time from being, shall I say "selfish pot-hunters"? the better for the Fancy. Nothing so disheartens the novice as continually coming in contact with the above. I write this purely for the love of the Fancy, and hope it may meet the eye of some who never give the novice a chance of winning a money prize.

WESTERN BIRD.

A Noted Breeder of Belgian Canaries.

SIR,—I have pleasure in sending you a photograph of Mr. John Fairly (Coatbridge), a well-known and highly-respected breeder of Belgian Canaries in the North. He was the winner of the trophy for the highest number of points in Belgians last season, is a thorough craftsman in his hobby, and a splendid judge of his particular Fancy. I give a list of a few of his winnings. Winner of several medals of the U.K.B.C.A., and shield, gold medal at Manchester Show, gold medal at the Scottish National, bronze medal at the City of Glasgow, and at the Crystal Palace Show for 1909. He also won gold medal, bronze medal, Reddihough silver challenge cup at the Crystal Palace, also the Palace certificate, having the highest aggregate of points in the Belgian classes for the season of 1909-10. Mr. Fairly is well known as a competitor at the principal Scottish shows, and across the border. He is possessed of capital stock, sparing neither money nor trouble, and having a thorough knowledge of a good class Belgian. He has succeeded in procuring from some of the most noted breeders in Belgium several stock birds of a very high order, and last season reared some very promising youngsters. A true sportsman with a well-balanced temperament, when defeat faces him on the show bench, he meets it with a sportsmen-like spirit, and makes up his mind to do better next time. There is no more enthusiastic breeder than our friend Mr. Fairly. He has had a record season of winnings, and he allows that much of his success may be attributed to Mrs. Fairly and his son, whose care and attention are much appreciated by him, and who are as deeply interested as he is himself. Mr. Fairly always extends to fanciers a hearty welcome, and to the beginner who pays him a visit he is ever ready to give advice, and a "push forward" in carrying out the hobby. The Palace cup is not included in the group.

Restoring a Canary's Feathers.

SIR,—I saw in one of the back numbers of CAGE BIRDS, among the Queries, that someone had a singing Canary that was bare round the neck. I had one at the same time, and it was a sight, I can tell you. He had given up eating, and was pining away. I gave him 20 drops of oxymel of squills and syrup of rhubarb and syrup of violets, in his water every day for a week with bread scalded with milk and egg bread. I had him breaking out again in three weeks. The father cost £2 10s. He is a grand one now. I have had some good information from your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.

Help Wanted from Skylark Keepers.

SIR,—I think I can give a little help to Mr. S. Knight if he will try and follow the advice as to feeding. The first thing is to make your own Lark food. There are a hundred and one ways of feeding Larks. Remember all Lark food must be cooked in the oven for at least 20 minutes; no seed to be cooked with it. You can give a Lark all kind of seeds, and let the seeds and food be half and half. The seed to mix with the food is Canary, white millet, German rape, crushed hemp, also ants' eggs. The Lark will eat almost anything, and any kind of seeds—linseed, carraway seeds, etc. I think Mr. Knight's birds have been short of seed. The following will be found to be good and cheap, but remember the cheapest is not always the best. Get half-pound of pea-meal, quarter-pound ground rice, one egg beaten up, and cook all in oven for 20 minutes. Add 1d. of beef dripping before you put same in the oven. Add any kind of seed you like, but to the above be sure and add one big table spoonful of maw seed. And if you will add 1d. of almond nuts (ground), it will be the better for it. If this does not suit Mr. Knight, I will with pleasure tell him of a few more ways of making food. Every fancier has his own way of feeding, and seldom makes food twice together alike, not because it is not good, but because he wants to try and improve on it. Do not forget that the bird wants meal-worms—two or three per day; it is better to give too few than too many. For looseness in the Lark's bowels I have tried nothing better than cold tea. Give clean food every day. Keep your stock food in a tin or something with a lid on to keep the dust and dirt out. As for paying 7s. 6d. for a Lark, it must have been a good contest singer for the price. You can get a fine bird for the 6d. without the 7s. If you will try one and make a pet of him, lift his cage down every day, talk to him, and give him a meal-worm to tame him. Keep his cage clean, and give plenty of sand or road dirt. Keep him in the house, but not in the kitchen, which is too hot at times; take him to another room. Do not be afraid to write to CAGE BIRDS; there are plenty who are willing to help if they could only write and had time.

ALEX DONELLY.

SIR,—I was surprised to read that your correspondent, Mr. Knight puts his Skylarks out of doors at this time of year, as I think this was the cause of the death of the bird. I never put any of my Larks outside, only in the summer. I have had one for twelve years, and it is fourteen years old this summer, and is in full song by now. But I never feed him on any packet foods; I prefer to make my own, and I find they get on well with it. I feed mine as follows: I get ½lb. of pea-meal, 2 tablespoonfuls oatmeal, half-spoonful sugar, half-spoonful salt, and a little of beef fat; and I give them a little green food twice a week, cut up into a spoonful of the food.

G. W. H.

SIR,—If Mr. Knight will feed his Larks on the following he ought to have some which will live for from ten to eighteen years, viz., sifted oatmeal, pea-meal, and barley-meal. Use no water, but grated carrot in place of it. Give stale bread that has been put in a hot oven, and liver grated like fine sand. Give a turf every other day. Keep sand at the bottom of cage (¼in. deep); this cleans the feet of the birds, and also does for a dust bath. Occasionally sponge the birds with quassia water (tepid), and dry with a Turkish towel. Now for tit-bits; give yolk of egg that has been in water at boiling point for 45 minutes; grated, it all falls to pieces. Then give crushed hemp seed (a tablespoonful) and also throw a teaspoonful of Canary seed on the sand for the Lark to pick up—not with his food. If Mr. Knight will come down to my house, I will show him any day how I manage mine from the nest and breed Larks in an aviary. I can stroke mine as one would stroke a dog. I open the cage doors and they come to me. Give also four meal-worms daily; more than this scours a Lark. You must feed as near to Nature as you can. It is impossible to hear yourself speak at times in my house owing to the song of my pets. As Mr. Knight has got one of Sandiford's crushers (seed mills), he should be able to pass the seed through without any trouble. I had one, and I should say it saved me at least £10 in food and £50 in birds. I trust Mr. Knight will not go back on his favourite bird, which has been mine for 50 years. I have had as many as 100 Larks in some of my houses. Let him catch all the flies he can in summer with beer (not fly-papers, which contain arsenic), and save them for the winter. A Lark will catch a lot in his cage in the course of a day. Watch him and see the Lark catch the fly. Ants' eggs are also beneficial, and a little grated apple occasionally, but I say don't mix water with soft-bill birds' food. They won't live many years in a cage if you do. It is a good plan to boil your water one day ahead where you have no rain water. A small sprig of saffron in water once a week makes their voice heard, so to speak.

G. TURNEY.

SIR,—In reference to Lark feeding, I have one (a last year's bird) which is a cock, and sings to himself, but not loudly. I feed him on Capern's new food, meal-worms (3 and 4 a day), crushed hemp seed and bread rubbed through the hands till it is all crumbs; and I sprinkle with sherry. But he seems to eat hardly anything, and will not take a bath at all, and I have tried him several times. He is also troubled with diarrhœa, and I don't know how to prevent it. Perhaps some of your readers will enlighten me?

W. J. E.

SIR,—I see in CAGE BIRDS a fancier asks for advice re the keeping of a Lark. He says he can keep one no longer than six months after which they then die. I am a Lark fancier, and have kept them for years without their dying. Your correspondent is referring to the gas in the house; if he keeps the bird under the gas it will take no hurt. I feed mine on the following: 1lb. of pea-meal, 2 eggs beaten up in a cup, half-cup milk, nut of bacon fat (if not fat a bit of lard), a handful of crushed hemp, ditto German rape, and ditto sugar, with some cheese chopped up small, and two meal-worms daily. This makes a delicious dish for them. Now mix all these up together until you are unable to see any dry pea-meal. Put the dish containing it in a warm oven, and heat the food; bake for about 20 minutes; keep stirring it now and then to keep it from setting. When it is baked just give it to the bird as it is. If there are any lumps roll with the rolling-pin to make it small for the bird to eat.

SAMUEL THOMPSON.

How to Arm Nets.

SIR,—In reply to "Amateur" re arming of nets, asking for further instructions, I am pleased to give him same. Take the top line of your net which you want to arm, and put the last mesh on a hook in the wall about 3ft. high, and stretch it out so that you can easily pick up the meshes. Now make a loop of some twine and pin on the hook to start your arming on. Having done this, take your needle and tie the end of the twine to the loop. Now net one mesh on to the loop, with your 3in. mesh. Slip that one off the mesh. Now take your needle and thread it through four of the meshes of your net along the top, starting from the hook, your needle pointing towards you. Now net another mesh. This time you will have 4 stitches on the loop. Slip that off your mesh, and now net another, but don't pick up any meshes on this one. Slip this off, and then repeat the first, viz., picking up 4 meshes again, and next time miss the meshes, repeating right the whole length of your net. The bottom loops will have your net on, and the top loops will be for your top line, but don't make a mistake, or you will have to cut it out up to the mistake. Use any size arming twine; it makes not the least difference. Trusting you will be able to understand above, and will be of use to you and others. I may say I have made almost all kinds of nets from rabbit nets to fishing nets, including cast nets, this being my hobby, like bird breeding, and I take great interest in same.

All prize money has been paid from Woolwich Show, writes Mr. W. Pawley, the hon. secretary, and all birds were dispatched within one hour of the close of the show, with only one mistake, which has since been put right.

I have handed over the secretaryship of the Manchester and N.C.O.S. after 10 years of service in that capacity, writes Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe, and the new holder of the reins is Mr. H. Boothman (8, Kettering Road, Levenshulme, Manchester).

The L. and P.O.S. annual dinner will be held at the "Horse Shoe" Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, W., on January 20, at 7 p.m. Will members and friends desirous of attending please communicate with me, as the seating plan is being arranged early in the week? We are in for a record this time.—H. E. Tringham, hon. sec., Old Barge House Wharf, Commercial Road, Blackfriars, London, S.E.

Kindly allow me, writes Mr. Wm. Elliott, secretary, West Stanley and District C.B.S., through your valuable paper, to convey to Mrs. Mason, of Dipton, our deepest sympathy with regard to her husband, Mr. Matt. Mason, one of our members and secretary of the Dipton C.B.S., who is at present in hospital with fever. We, the members of the West Stanley C.B.S., wish him a speedy recovery, and that he will be restored to her for many years to come.

I hear a little rumour, writes "Old Fancier," that the oldest British Bird and Mule exhibitor amongst the Tredegar fanciers has resigned. When asked the reason, he said it was because he did not believe in fanciers putting on classes to suit themselves, and now they had struck out the dark Mule and most of the British classes, and put a special prize up only for two of themselves. He did not want local classes, but classes as last year, and the specials to be left open to every one.

The committee of the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, in arranging to hold the annual dinner on Thursday, January 20th, at the "Horse Shoe" Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, W., trust all members will be present, with as many friends as possible. Ladies are specially invited. Special attention is being given to the musical arrangements; several well-known artistes have given their consent to appear during the evening.

The annual balance-sheet of the City and Suburban A.C.B. shows the society to be in a splendidly flourishing condition, the cash balances being £23 19s., and the total assets £67 2s. 1d. A remarkable feature of this association's finance is well put by the popular hon. secretary, Mr. V. Wynn, who, when sending the balance-sheet, writes: "In glancing over the accounts for the year, I find that the £23 5s. received from members' has been returned to them in the shape of special prizes and postage, with the exception of three pounds. I think you will agree with me that from a purely business point of view they get value for their money, without considering the other side of the question, which, as you well know, is my strong point." The society is certainly to be complimented upon its present position.

I have this week sold to a gentleman in Scotland my cock variegated unflighted yellow, winner of first at Darlington and York, for the sum of £7 7s., writes Mr. Alfred Grey (Morpeth). I have also sold to a gentleman in Sheffield my winning yellow hen, first at Scottish National, first Sunderland, etc. This same gentleman also bought nine more of my Norwich, for which he paid me the sum of £31 10s. I see there are some fanciers who think that it is not in the interest of the Fancy to have these gentlemen buying up these good birds, but I beg to differ from them. I think it is such men as these who keep the Fancy alive and make it worth one's while to devote his brains and time to his stock. "Let them all come; the more the merrier," and set yourself to breed birds to beat those you have sold.

As will be seen from our advertisement in your valuable paper, writes Mr. Allan Black, jun., the secretary, a new society has been formed in Irvine and district, and the members are holding what they intend to be an annual exhibition, on February 5th. We are catering specially for cage birds, and are guaranteeing prize money, and offering a very large number of valuable specials. We have secured Mr. A. Chalmers as judge, and the classes offered should secure us a large entry.

Lizard fanciers will perhaps be pleased to know, writes Mr. A. Donnelly, that I am once more able to get a start with my old favourites, the Lizards, through the kindness of my old friend, Mr. E. Lowe, of Oldham, and Mr. A. Martin, of Shaw, who have given me a good start. And I must not forget the kindness of Mr. F. Steeple, secretary of the Oldham Society, who has always been my friend. I wish them every success. Will friends please note my change of address to 68, Cheatham Road, Swinton, near Manchester.

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. Percy Parker, joint secretary of the City of Wakefield O.S., that two of the members who were to act as stewards at our show had a family hereavement on the Friday night, a telegram coming to Mr. Atkinson (a Norwich breeder) whilst he was unpacking the birds, to say his father was dying. Mr. Midgley, another Norwich and Yorkshire breeder, had his father-in-law die on the Friday afternoon. The members greatly sympathise with both families.

The January issue of the "Avicultural Magazine" contains among other interesting articles one by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A. (on the Nesting of the Great Whydah—illustrated), another by Mr. Frank Finn, F.Z.S. ("On Two Curious Australian Species of Anatidæ"—illustrated), and another by Mr. J. Lewis Bonhote (on "The Nesting of the Bahama Amazon"). A very beautiful coloured plate of "Hybrids between Australian Finch and Star Finch" graces this number, and it is accompanied by some notes by Mr. Herbert D. Astley.

From Canada.

Mr. W. A. Lott sends us a card of greeting, which has reached him from Mr. Jones, now of Battleford, Canada, at one time a well-known London fancier. On it is written this interesting message: Snow Buntings came a few days ago around my "shack," the only living things to be seen, and thousands of them. The east wind has been blowing furiously for the last two days. Thermometer 7 below zero. Nice hot spot near stove in one corner of "shack," freezing in another. Ink just thawed out, also some bacon, butter, and cheese in frying pan for tea. A merry 'Xmas and prosperous New Year.

Aylesbury's New Society.

A new society has been formed in Aylesbury, to be known as the Aylesbury Fanciers' Society. Annual subscription 2s. 6d. per annum, with 1s. entry fee. Fanciers are cordially invited to join; radius 10 miles (air line). Particulars may be had from Messrs. Fountain and Inch, hon. secs., High Street, Aylesbury.

A New Irish Society.

A number of breeders and fanciers have decided to form a club to be called the Holywood and District Cage Bird Society. We are all enthusiastic amateurs, and hope to both help the hobby along and help one another onward as well. We shall be very glad to hear from any bird lovers who will join us, and assist to make the society a success.—F. Cole (7, High Street, Holywood, co. Down, Ireland).

Wedding Bells at Eccleshill.

A very interesting and pretty wedding took place on December 27th last (writes a Yorkshire correspondent), when Miss S. A. Wilcock, the only daughter of that veteran fancier, Mr. J. Wilcock, was married to Mr. George Bullock, of Sheffield. The ceremony took place in the Methodist Chapel at Eccleshill, with full choir and organ accompaniment. The bridge was charmingly dressed, and accompanied by two bridesmaids, while her father gave her away. About 100 guests sat down to the wedding breakfast, and the presents were very handsome and useful. The bride-cake was made by a well-known lady fancier and presented to the happy pair, and was greatly appreciated by all who tasted it.

READERS SHOULD MAKE CERTAIN that with this Birthday Number they receive the two coloured plates, viz., "A Group of Gems from Foreign Climes," so very charmingly executed by Mr. H. Goodchild, and "A Study in Yorkshire Canaries," which reveals at its best Mr. Norman's great skill as a delineator of typical Canaries. In addition to these plates, there are included with it a calendar in colours which combines in artistic manner paintings by Messrs. Goodchild, Norman, and Rankin, and a photographic supplement printed upon art paper.

Despite our request to advertisers and correspondents generally to send their announcements for this special issue to reach us at an early date, there has been a rush of advertisements and other "copy" at a late moment, and this has necessitated the holding over of several reports of meetings, shows, etc., the delayed publication of which we ask our readers to kindly overlook.

CANARY QUERIES.

Wasting Seed.

W. P. T.—A similar case was dealt with at length last week, but in your case there is probably some digestive derangement. In addition to the staple of Canary seed, give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day. Stop the hemp seed and egg and biscuit, and give in its place a small piece of bread scalded in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed two days in each week for a fortnight. Also stop giving apple, and if you can obtain watercress free from frost, give a small spray of this three times a week instead. If you cannot get suitable greenstuff, then substitute a morsel of banana or boiled or raw carrot. A small cube of hard common salt may also be stuck in the wires for it to peck at. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and during the next week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day.

How to Distinguish Sex.

No Nom de Plume.—It is quite easy to write down certain directions, but most difficult to make one see what is really to a great extent a kind of instinct which can only be gained by observation and experience. As a general rule, the cock is rather larger, decidedly bolder, and more pushful in carriage and demeanour, shows a more graceful curve in outline from lower breast to under tail coverts, has a bolder eye, and is altogether more "cockey" in appearance in comparison with the hen. His call has a clearer and more mellow note, and when he sings the throat swells and pulsates very plainly with the notes. Some hens sing a little, but the notes are generally very short and broken, and there is rarely much throbbing of the throat perceptible. If caught and the feathers of the abdomen blown aside the vent of the cock will be found more prominent and pointed than is that of a hen, which is more flat and expansive. As you have no experience you had better rely solely upon song, and hear the birds sing a good round of notes, not a mere twittering, then you will not be far wrong in selecting cocks.

An Aviary Puzzle.

C. Treadway.—Your bird is undoubtedly exposed to great variations of heat, or to cold draughts. If the cage is near the gas is should be moved further away, so that the bird will not be affected by the heat radiated from the flame when jet is lit. It should also, if possible, be no higher than the level of the gas burner. Then it must be kept well away from the heat of a fire which only burns by day, in order to avoid extremes of heat and cold. At the same time it must not be exposed to any cold draughts. Feed for a month on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and once a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, inga, and gold of pleasure, and on one other day a morsel of bread steeped in cold milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a spray of water-cress three or four times a week when obtainable in good condition, at other times substitute a small piece of ripe banana. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water mix twenty drops of whiskey, ten of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil. Shake well together before putting on cage, and give it every second day for a week.

Various.

Great Crested Grebe.—The proverb runs that needs must, when somebody unmentionable drives; and as you have nothing larger than breeding cages, these, of course, will have to provide sufficient exercise. Do not overcrowd them with perches, and keep two or three hens in each. They will, to a certain extent, provide exercise for themselves by arguing the social problem with each other. Keep an eye on them to see that a particularly spiteful or vicious one does not do actual damage to the others. Keep cages scrupulously clean. To prevent the adiposity cut off the mixed seed, all soft food, and substitute green food (watercress) liberally, as the sole accompaniment of plain Canary seed for a week. Also add a pinch of Epsom salts and a few drops of lemon juice to the drinking water twice a week for the time being. As regards the egg food substitute, if you obtained a good brand of preserved yolk of egg, and mixed with it an equal bulk of crushed plain biscuits, and an equal bulk of crushed maizena wafer biscuits, blended well together, and stored in a tin with a close fitting lid, you would have a very efficient egg food that would keep good for weeks, and would be always ready for use by slightly damping the quantity required, or giving it quite dry if the birds take it freely in that form. This, I think, would suit your purpose much better than such cakes as you suggest trying.

Stopped Singing.

W. Williams.—If the bird is in perfect health he certainly should not have given up singing; at this season he should have been singing stronger almost every day. But the fact that he appears in perfect health shows there cannot be anything very seriously wrong. Did he moult at the usual time last autumn? If he did not, it is quite probable he is about moulting now, in which case he will have commenced to shed his feathers by the time this reply appears, and all you need do is to keep him rather on the warm side in order to expedite the process and get it well over before the breeding season begins. Another probable cause is that the cage may be badly infested with red mites. Examine it thoroughly and probe any holes, cracks, or open joints with a pin, scraping them out on to a piece of white paper. If any mites are discovered, overhaul the cage and thoroughly clean it. There is yet another probable cause, which is that the bird was in breeding condition, and you may have introduced a hen into his sight, or close proximity. If none of these causes prove correct, you had better write again and say how you feed and treat the bird generally. Meantime, give a spray of watercress daily, and add a pinch of Epsom salts to its drinking water for two consecutive days.

Food Reform Needed.

F. J.—Your system of feeding is thoroughly bad, and is doubtless at the root of your troubles. As a staple diet, if you are going to breed with the birds, give plain Canary seed only, and every second day give separately in addition a half teaspoonful of summer rape. Twice a week give a few grains of hemp, and once a week give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, the surplus fluid pressed out, dusted with fine sugar, and sprinkled with a pinch of inga and gold of pleasure seed. Three times a week give a spray of watercress if obtainable in good condition, otherwise a morsel of banana, boiled carrot, or apple. Keep cage perfectly clean and strewn with gritty sand. If you are only keeping the birds for singing, you may give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape as a staple, and omit the separate supply of rape. As regards queries: (1) Certainly, leave this to nature and do not attempt to force on a moult. If the bird really did not moult last season, it may drop into moult as soon as the weather gets warm and settled. (2) The above diet should bring this bird round. Give the bread and milk as ndvised above every second day for a week, twice in the second week and then once a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the second week six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. See that he is not troubled with red mites.

Getting Forward.

W.R.W.—Your feeding is partly to blame for the forward conditiou of the birds, and your keeping the birds together would be a very strong inducement for them to think about setting up housekeeping under such circumstnnces. It would be much better to keep the birds in a cosy room without a fire than in the kitchen, but if you cannot arrange to do this you should keep the cages well away from the fire to avoid both the heat and the great finctuations as much as possible, and see they are quite out of reach of draughts, and the cages so arranged that the birds cannot see each other continually. Continue to give the hen a staple diet of plain Canary seed only, and in addition to this give a small pinch of summer rape every second day, and once each week discontinue the rape and substitute a pinch of inga instead. Give a spray of watercress, or a morsel of banana if the greenstuff cannot be obtained in good condition, three times a week. Stop the hemp altogether, and limit the diet of the hen solely to the above. For the first three days add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water. The egg she has laid, provided the performance is not repeated, will not make any difference to her breeding at the proper time. Feed the cock as above, except that you may give him a few grains only of hemp twice a week in addition to the rape, and once a week a morsel of bread and milk.

Moving Starts Moulting.

J. L. (Leeds). — It is most probable that the change from the bird-room to the bright corner of your living room involved a great change of temperature to the bird, and this, coupled with the extremely variable weather, has doubtless been the sole cause of the bird dropping into moult. Of course, I am presuming that you are sure the bird moulted at the proper time last autumn, as if it failed to drop into moult at the proper time, it would be nothing at all uncommon for it to commence moulting soon after its removal to the living room in the way you say it did, and that being the case, instead of trying to stop the moult, you should keep the bird warm and cosy in order to encourage the process and get it over as quickly as possible. As it is near a window you must assure yourself that it is not exposed to any cold draught, and do not keep it too near a fire which is only allowed to burn by day, as this would only aggravate any fluctuation of heat that may exist. If it really did moult last autumn, you must still keep it from exposure to chills or great variations, but not necessarily very warm, and feed and treat it altogether for a month, the same as ndvised to "J. H. Haynes," and stop the egg food and any other food you may be giving, which is not included in the reply mentioned.

Yorkshire Moulting.

J. H. Haynes.—If there are no other doors or windows but those marked on sketch, the arrangement of cages is all that could be desired, and if these birds completed their moult last year it is doubtless the extremely variable weather which has started them moulting afresh. Keep them comfortably warm, but not over-heated, and avoid great fluctuations and cold draughts. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and give separately, in addition half a teaspoonful of hemp and a morsel of ripe banana every second day, and on the alternate days a half teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. Get a pennyworth of ammouiated citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist, dissolve it in an ounce of tincture of gentian ,and give ten drops of this in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards for another week or until the moulting ceases. All the seeds sent are of poor quality. The hemp contains a large number of damaged and unripe grains; the canary is very small and thin, and none too sweet; and the so-called rape is probably charlock. Get some genuine summer rape to replace the latter.

Moulting Again.

Scotch Boy.—I presume the bird moulted in the ordinary course last autumn, as you say nothing on that point. The probability is the moult has been brought about by the bird's being subject to extremes of heat and cold for more or less long intervals, either at or in transit to and from shows, and you might perhaps have been over-showing her. Do not show her again this season at all, not even at a local one day event. Keep her in a comfortably warm, but not hot, place, free from draughts or great fluctuations, and well ventilated. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight, give about half a teaspoonful of hemp, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of tincture of steel, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week. If the hen bathes freely, there should be no necessity at all for spraying her. Do not be in a hurry to mate her this coming spring. The second week in April should be early enough at the best.

Brevities.

Moulting (Scotch Boy).—I had anticipated the facts given in your second letter in replying to the first, so you may confidently follow the treatment advised. Being kept in the kitchen may indirectly have led up to the moult. If proper care is taken of her, and the treatment duly carried out, this moult may be over in a month, or even less. But whatever the time is, you must not think of mating her for at least a month after she has done moulting. The time for mating her will be found in other reply.

Effect of Amputation (Broken Leg).—As you say the bird has now no foot at all, I assume the foot was amputated when broken. Considering the position of the fracture, this was doubtless the very best method to adopt. (1) If healthy and active in all other respects, it is quite possible the loss will not prove a very serious obstacle to successful mating. (2) I should expect no difficulty in the incubation process. There may be a certain amount of risk of the eggs being accidentally broached by the stump of the leg, but if this did not occur, there is no reason why the hen should not hatch them out. If she is a valuable bird, it might be worth your while to obviate the risk mentioned by putting the eggs under a foster hen to hatch and rear the young.

In-Breeding (G. W., Novice).—No, it is not advisable to mate brother and sister for the sake of making up a pair. This is only to be tolerated when some special object is in view, and the circumstances are favourable—that is, if the parents have not themselves been closely in-bred, and both parents and the birds to be so mated are strong, healthy specimens. The young resulting from the union must not again be very closely in-bred the following season. If you merely wished to make up a pair without obtaining fresh stock, it would even be preferable to make the two pairs by mating father and daughter, and mother and son. But the best course is to sell or exchange one of the birds, and obtain another that is unrelated, to mate with the one kept.

Effects of Fall (T.H.K.).—You do not say how long ago it is since the fall. If not more than three or four weeks, I should be inclined to think one of the legs was broken high up, near the body, where you could not see the mischief, nor discover it without handling the bird. This supposition would quite explain its behaviour since, and if you have not handled the bird, and kept it quiet, the mischief would remedy itself far better than by any assistance you could have given, and in a month or so the bird should gradually resume its activity. I would therefore advise you to leave it entirely alone for a time, and do nothing beyond seeing that it does not become constipated by giving a sufficiency of green food, or boiled carrot, or a pinch of Epsom salts in its water, to prevent it. If it shows no improvement in, say, six or eight weeks from the time of the accident, write again.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

In an Aviary.

"One Who Would, etc."—You would do well to peruse the reply given "Enthusiastic Beginner" in this issue. A cock Siskin, Linnet, Bramblefinch, and Canary would do well to turn in to your two hen Goldies, and one hen Greenie and Chaffinch. If you don't want to have a Canary, try two cock Linnets, or a cock Redpoll. Firs, holly, box, privet, ivy, and similar evergreens are very suitable for use in aviaries. Out of bundles of peasticks, too, very cosy "nesting corners" can be contrived; also dead branches of fir, etc., trees. A supply of the ordinary nesting material (nestbags) should be put in the aviary, and old Linnet, Greenfinch, Blackbird, etc., nests be pulled apart and left lying about (it is not difficult to get these from the country). One or two used but serviceable Thrush and Blackbird nests can be fixed in likely spots about the aviary, likewise ordinary wooden nest-boxes, and Roller Canary travelling (wicker) cages, with the front bars and inside fitments removed. Some birds even like a flower-pot to build in, and I have known others choose a back-cage which has been hung in the aviary with the door open. You should read some of the articles which have appeared in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL this last two years (1908 and 1909); if not out of print, that is. They would help you very much.

Two Kinds of Blackcaps.

Bermon.—There is only one kind of Blackcap, namely, the Blackcap Warbler, I do not call to mind any other Warbler with a black crown. But several other species of birds are known locally as "blackcaps," this being a regular country name for such widely-different species as the Bullfinch and the Great (Oxeye) Tit. The bird you have, however, is neither of these (as probably you are aware), but the Marsh Tit, another bird (along with the Coal Tit) also rejoicing in the local name of "blackcap." The latter is also a dealer's name for the bird; but if it was sold to you as a Blackcap "Warbler," then the dealer ought to have known better. You do not say how much you paid for it; Marsh Tits are sold for a few pence each, but Blackcap Warblers always fetch several shillings each. The easiest way to achieve a change of food would be to purchase a supply of one or other of the good quality insectivorous mixtures advertised in our columns, and use mixed with a little of your usual stock food. A complete change is often viewed with suspicion by the birds themselves.

Wholesale Hybrid Breeding.

Experimental.—Your plans read very interestingly, and I heartily wish you success. I am sure that an account of your experiences would be perused with great interest and profit by readers of CAGE BIRDS if you would only pen same at the end of the season. I should like to hear the result very much myself. Perhaps the reply given "Enthusiastic Beginner" this week may interest you; or you may already be cognisant of the facts stated therein. Rare and promising crosses to try would be Reed Bunting-Yellowhammer, Siskin-Bullfinch, Hawfinch-Bullfinch, Bramblefinch-Bullfinch, Chaffinch-Bullfinch, and either Bramblefinch or Chaffinch and Canary British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

(or both). You say you "see plenty of the Redpoll-Bullfie hybrids about by the show lists"; I am only aware of two, however. As regards the Foreign bird hybrids you will have to consult our Mr. Page concerning them; they do not come in my department. I quite agree that a Weaver (Orange Bishop) and Linnet or Weaver and Canary hybrid would be a grand bird; but I don't think you could hope to breed it. However, I am open to be convinced. The hen Greenies would make you real good foster-parents. You want to be careful over the removal of the eggs. It would be wise to wait until the full clutch is laid (not interfering at all in the meantime), and then to substitute another clutch for them, say those of wild birds (Linnets, Greenies, etc.), letting the hens sit them and hatch and rear the young.

Mule Breeding.

A Failure.—If the method you outline includes all the food-stuffs used, then I consider that the cause of your failure is easily located. Anyway, you did not feed the parents in a manner which commends itself to me. If the hens feed properly, I am sure there is no excuse for losing young Mules. I reared a good number last season without any loss worthy of mention, and with very little trouble. The chief thing (in my opinion) is to arrange for a constant supply of seeding chickweed and shepherd's-purse, and these can be grown in profusion in any back garden or gathered in practically every country lane. I am no advocate for minced egg mixed with arrowroot biscuit and soaked rape seed. I prefer egg and good home-made bread (crumbled), with a little castor sugar dusted amongst it; nothing else (seed, etc.) with it. In addition, I give Canary and summer rape (mixed) in the seed-hopper, with cracked hemp in a separate dish, frequently with a few crushed groats or a little coarse oatmeat amongst it. I give a few young and tender sprays of chickweed when the "babies" are two days old, and quickly increase the quantity until I am giving this ad libitum, with seeding shepherd's-purse in addition. Some of my hens feed almost solely upon these green-foods, and they rear me rare lusty youngsters. Boiled seed is quite unnecessary.

In Another Aviary.

Enthusiastic Beginner.—I hope your enthusiasm is of the lasting variety, for I am afraid it is likely to get seriously damped so far as hybrid breeding goes in your indoor aviary. It is curious how easy many seem to think the breeding of hybrids. But they eventually learn that it is not quite merely a matter of providing a fairly spacious aviary and turning in a mixed lot of birds. It is not all hen British birds that will go to nest in captivity; few rear their young successfully if they get so far as nestiug. Then the other birds are very liable to interfere with the domestic arrangements of their companions whose inclinations turn towards the raising of a family; they spoil the nest, smash the eggs, etc. Sometimes a nest of young get reared, but not often under such conditions. If the number of pairs is strictly limited (or one pair only put in) then one's chances become much brighter. Three or four pairs would be ample for your place; say, hen Bullie, Greenie, Chaffinch, and Linnet, with cock Canary, Bramblefinch, Goldfinch, and Siskin. If you put in cock Greenie paired to hen Chaffinch, and cock Chaffie paired to hen Greenie, they will simply separate again. Note reply this week to "One Who Would."

Brevities.

On the Beak (Blackburn).—Try touching over the hard lump on the beak daily with a stick of caustic (obtainable from a chemist). This should "burn" it away. Do it carefully, and do not continue the treatment too long.

A Linnet Matter (C.T.F.).—I think your bird is a hen. I have no hesitation in saying that a cock Linnet which has been kept caged in good health for over two years must (absolutely must) have sung, and sung well, before this. All hen Linnets are not exceptionally thickly pencilled on the breast; there are exceptions. Further, the white on the flight feathers is not (you can take this from me) by any means a good sex guide. The seed mixture sent is good enough for any Linnet.

No Further Losses (Noviss).—I am very glad to hear you have had no further losses of birds. I don't think the somewhat poor light by any means a serious matter. Neither is the cutting of the claws; on the contrary, it is very simple and easy, and ought certainly to be done, as over-grown nails are a source of great inconvenience and no little danger to captive birds. Cracked seed is very valuable for newly-caught birds.

A Bramblefinch's Wings (W. T. Walton).—Broken tips of wing feathers certainly count against show specimens; in fact, are quite a serious blemish if the damage is very palpable. A keen judge is not at all likely to fail to notice and take into consideration faulty wing flights. You do not state clearly, however, how much damage has been caused. This must decide you as to whether you keep the bird at home while new flights grow. At local shows, for instance, the bird might be good enough to pull through despite the broken tips.

Hybrid Breeding with Skylark (Lancaster).—I suppose it would not do for me to say that you would stand no chance of breeding hybrids from a Skylark, for strange things happen. But it would be a very, very slender chance. It is difficult to see what other British bird there is which you could pair to it, except the Shorelark (a winter visitor), and this is not by any means common or easily obtainable. I have heard of Skylarks (a pair) breeding successfully in a very large outdoor cage. But hybrids is "a horse of another colour," as the saying goes.

An Indoor Aviary (T.B.).—I have often expressed the opinion that a small table aviary such as yours (30 in. long, 14 wide, and 40 high) is far more suited to hold a collection of small foreign seed-eaters (if of half or five-eighths gauge wire) than British seed-eaters. The latter seldom get tame (unless tame before being put in it), and are very apt to quarrel, neither of which disabilities apply in the case of the Foreigners. You might try (if determined to do so) a cock Goldie, Bullie, Linnet, Redpoll, Twite, and Siskin; they are easily obtainable, and the likeliest selection to afford you pleasure.

Hawfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid (No nom-de-plume).—You must certainly get a Siberian hen Bullie as the mate for the cock Hawfinch. The latter should be a small bird; very small, for choice. The best plan is to keep them for a few weeks in a double breeding cage, with the centre wired slide between them, so that they may get used to each other's looks, then to draw the slide and let them run together. Even then there are sure to be "alarums and excursions" for a time, though eventually the couple should settle down all right. It certainly is useless to keep in separate rooms individuals one intends to breed with.

A Skylark Matter (J.W.).—Go to a good chemist and buy a small bottle of Parrish's Chemical Food. Mix a small half-teaspoonful of the latter among the Skylark's daily allowance of soft food. This will strengthen him if continued for a fortnight and upwards. See that he does not become constipated (a little Epsom salts in the drinking water soon puts this right). The medicine should brace him up, and this also helps to "clear" (strengthen) his voice. A few shreds of saffron (from the chemist) placed in the drinking water is the old fanciers' "tip" for the latter trouble.

Breeding with Two Mules (S.J.E.).—You will find it only so much time wasted if you try to breed with either the cock or the hen Linnet Mule. Cock Mules will not fertilise eggs, and hen Mules will not lay fertile eggs. One or two exceptions to this rule have been notified in our columns, but for practical purposes these cannot claim to count. Of course, if it is your desire to experiment as to whether Mules will breed or not, by all means go ahead. But if you want to finish the season with a few young birds, take my advice (borrowed from "Punch") and don't. Far better put up a cock Linnet with a hen Canary; or a pair of Canaries.

A Puzzle (Hail).—Judging from your description, the bird sent amongst the Linnets is a cock Reed Bunting in winter plumage. They are often exhibited, and a first-rate specimen makes a good show bird. They eat little seed other than Canary; with a mealworm or two daily, and a little insectivorous mixture now and again. They have no song worthy of the name; an irritating jumble of irritating notes is my own view of it.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Budgerigar in Bad Plumage.

W. Turner.—It is possible this bird is constitutionally weak; many such become almost naked and objects of pity. If yours is kept in a cage, see it is not infested with mites; if it is, wash it in quassia solution, and scald out the cage. It is no good freeing the bird from the pests if the cage is not also thoroughly cleansed and the mites exterminated. These birds are small drinkers, and it is not possible to give them drugs in any quantity; for three days running put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into each ounce of the drinking water, and follow this by a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. If there should be at any time any signs of constipation, promptly give a dose of Dinneford's, as above, which will soon give relief. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, few oats, green-food, ripe fruit (if they will eat it), cuttlefish, and grit. At the present juncture a little stale household bread, moistened with water, and then well dusted with flowers of sulphur, will be a help.

Australian Cockatoo Unwell.

Summers.—The treatment, with one exception, appears to have been wrong all through, and the same applies to the diet. It is most certainly worth trying to pull it round, though, of course, the issue is now rather doubtful. Cease present remedies, also milk, tea, and coffee sops. Give a daily supply of boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day), well dusting it with flowers of sulphur after all water has been drained away. Supply seed mixture as follows: Canary, oats, dari, maize, hemp, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts; keep a piece of cuttlefish continually in the cage, and Parrot grit scattered over sand tray. Boiled potato may be given, and will certainly do no harm if it is free from all fats. Soak half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into a piece of plain biscuit, and when it is partially dry, supply to the bird. Continue this on three successive days, and afterwards supply Parrish's Chemical Food in the same manner, also keep the drinking water coloured with same. Spray the bird twice a week with chilled water, and if it will let you handle it, sponge off as much of the ointment as you can with warm water and a little soap. Keep it carefully out of draught, yet where it will get fresh air. Put the Dinneford's Magnesia into the mouth, not more than one teaspoonful per day, after the bowels are once cleared, then only give an occasional dose to keep them moving freely, without the voidings being watery loose. Report progress fully a fortnight hence. Recovery cannot be rapid, but unless it is too far gone already, it should gradually come into condition.

Green Parrot in Rough Plumage.

St. John.—(1) Owing to its bare condition, and consequently the incomplete description you are able to give, it is difficult to name it with any certainty, but I little doubt but what it is an Indian Ring-necked Parrakeet. (2) As it recovers condition, it should renew its plumage, i.e., providing the trouble is not constitutional, but at any rate, the condition of things should be very much improved. (3 and 4) It will not inconvenience the bird to shorten the feathers, neither do I think it will help much. I should handle it as little as possible till you can do so without scaring it. I should spray it with chilled water twice a week, keeping it strictly out of draught. (5) It should ultimately talk and prove an interesting bird as soon as it knows you thoroughly, and gathers strength. Diet: Give it a seed mixture as follows: 2 parts each canary seed and white millet, and one part each hemp and sunflower seeds; well mix, and always keep a supply in the cage. Also give ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts (shelled walnuts are best). Keep its bowels moving freely with occasional doses of Dinneford's magnesia (one teaspoonful of magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water), but the voidings must not be allowed to become watery loose. On the days you are not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. A little boiled maize well dusted with flowers of sulphur would help if the bird will take it. Get a box of honey and horax, and with a camel-hair brush (which must be well cleansed for each occasion) put a little inside its mouth two or three times a day. The climbing sticks are a good arrangement, but they should be secured against rolling or slipping, or they may throw the bird off. Report progress in a fortnight's time. "Popular Parrakeets," 1/-, plus postage, from this office, would help you.

Roseate Cockatoo Ailing.

Penny.—It does not do to be too confident, but I am of opinion there is nothing really seriously wrong. Give it daily, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, till the bowels have operated freely, but as soon as the voidings become watery loose, stop the magnesia at once, and put the bird on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, which can be continued indefinitely. Diet: Canary, white millet, oats, dari, maize, paddy rice, hemp and sunflower seed in about equal parts is about the best mixture. In addition, supply ripe fruit in variety, nuts, plain biscuit. A little also of any boiled vegetable it may fancy can be given, providing it is free from fat. If there should be any exusion from the nostrils, keep these well cleansed with diluted glyco-thymoline. In case of any development of fresh symptoms, please write again at once with full particulars, but the bird will probably soon be all right again. Keep a close watch on the interior of the mouth, and if you discover any cheesy growths or gathering, smear some honey and borax over same twice a day.

Amazon Parrot Unwell.

Sheldon.—For two consecutive days put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water; follow this by well colouring the water with Parrish's Chemical Food. The magnesia should be repeated as often as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose. Diet: Boiled maize, either daily, or every other day (this only keeps fresh one day). For seed mixture supply the following: Canary and white millet seeds, oats, hemp, maize, dari, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and a little boiled potato (free from fats) is much appreciated by most Amazons. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage, the bird free from draught, yet where it can get fresh air, and spray it twice a week with chilled water. Report progress in two or three weeks, but if the bird should suddenly become worse, write at once, giving fullest details of all symptoms, etc.

Foreign Bird Queriers will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Aviary in an Outhouse.

Constant Reader.—Providing the shed is well lighted (if not, you must improve this), and neither draughty nor damp, it will answer well for your purpose. If your Canaries did well while they were in the enclosure, you may take it for granted that the Budgerigars will do so. But I must emphasise the point of light, these birds nest in husks, and if the enclosure is not well lighted, many of the young will be ricketty, and only half provided with plumage. You could keep therein four pairs of Budgerigars, hanging up at least eight husks for nesting purposes. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, a few oats, green-food (when procurable seeding grass, at other times fresh lettuce is the best), also a little of any ripe fruit they will take. The other items of diet, usually understood, viz., grit, cuttlefish, and water must be regularly supplied. Furnish the aviary at the back with an abundance of twiggy branches as perches. If possible, get each pair of birds from a different source, so as to secure them unrelated.

Brevities.

Roseate Cockatoo ("Sugarcoated").—Seed mixture: Canary, white millet, oats, paddy rice, maize, hemp and sunflower seeds in about equal parts; such ripe fruit as it fancies, nuts; plain biscuit; such cooked vegetables as it cares for are permissable, providing they are free from fats. Other table scaps, or slops and messes must not be given. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage, and gritty sand over the cage tray; a little cuttlefish, to the size of white millet, and mixed with the seed mixture, is beneficial, as also is a little Parrot grit.

Budgerigars in Poor Plumage (Little).—So long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water daily—these birds are such small drinkers that it does not readily take effect; follow this by a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. I should also be glad if you will inform me how you are keeping them, whether in cage or aviary, and the minimum and maximum temperature they are kept in, also whether this is variable, and if I can then help you further shall be pleased to do so. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, oats in smaller quantity, green-food (fresh lettuce when obtainable), ripe apple, cuttlefish, and grit. Also in this case give them a little stale household bread daily, moistened with water, and dusted with flowers of sulphur. It will, I anticipate, be rather a lengthy time getting them into decent feather again.

Breeding Budgerigars in a Cage (C.C.C.).—(1) Yes, I have seen in more than one instance of young reared in an all-wire cage, 12in. square. (2) A box cage is the best, and 2 by 1 by 1½ feet high the smallest. I advise such active birds to be kept in. (3) The cock has a blue cere, that of the female being dark brown, that is, when the birds are in breeding condition. (4) Now, so as to give them time to settle down before the warmer weather arrives. (5) Canary, white and spray millet seeds, oats, green food, cuttlefish, grit and water. (6) This would be a good type, but for minimum size see answer to query No. 2. (7) Zebra Finches, treated similarly, would also prove ready breeders; these would require a little soft food when rearing young. "Budgerigars and Cockatoels" and "Foreign Birds for Beginners" 6d. and 1/s each, plus postage (see advert. in this column) would help greatly.

Most Suitable Birds to Keep (C. Hohdeel).—I take it you are a beginner, and should advise pairs of the following: Zebra, Ribbon, Red-headed, and Spice Finches, Silverbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Zebra Waxbills, Avadavats, Long and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches, Grey and Green Singing Finch, and a pair of small Doves. The Diamond are as pleasing as any. The above would fairly fill your accommodation, though if you have a penchant for Canaries you could put in two pairs. I fear the latter thrive well out-of-doors. Canary, white and spray millet, oats, hemp, sunflower, and paddy rice in smaller quantity, green food, ripe fruit as in season, grit and cuttlefish, and some good soft food mixture when they are feeding young. Plants: Ivy, Virginian creeper, hops, Bamboo, fir, box, privet, and laurel. You must watch our advert. columns for the birds, but must not put them out-of-doors till spring; they can then be left out altogether.

Grey Pulling Feathers (Town).—I cannot say the cause, or give any but provisional help, till you send me details as to dieting and general treatment. Give several doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water), but stop this as soon as the voidings become watery. Spray the bird twice or thrice a week with quassia solution, and, when you stop giving the Dinneford's, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. On receipt of your reply will deal with same at once.

Greater Hill Mynah (Zeeweeke).—These birds are almost omnivorous. Some good soft food mixture, several good ones are advertised in our pages, ripe fruit ad lib, and live insects in some form, mealworms at this season, a dozen per day will not be too many; in the summer give any insects you can trap in the garden. A little minced cooked meat may be given occasionally. The only way to teach it to talk is to keep it where it will see and hear what is going on, and when the place is quiet and the bird restful, teach it by constant repetition of such phrases as you wish it to learn. The only way is patience. Some individuals will remain silent for a considerable period, and then astonish one by saying several words and sentences straight away. Many thanks for your appreciative remarks.

Weavers and Grey Javas (Daniel).—You do not say whether your aviary is indoors or out. If the former, by all means turn them out, but if otherwise, they must be put out of doors till the spring. I expect they have been closely packed during importation, and have plucked each other en route. Canary seed, white and spray millet, green food, or a little ripe fruit, with grit, water and cuttlefish will meet the simple needs of these birds, though the Weavers will be the better for one or two mealworms each daily; such will certainly tend to their well being. When the warm weather comes such smooth caterpillars, beetles, spiders and any insect larvæ or pupæ as you can capture will be preferable to the mealworms, or may be given in conjunction.

Breeding Indian Parrakeet (Chelsea).—Yes, if a cock bird is procured, your hen would undoubtedly pair up with it, and should prove very probable breeders. A stout wooden erection with wire front only, say not less than 4 by 3 by 5 ft. high would answer the purpose; some kind of a log nest will be required—it will be necessary to keep a watch that they do not eat their way out. If you notice them attacking the wood-work, cover the part with wire netting, they do not usually attack flat surfaces. No nesting material will be required, and when they are feeding young, nothing more need be added to their regular diet, than, perhaps, as many stale crusts of household bread, or pieces of plain biscuit, as they will consume.

Green Parrot Badly Scared (Glen).—Unless you can give me some fuller details, I am afraid I can help you but little. Possibly it sustained some slight injury when it fell, and the result is mopishness, etc. I can quite understand its ceasing to talk for a time, but as it recovers confidence this will automatically right itself. In the meanwhile, pet it and make a fuss of it, and keep it out of the way of sudden movements, sudden noises, or anything likely to scare it. Give it one or two doses of Dinneford's magnesia, and put it on a course of Parrish's chemical food (for directions see other replies in this issue). If bird becomes worse, write again at once.

Grey Parrot Sick (Hettie).—Give several doses of Dinneford's magnesia, and afterwards put on a course of Parrish's chemical food (for directions see other replies re Grey Parrots in this issue). While the bowels must be kept moving freely, if the voidings become watery loose, the magnesia must be stopped at once—you might with advantage add an occasional piece of plain biscuit, and keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in the cage. Unless there is something, not yet apparent, wrong with this bird, it should be all right again in a few days; but if any other adverse symptoms develop, repeat query at once, with full details.

Chinese and Other Quails (C.F.P.).—I forget the size of your aviary, but unless it is roomy I should not advise keeping more than one species of Quail therein. If the aviary is only of moderate dimensions, there is nothing to surpass the Chinese Painted Quail for the purpose, and there are few species that will surpass them for beauty of plumage. A fair sized sugar box, with some wire netting in front, would answer well as winter quarters for them, supplying them with plenty of gritty sand to dust in. All species of Quails are apt to rise up suddenly when startled, and bash their heads against top of cage; you should stretch a piece of sacking across the top, so as to leave at least 1½ inches between the sacking and top of cage. Diet: Canary and millet seeds, green food, and two or three mealworms per bird daily. In the summer give them any garden insects you can capture. They are quite harmless with small birds. They should have a patch of growing grass arranged for them if you wish them to breed.

Aviary Queries (Beginner).—I have carefully looked at ground plan and I am still of the opinion that the flight should be at least 4ft. wide, the extra cost will be infinitesimal and the gain immense, otherwise your arrangements promise well, providing you do not overcrowd. You might keep Cardinals with the Budgerigars for variety; the former seldom breed, but they are handsome and long-lived birds. In the Finch section, put in a rose bush, also fir and box bushes and some Virginian creeper for the front of shed. Hops also are very ornamental and make good cover for nesting and harbour, green fly, etc. Under the bushes I should sow grass, Canary, hemp, and millet seeds. There will be ample space for the plants I have named, and if you have to use the pruning knife, that will be a small matter, though birds usually do all the pruning necessary. If you purchase birds from some outdoor aviary, they can be procured as soon as the aviary is ready for them—the sooner the better, especially the Budgerigars.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Parrots (Mrs. A. Brett).—We can send you a good book on the Parrot (the Grey), by Dr. Greene, post free 1s. 2d.

A Spring Perch (F. Carrington).—No doubt it is waiting its turn to appear. We receive so many "illustrated ideas" that we are compelled to make a selection, and even then delay is inevitable before they can be published.

A Book (W. Killington).—We have under consideration the publication of the articles you mention in book form. When on sale you will see a notice to this effect in our columns.

Folding Cage (E. O'N.).—We will enquire of our artist.

Illustrated Ideas (J. M. Lovelock).—We have given this kind of tray before in our correspondence columns.

An Article (A. M. P.).—We will try to arrange for an article on the lines you mention, and thank you for the suggestion.

A Suggestion (J. Joyce).—Thanks for your kindly letter.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Mule Breeding with Owls.

The Owl's Mistress.—I should say from your statements about its size and behaviour that your Tawny Owl was certainly a male. As to the Barn Owl, you have procured as a mate, Johns may be right in saying the hen Barn Owl is darker, but size is the best guide in these birds; if yours strikes you as a big one it is probably a hen. No, you need not separate them if she lays and begins to sit—better not, in fact. You seem to have an ideal place for breeding, and owls have often been bred in captivity; I have never, however, heard of hybrids being so bred in this family, but any birds which will breed pure in confinement ought to hybridise also, judging from what we know of other families of birds. Owls are inclined to breed early, as you suggest, and yours may possibly start, if they decide to mate, before very long.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 525, Caledonian Road, Holloway, London, N., will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

"Rita."—Subject: Hen Canary. Cause of death: You are to be complimented on raising your birds to such a ripe old age; your general management, both dietary and hygienically, are proof of this. Regularity of feeding and watering, together with cleanliness, will obviate much of the trouble often encountered in the bird hobby. You are in no way to blame for the loss; it would have eventually have arisen under even the most ideal conditions. Cause of death was "apoplexy," due to rupture of one of the cerebral blood vessels. This was predisposed to by its excessively fat condition, together with pathological changes in the walls of the arteries allowing of ready rupture; any sudden fright would have accelerated the heart's action and have increased the blood pressure in the vessels of the cerebrum, and so brought about death, which must have occurred very quickly. The bird was of a very gross nature, and no known form of dieting or treatment would have rendered it otherwise.

Wm. Collins.—Answered by post. Canary.

H. Pedler (Barnstaple).—Subject: Canary. Cause of death: You would assist considerably by giving me a few details concerning the length of time this bird had been ailing. I should take it, however, that death occurred in a very short time judging by the condition of the lungs, both being in an acute state of inflammation, which is generally indicative of a quick termination, there being no solidification of any part of the lung substance. The cage should receive a thorough system of disinfection before you introduce another bird into it. Not that there was any indication of infectivity, death having occurred so quickly. Where pneumonia exists, particularly double pneumonia as in this case, all necessary precautions should be taken; not that it always means infectivity to others, although it is in itself an infection. Your bird was very fat. All other organs were perfectly healthy.

P. H. Harris.—Subject: Cock Linnet. Cause of death: Many thanks for encouraging remarks. I can fully understand, judging by the appearance of the bird's organs, that it could not have enjoyed perfect health, for it was suffering from disease of a chronic nature, not however being the immediate cause of death, but a predisposing cause. The chronic disease referred to is one that receives the name of "nutmeg liver," given to it owing to the similarity it presents on section to a nutmeg. This appearance is brought about by distension, producing in time dilation of the veins of this organ; it is primarily brought about by defective heart action causing a back pressure on the portal veins, so distending them. Both lungs were congested. This, again, was a venous congestion. This, however, was the immediate cause of death, brought about by the diseased condition already described. I trust I have made myself explicit. There are no definite incontrovertible means of ascertaining the age of birds to a nicety; there are anatomical differences, such as the fontanelles of the skull, to which I hope to give particular attention shortly. No work in this direction has yet been carried out. I should say your bird was an aged one; the legs were covered with scales, and the plumage darker than in young birds. There is no doubt in my mind the bird was an old one. I should have liked to have known whether it was cage-moulted or no.

"Muriel."—Subject: Hen Bullfinch. Cause of death: You are certainly very sparing with the hemp seed. At this time of the year birds require more, and you might with safety increase the amount you are already giving. I see by your letter that you have had prior losses. This is well understood when we consider the nature of the disease from which your bird was suffering. It must have been ailing for some time, although perhaps you may not have observed this much, for it would not necessarily have refused its food. It was in a very emaciated condition. The breast was almost denuded of flesh. There were other very evident signs of emaciation, viz., a watery or dropsical condition of the flesh, which is a common accompaniment of debilitating diseases. The bird died of "enteritis," or inflammation of the bowels of parasitic origin. On examining the contents of the intestines under the microscope, small thread-like worms were found to be present. These are a very frequent cause of enteritis in birds, and need eradication. Follow the articles commencing this week in CAGE BIRDS on the subject. Should you have any other birds, you may with advantage administer to each in drinking water a few drops, say, five or six drops of syrup ferriiod., which you may obtain from any chemist, repeating night and morning. If you possess many birds it will be advantageous to disinfect cages, etc.

Bideford's New Society.

SIR,—A committee has been formed and I am asked as secretary to acquaint readers that a society, to be known as Bideford Cage Bird Society, are making arrangements for their first show the latter end of February. I am an absolute amateur at such work, but no one else would undertake the office. Kindly give us a small space in your valuable paper announcing the origin of this association.

G. W. GREENAWAY.

Am I a Novice?

SIR,—I hope now that this question has got into the columns of your paper we shall be able to know what a novice really is. The Hon. Sec. of the O.N.P.C. states that a novice can win three firsts in open competition, yet the Hon. Sec. of the Yorkshire Union says you can only win one. Which is right? I have only won one first in open, but was told I could not show as a novice again, so I am interested in this question.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Show.

SIR,—I entered three birds at the Dulwich O.S. Show, held October 12th and 13th last year, and I got three labels on my cages—a c, vhc, and one 4th prize. A friend of mine also entered three birds, and he was more successful than I was among the prize labels. We both sent in one case, and we paid 9s. entrance money, and 6s. 5d. for the birds travelling there and back. I am sorry to say that I have written to the secretary, Mr. S. J. Kent, three times, asking about the prize-money, but I've got no reply yet. I think that it is time something was done about the matter.

HENRY KAYE.

Can Chaffinch-Bramblefinch Hybrids be Bred in a Cage?

SIR,—A letter has appeared in your columns with regard to the above. I have had considerable experience with the cock Chaffinch in many would-be crosses, and from all my trials I have never had the cock Chaffinch fill an egg in a cage. For over 20 years I have persevered with this bird—with the Canary, Greenfinch, Bullfinch, Yellowhammer, Twite, and Corn Bunting, and not one bird either, but sometimes I have had six or seven up in a year. I have not used the cock now, however, for seven or eight years. The cock Bullie is another I have tried, in various ways and this bird I have found will not pair in a cage. I must confess that I have never paired either bird with another of its own sex in a cage. If your correspondent did have full eggs, I should advise him to continue the trals. There is an exception to every rule. The best and surest way to breed this cross is in an aviary out of doors. As regards Canaries bringing the young Hybrids up, I have tried for some years in days now gone by, to get Canaries to bring up Chaffinches' eggs. They would, of course, hatch them, and they fed the young ones for a few days, but I never raised a strong, healthy bird. The young of the Chaffinch is fed on various insects and caterpillars, but in a cage the old ones will, I know, eat nearly anything. This bird I am very fond of when I can get a good steady one, and one in good plumage. The song is not to be despised by any means. The majority of them, especially if they are a bit old, do want taming, and do what you will to some you cannot steady them. One I had was caught and was brought me. For some time I refused it and advised them to let it go, but in the end I accepted it, and put it in a cage between Canaries—3-compartments. Next morning when I was feeding them it was on the perch quite steady, and did not flutter about when I went to it. I at once took an interest in the bird, and found that it was in good plumage. It was about 2 years of age. In less than three weeks (I kept it two) it won a first and special, and I was at once asked to get another or two like it. I expect from what I know of them, my chance will not come again. It seemed from the first that it had been used to a cage, but I knew by its plumage it had not. I should certainly like to have tried this bird for crossing purposes, for the unexpected often happens. So I never like to discourage anyone. Let each go his own way, and have a try. Old hands often smile at the absurd crossings tried by young hands, but their laugh is sometimes against them. Had the bird been a Chaffinch I should not so much have doubted the possibility of the cross, for I have had them lay and pair. They are, in my humble opinion, more easily tamed than cocks, and this is the bird to look to rather than to the male. In an aviary they would do much better; but they are not a species to recommend for a cage for Hybrid breeding. They will live on various seeds, but as summer comes on and the breeding season arrives, they require insect food of some kind to give them the necessary vigour for breeding. I hope nothing I have written will stop anyone from trying for the cross, for there is the off-chance to consider, and, if successful, a name to be made. There have been several instances where the male bird has bred with another in a cage; but, all the same, they are worth giving a trial. If I have failed, however, others might succeed. The late Dr. Greene was very strong on this bird, and, I believe, if my memory serves me right, said that it was not possible for Chaffinches to breed with a Canary. I believe, too, he offered a prize to anyone who could produce such a cross. But at that time a great many, including myself, thought Chaffinches paired only in the air. From very close observation of this bird in a wild state, I have found since that I was mistaken, and that has given me greater faith in them. There has been one Hybrid exhibited, I believe, which did claim the cock Chaffinch as a parent, but I cannot quite remember the cross. I know it caused some comment at the time. These lines, I hope, may induce the breeder to state his views; it would enlighten many a trier who is a lover of this bird.

HYBRID.

Goldfinches at the Scottish National Show.

SIR,—Referring to the report of the above show, we beg to offer you the following explanation. Our exhibit in class 92 (British Goldfinch) was catalogued No. 9. This was apparently a mistake. Our exhibit, "Pride of Galloway," was really sitting No. 10 at the show. It was so judged, and was awarded second prize. When returned, the cage bore the class number 10, and the judge's mark 2nd, and accompanying it was the second prize ticket. Your reporter's remark that our Finch seemed to be "going off" is thus explained, as he was quite naturally misled by the mistake in the catalogue. Kindly insert this explanation. McMINN BROTHERS.

An Explanation from Plumstead and Woolwich.

Important Point for Show Secretaries.

SIR,—Should anyone have applied for a schedule of the above show and not received one, will they please accept this explanation? A number (especially to the Dover district) were returned to me after entries had closed, the post-office officials having detained them on account of one or two words which were missing having been written in by hand. They had surcharged each a penny, and they have been refused. After I had opened two, I refused to pay for the others, so that I do not know whom they were returned from. I consider that this lost us quite 50 entries. I trust that fanciers will understand that it was no fault of mine they were overlooked. I also hope that this will be a warning to others (as well as myself) not to add anything to schedules, etc., except with a rubber stamp.

W. G. PAWLEY, Joint Hon. Sec.

The Clarke versus Crisp Controversy.

SIR,—May I ask you to announce in your columns that Mr. R. L. Crisp has at length publicly withdrawn the charge he made without the slightest foundation, and persisted in all too long against myself. That is all I require; knowing him now as I do, I do not expect any apology. I would have liked to leave the matter here, but alas! he gives me no option. He is apparently unable to control his ill-feeling and propensity for mud-slinging. In truly Pecksniffian style, he deplores the breach of good taste he is guilty of in giving a garbled account of a portion of a conversation which took place at the Horticultural Hall. I would point out that the conversation was supposed to have been a friendly one. By an abuse of language on Mr. R. L. Crisp's part, he says that in the conversation I stated that I had been guilty of dictating letters for others to sign. This is more and more sad. The facts are as follows: In the course of the said friendly conversation, I did recall an occasion where I had assisted in the construction of a letter which subsequently appeared in the Fancy Press over another signature. The occasion I referred to, and which I thought Mr. R. L. Crisp fully understood, was the one where, at his own request and at his own house, I joined another eminent cage bird fancier, and after a most enjoyable supper, the letter in question was drafted by them, and with my assistance. I do not recollect who or what was the object of such a formidable attack. It is now some years since its occurrence and the letter attracted wide-spread attention when it was published. Which of my two fellow-conspirators' names was attached thereto, I have also forgotten. But, as Mr. R. L. Crisp most accurately points out, it was certainly not signed by

J. S. CLARKE.

What is Cuttlefish?

SIR,—A number of fanciers here have a discussion on at present relating to the properties contained in cuttlefish bone. We would like to know if we receive it in its natural state, or is it a manufactured compound; also the properties contained in it. I would thank some reader to tell me on behalf of the crowd.

Winter Observations.

SIR,—In the course of a recent walk over one of the commons near London, I came across Fieldfares and Redwings, Bullfinches, Jays, etc.; also during a week-end visit since to a friend in Kent, I repeatedly saw a beautiful Pied Blackbird on his lawn. A cock I think, and with the back almost entirely white, and with a white ring round the neck, the head and breast being nearly black, and the wing and tail feathers entirely black. I think the feathers under the wings must have been greatly white, as the bird seemed quite as white when flying as when on the ground. I also had a recent opportunity of inspecting what might be termed a dove-coloured or Cinnamon-coloured Partridge, which had just been shot by a friend of mine, and this also I was told looked lighter in the colour when flying than when on the ground. I am no longer young, but in all my time I do not remember having seen a Pied Blackbird in the wild state, nor do I remember having previously seen a Partridge showing albinism.

In an Isle-of-Wight Garden.

SIR,—I have enclosed a photo of a corner of my garden, situated in the Garden Isle (I. of Wight), in which I spend many pleasant hours with my family of birds, most of which will take dainties from my fingers through the wires of the aviary or cages. The aviary is home-made, and is 6ft. high, 3ft. wide, and 2ft. 6in. from front to rear. It at present contains one young cock and two Norwich hen Canaries, two cock Goldfinches, 1 cock and 1 hen Linnet, 1 hen Bullfinch, and 1 cock Greenfinch. In the cages I have Goldfinch-Canary and Linnet-Canary Mules, which I have bred from some of the above birds this season. This is my first season with the hobby, so am quite a novice. I consider I have been fairly lucky, having lost none that have hatched out, though I have had some nests of clear eggs through one of my Goldies not being in condition. My success is entirely due to the information gained through the columns of CAGE BIRDS, from which I take cuttings and paste them in a large book, to which I refer when I am in a fix. I am going to try Hybrids next year from my Bullie, which I have had caged since last October.

The C.B.U. in the North.

Is there Trouble Ahead?

SIR,—I notice in "Twitterings" that the secretary of one of the leading local societies told your correspondent on Newcastle Station platform that his society was leaving the C.B.U. last week. A statement of this kind is liable to damage the Union (which is dear to some of us), and I think the secretary's name ought to have been mentioned, so that blame might not rest on the wrong secretary. So great is the opposition to the C.B.U. from certain officials of societies, that one would think they had some other interest at stake besides the welfare of their own members. I attended the Newcastle meeting last week, and the majority were against leaving the C.B.U. at present.

TWITE.

SIR,—May I crave a small space in your most esteemed and valuable paper, as I was very much interested in the note from a correspondent referring to the Great Scottish National Show, and to the above matter. When reading over his letter I really began to wonder if the secretary and the chairman were the Newcastle Cage Bird Society, but lo, "Tho best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft aglee." They did not reckon with mine host, the members of the N.C.B.S., as I hear the majority of the members still wish to remain affiliated to the C.B.U. Surely this is rather a strange turn of affairs, and places these officials in rather an unpleasant position. Then your correspondent goes on to speak of coercion in the C.B.U. I fail to see where there is any coercion whatever, as every society that is affiliated to the Union became so by the decision of the majority of its members; and I ask your correspondent if the majority are to stand aside and let the minority rule the Fancy? Anyone who has taken note of the past show season cannot fail to see there is more need for a C.B.U. to-day than ever there was in the history of the Fancy, to protect the honest and straightforward exhibitor from those of his fellows who do not stop at anything so long as they can win prizes. Further let me say, if some of the officials of the N.C.B.S. would take more interest in the welfare of and maintenance of justice amongst its members, it would say a good deal more for them than their trying to stir up strife at every opportunity that occurs. It will be interesting to hear what some of the officials of the N.C.B.S. have to say re the 2nd prize winning Mule at their last show, which "could not be found" to be judged in the members' class, although standing on the shelf as judged for 2nd in the open. Was it in the interests of some of these officials that it was not judged in the members' class?

LOVER OF JUSTICE.

Ought a Rule to be Strained Sometimes?

SIR,—After reading "Veritas'" letter, I should like to inform him that, Mr. Battison being a member of the Watford and West Herts Society since its berth, I think he was placed in an awkward position. As is often the case, our committee asked each member to make as many entries as possible, so as to make the show a success (hence Mr. Battison showing at Watford), which it was. As to Mr. Battison re pot-hunting, I should like to ask "Veritas" how many members would do as Mr. Battison did—travel twelve miles and bring birds to a monthly show (but not for pot-hunting, as I am sorry to say we have not any pots to hunt)? I should also like "Veritas" to know that at every show the Watford and West Herts Society have held, Mr. Battison has always been the first to give a helping hand, and the last to find fault; and I think had Mr. Dewhurst been well and at his post, Mr. Battison would not have been treated as he was, after his explanation. I may say that our members sympathise with Mr. Battison on his treatment at West London, and they will still look upon him as a true brother fancier.

The Modern Cinnamon Canary.

SIR,—I should be glad to know through CAGE BIRDS what are the chief points of a Cinnamon Canary? In my younger days I bred many good birds, and when taking up this variety again lately I let my past experience be my guide in purchasing stock birds. I went for birds showing sound Cinnamon colour throughout, as free as possible from stripiness. Have I been wrong? Several reports I have read have said "nicely marked," etc., and just lately I said to a judge that I much preferred the second prize bird (neither were mine), it being sounder and deeper in colour and with a better head and neck. His reply was that the second failed badly in markings on back. I could not question him further, as I did not know if I was ignorant of the present-day requirements in Cinnamons, or whether he had a new idea of his own. Another judge, who even calls himself a specialist in Cinnamons, wants these striped birds dark in colour also, brought about by green blood, which makes them smoky and dull looking—far from the old style of Cinnamon. I don't invite a discussion on what a Cinnamon should be, with a lot of unnecessary chat from those who even know less than myself, but I should be obliged if one of the many who know the present standard would help.

The Crested Canary Club.

Important to Secretaries.

SIR,—At the forthcoming annual general meeting to be held at the Crystal Palace, the chief item on the agenda will be Mr. G. C. Ley's scheme for guaranteeing societies against loss on the entire Crest section on payment to the C.C.C. of the sum of one guinea and on providing not less than eight classes, all of which would stand under any circumstances. The prize-money would be guaranteed and the deficit, if any, be made good by the C.C.C. The profit where made would, of course, accrue to the society holding the show. In order that the matter may be debated under the most advantageous circumstances, and an effective decision arrived at, I would respectfully invite applications from societies that are prepared to adopt such an arrangement, together with any suggestions that may occur to them. The important trophies (silver bowls, etc.), will be allotted (if the proposition is carried) to a society which will give not less than 15 classes in the Crest section (on the same terms, of course.) Will hon. secretaries please make it clear whether they are applying for the 8 class support or for the 15 class? The latter will become known as "The Crested Canary Club Show," and should prove a most important annual fixture. I request hon. secretaries to lay this matter before their members and to favour me with a reply at the earliest possible moment.

Is He a Record Father?

SIR,—Is my Linnet a record father? It is twelvo years como this summer since he was bought as a young one, and I am sorry to say that when I went into my bird-room this morning ho was lying dead just under the placo where he used to sleep in the flight. Ho was in good condition, and I don't know what went wrong with him. He was the father of two nests this last season, and I thought this might interest some of your readers.

A Sure Cure for Red-mite.

SIR,—I see in CAGE BIRDS most weeks fanciers wishing to know how to get rid of red mite. I am sure if they will only try this they will find it is certain death to all red mite, and they won't be troubled with them again for a considerablo time. I did all my cages over last February and I have not seen any since. Take the cage out of doors and hang it on the wall. Get somo petrol and a paint brush and go all over the cage, and in every crevice, inside and out, with this, when all red mite will be dried to a powder. It is a good plan to run the petrol brush round all nest boxes before the breeding season, when you will find your hens won't be disturbed while sitting.

An Aviarist's Hopeful Start.

(See photograph on Pago 20.)

SIR,—Enclosed I send you a photograph of my aviary I built the placo myself. I have always had a fancy for birds, but could never keep them in tho house. So last April my son brought homo a paper called CAGE BIRDS. I never knew there was such a journal until then, and I saw someone was asking about an aviary. So I set to and made the one of which I have sent you a photograph. The size is: 20ft. long, 5ft. wide, and 7ft. high, with ½in. mesh netting at front and half-glazed at top, and then 2ft. away from the front I have some 2in. netting, as I am troubled with cats. I also have a fountain in it with a small cistern at tho back and some ½in. lead pipe down to it; it will send the water about 2ft. 6in. high. Now will any of your readers tell me if I should cover the front up this winter or let it stop as it is? It faces the east.

NOTES UPON OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

Articles have been specially written round our two Coloured Plates and tho Calendar, and will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Tho SOLITARY SANDPIPER (Totanus solitarius), depicted by Mr. Rankin on Page 17, is a visitor from America, and one of the very rarest of our Waders. Its recorded occurrences in the British Isles may easily be counted on the fingers of one hand. No doubt, however, it is often overlooked owing to its great resemblance to the so-called Green Sandpiper (Totanus octropus), which is a quite common bird here in spring and autumn. The difference between the two is most easily noted in the tail feathers, of which the outer pair are pure white, without any black bars, in the Green Sandpiper, which also has white upper tail coverts, only conspicuous, however, in flight. In its native home the Solitary Sandpiper is an unsocial bird, as its name implies, and it is fond of haunting forest pools—not the sort of places where one would expect to meet with a bird of this tribe. The artistic illustration gives a good idea both of its size and its simple colours.

The photograph of the two young Cuckoos in the Meadow Pipit's nest was sent by that keen and accurate observer of the wild life of tho birds, Mr. John Craig, of Beith. It was taken by Mr. Peat Millar. Mr. Craig writes: "Although the photograph does not show the one ejecting the other, they are acting quite different to birds that agree. Your Cuckoo (this refers to a nestling preserved in spirits, sent to our Mr. G. E. Weston) is on tho top, and when we were experimenting he put out a young Pipit. The other Cuckoo threw out three eggs (twice), three young Pipits, and then your own Cuckoo—ten in all. I saw eighteen Meadow Pipits' nests, the last five of which all contained a Cuckoo's egg—the last one a Cuckoo's egg only (no Meadow Pipit's eggs). The egg was fresh when I first saw it, and was hatched in due course, and I watched the young one until it was flown. A Hedge-Sparrow's nest was found near Beith with a Cuckoo's egg in it, and was brought to me for identification, also a Reed Bunting's nest was found, near Beith, with a Cuckoo's egg in it which I also saw.

The clover and interesting "snap-shots" of Gold-crested Wrens are the work of Mr. Stanley Crook, who has on several past occasions contributed to our special issues.

Particulars of the aviary belonging to Mr. G. Hodgson, the birds of Mr. A. Hill (Page 20), and Mr. F. Thomas' cage fitted with glass screen to obviate seed-litter (Page 22), will be found in our correspondence pages; likewise an account of the doings of Mr. Fairly (Page 20) and his Belgian Canaries.

The names of the fanciers seen in the photograph taken at the Scottish National Show (Page 20) are:—Reading from left to right: Top row, Messrs. Nash (market officer), J. W. Bruce (judge), W. B. Smart, J. Goodfellow (judge), W. Carson, G. Brown, A. Gilchrist, and H. Goodchild. Middle row: Messrs. J. Currah, W. Rodger, W. R. Dunn, T. Taylor (judge), W. R. Finnie, S. Buglass, W. J. Buist, W. F. Arrighi, A. Rodger, R. S. Spence, J. Patterson (judge), J. Robson (judge), and T. Todd. Front row: Messrs. J. L. Winter, R. Armstrong, C. T. Maxwell (judge), J. Gourlay, R. Craig (vice-president), A. C. Dandie (president), Jas. Winter (secretary), L. J. Arrighi (vice-president), R. T. Jack (assistant secretary), and D. Kinlayside.

The photograph, "Is Mother Looking?" is a specimen of artistic work of Mr. W. H. Hall (portrait medallist), of Princes Street, Widnes. Mr. Hall writes: "The young Canaries, perched on the sprig of hawthorn, are the first nest of Norwich I bred, and the first I ever tried to photograph With this print I received a silver medal in a competition."

The GOLDEN ORIOLE is one of a family confined entirely to the Old World, the members of which are closely related to the American Hangnests and the Thrushes. Their colouring is generally of a brilliant character, the Golden, as its name implies, being (in an adult male) a lovely golden-yellow; the black wing and tail feathers have yellowish markings. The beak is red; eyes (irides) blood red: eye-streak, black; feet, lead colour; altogether a strikingly beautiful bird. It is not at all an infrequent visitor to great Britain, and would doubtless breed here were it not for the fact that its bright colours usually lead to its death by means of a charge of shot; an end much to be deplored. The Oriole is Thrush-like in habit, feeding largely upon ripe fruit in season, insects constitute its chief food.

The BEE EATER is a truly gorgeous bird, difficult to describe in words. Newton says of it: The Bee Eater "is certainly one of tho most beautifully coloured birds ever found in these islands, and no one who has once seen a specimen will forget its rich chestnut crown and mantle, passing lower down into primrose, its white frontal band, the black patch extending from the bill to the ear-coverts, the saffron throat bordered with black, while most of the rest of the plumage is of a vivid greenish-blue or bluish -green, and the middle pair of tailfeathers are elongated and attenuated in a way that is not seen in any other British land bird." Tho Bee Eater is also a bird of the Old World, and Merops apiaster has on a great number of occasions paid a visit to England, one flock seen in Norfolk being on record as comprising about twenty individuals. It lives upon insects, which it catches whilst on the wing. This lovely bird would be an acquisition to the show bench: but it is extremely difficult to obtain and equally difficult to keep in plumage in a cage.

The MEADOW BUNTING is not remarkable for vivid colouring, but the delicate tints of its plumage are in every way charming. It has the deep brown-reds familiar in the Reed Bunting, and the slatey-blue of the head with its black stripes, contrast pleasingly. The Meadow Bunting has come into prominence of recent years as an exhibition bird (Miss Medland's drawing was made from a specimen on view at the Crystal Palace Show), but it is exceptionally rare for it to be caught in our Islands.

The Serious Menace to the British Bird Fancy.

A Time for Action. The Position Reviewed to Date. An Appeal to all our Readers.

Before stating the position to-day with regard to the threatening attitude of the Law (as represented by Mr. Biron, the metropolitan magistrate) towards the British Bird Fancy, it may be well to re-capitulate the main facts of the case.

The Society for the Protection of Wild Birds is seeking to establish that no person may be in possession of a recently-taken British bird if that said bird is included in the list of protected species for the district in which the said person resides. Whether the bird was legally taken in a district wherein it is not protected they contend does not affect the case.

The society recently brought a test case against two London bird-dealers (Messrs. Preston and Flowers). The birds in question were caught in Essex (an open county), and the society's officers traced them to the defendant's shops from Saffron Walden railway station, then took out a summons against them for "having in their possession recently-taken birds, viz., Chaffinches and Larks, contrary to the provisions of the County of London by-law" (under which these species, and all others, are protected). The case came before Mr. Biron, the magistrate sitting at Old Street Police Court, just before Christmas, and he arrived at the decision that the society's view of the matter was correct, and he condemned Messrs. Preston and Flowers in costs.

The extreme seriousness of this decision, and the power it places in the hands of the S.P.W.B. to harass all keepers of British birds—whether private individuals or bird-dealers—will be at once apparent. It means that in protected districts (and they comprise practically all the thickly-populated areas and towns in the British Isles) everyone who kept a newly-taken British bird, and every dealer who exposes one for sale, can be prosecuted and fined. Thus it means practically and the position of dealers in birds will become one of extreme difficulty, for the majority will be unable to offer fresh-caught British birds for sale, which those whose business places are in unprotected districts will find their trade vanish, as no persons living in a protected district will be able to buy, except they choose to risk being visited by the penalties of the law.

Truly a discouraging prospect.

But the cloud, we are glad to say, has its "silver lining," for we have obtained the opinion of high legal experts that this astounding decision of Mr. Biron is not in accordance with their interpretation of the provisions of the Act, and, further, that if the case be taken to appeal, there is every likelihood of its being upset.

A notice of appeal has been duly served, and it is intended to put a well-known Barrister in charge of the case. But the S.P.W.B. has taken action against two people who are but moderately blessed in the matter of means, and whose resources (the case has already cost them no small sum) are unequal to bearing the strain of the legal costs inseparable from the proper conduct of the proceedings. So Messrs. Preston and Flowers now appeal to our readers for subscriptions to enable the facts of their case to be adequately thrashed out before the High Courts; and they appeal in the confident anticipation that the verdict will be in their favour, and so remove the cloud under which the British bird Fancy now rests.

In the meantime, dealers should continue their business as usual pending the hearing of the appeal; we are given to understand that the decision of Mr. Biron has caused many of them uneasiness as to whether they may not be the next target for the officers of the S.P.W.B. They need have no fear of this, at present.

The need of funds with which to have the case contested is urgent, however, so do not delay; send your contributions at once, addressed to Mr. Geo. Crabb, c.o. the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and state clearly in your letter that it is intended as a donation towards the "Preston and Flowers Defence Fund."

Mr. Crabb is the well-known gentleman who for so many years was chairman of the London and Provincial O.S. and the Crystal Palace shows, and he has very kindly consented to act as treasurer to the Defence Fund.

In conclusion, we may say that every penny subscribed will be utilised for no other purpose than to enable Messrs. Preston and Flowers to fight the W.B.P. Society in the interests of the whole British bird Fancy.

Donations, however small (or large, of course) will be duly acknowledged in the columns of CAGE BIRDS. It only needs a trifle from each bird-keeper to enable the case to be carried to, we hope, a triumphant conclusion. The cost may be from £50 to £60.

We append a first list of the subscriptions which have come to hand, and we ask the kindly co-operation of all in the effort to get put right a decision which we feel involves a great injustice to the Fancy. We may say that at the last meeting of the City and Suburban Society it was unanimously decided that a subscription should be got up, and we have no doubt this example, and that of the Plumstead and Woolwich Society, will be widely copied. We may say that helpful suggestions have reached us from many readers, and that these are receiving our earnest consideration.

SOME OPINIONS OF READERS.

I have read with interest the case of Messrs. Preston and Flowers, and must say that the verdict given against them by Mr. Biron has astounded me. I call it monstrous; the law has been wrongly applied, as every sensible man must admit. Is such a verdict to be tolerated? I for one say no, and am glad to hear the case is to be taken to the High Courts. If such a verdict is to go unchallenged, every person, whether man or woman, who sees an advertisement in our Fancy papers respecting recently-taken British birds, must first go to a police station and ask whether they may buy the bird or birds they are looking for, because the birds wanted may be protected in the district where he or she lives. What rot! But that's what it means. Fight the S.P.W.B., I say, and I have no doubt what the result will be. Our judges are not all cranks. All catchers, exhibitors, dealers, and all others willing should amalgamate, and form a society, the funds of the same to be at its disposal; or, better still, the society should fight the S.P.W.B. in all cases where the society decides that any member of theirs is being imposed on.—C. H. K. (Gorleston).

It seems to me the duty of every lover of British birds to rally round and give what they can to combat what is a serious menace to the British fanciers, be it little or great.—G. STREET (Highgate).

Please find enclosed donation to Preston and Flowers Defence Fund, and shall be glad to give second donation if necessary.—MAGGS BROS. (Swansea).

Please find enclosed P.O. for 10s., which was collected at the Plumstead and Woolwich Show, to be devoted to the Preston and Flowers Defence Fund. I trust that this example will be followed by other shows held in the near future.—W. PAWLEY, hon. sec.

I must heartily congratulate you on formulating such a deserving and justifiable fund as the above, and I do most sincerely hope that all connected with birds generally will liberally respond to this serious and most important call, and I trust that dealers in particular will not forget the song, "A Friend in Need," and help their less fortunate fellows on this occasion. If this affair is not fought out thoroughly, a bird dealer's business will not be worth the snuff of a candle. Now, Mr. Editor, many times I have credited CAGE BIRDS with achieving smart and good things in the past, but I think that this defence fund beats the lot, and I, sir, as a British bird exhibitor, beg to tender my heartfelt thanks to you, and I feel sure that Messrs. Preston and Flowers are also truly grateful to you. I need hardly mention I shall leave no stone unturned in this case, as I collected the sum of 10s. at the Woolwich Show on Friday last amongst several fanciers and friends, and this amount is to be forwarded to you. I am also going to canvas at every show I go to, and in every club I belong. In conclusion, may I make a suggestion, viz., that at the Great National Crystal Palace Show CAGE BIRDS stall has a collecting box for voluntary contributions towards this fund, as the law costs for this particular case will involve a large amount.—A. J. A. MARLEY (Leyton).

SPRATT'S SPECIALITIES.

Some Seasonable Foods and Medicines for Fanciers.

With the advent of the New Year, Canary breeders everywhere are beginning to look through their stocks with a view to the selection of the best breeding birds for the season which is about to dawn. Much doubtless depends upon the careful selection and proper mating of the stock, but even more depends upon the birds which are mated being in first-class breeding condition when they are paired. Year by year one hears of extraordinary failures. In some cases the hens will not lay, in others egg-binding is the bete noir of the breeder, in others the eggs are not fertilised by the cock birds. Now for all these troubles there is a reason, and nine times out of ten this is lack of breeding condition in the stock birds.

Birds intended for breeding need to be prepared for their work quite as much as do show birds, and the chief factor in the preparation is proper food and feeding. Canary feeding (like many other things) has advanced, and whereas a few years ago fanciers were compelled to resort to the old-fashioned method of hard-boiled egg and biscuit, to-day they have the choice of various preparations which render the old labour of egg-boiling and mixing quite unnecessary. One of the first firms to place a prepared Canary food upon the market was Spratt's Patent, Ltd., and before doing so they made a long series of experiments to find out what was absolutely the best substitute for the old egg and bread diet. Thus when Spratt's renowned Cage Bird Food was placed upon the market it was a finished product, and one guaranteed to perform the work it was intended to perform—rear birds from the shell.

But to ensure the full benefit of its valuable properties during the months to come, the breeding birds themselves should be fed upon it for a month or six weeks previous to being placed in the breeding cages, so that they may be as fit as good food and careful attention may make them. In achieving this object another food which may be used with the greatest advantage is Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food. This is a splendid conditioner, and when used alternately with Messrs. Spratt's Cage Bird Food, it soon brings birds into first-class breeding form.

In the breeding and rearing of birds it is most essential that nothing but the best seed should be used, and those who require the very best of seed should remember that by reason of their great purchasing power, and command of the services of the greatest grain experts, Spratt's are able to command a supply of the finest seed the world produces. For the small fancier who does not care to be bothered with the trouble of blending his own seeds, Spratt's send out in packet form and in bags Spratt's Mixed Bird Seeds, but they also supply direct to large breeders the highest quality Canary, hemp, German rape, lin, teazle thistle and niger seeds in bulk at ordinary market prices.

Those fanciers who indulge in Mule-breeding have to use a greater variety of seeds than does the breeder of Canaries, and here Spratt's are to the front. They send out a mixture adapted for the special needs of those who use any of our British Finches for Muling, and in the case of Linnets they have a mixture which specially meets the needs of this bird. These mixtures are known as Spratt's Finch Mixture and Spratt's Linnet Mixture, and each contains nearly twenty different kinds of seeds blended in those proportions which long experience has shown to yield the best results.

No matter how choice the food, however, birds cannot extract from it all its nutritious qualities unless they are kept well supplied with grit, and Spratt's Patent, Ltd., have placed on the market two kinds of very high-class, thorough cleansed grit, and by a constant use of Spratt's Caledonia grit, and Spratt's Avicultura gravel every keeper of cage birds is able to keep his birds in grand form.

At the close of the show season, birds constantly exhibited naturally become a bit jaded and fagged, and here again Spratt's can be relied upon. Careful feeding on Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food with Spratt's Mixed Seeds, and the daily administration through the medium of the drinking water of Spratt's Chemical Food, will soon bring the worn-out show goers into full song and vigour and fit to take their places in the breeding room.

For an attack of bronchitis or inflammation of the lungs, a remedy which has saved thousands of birds from an early grave is Spratt's Canarydyne, while inflammation of the bowels (another complaint often caused by the vagaries of the weather, or by mistakes in feeding, has a remedy in Spratt's Quinella, which is a safe and sure cure for stomachic affections of Canaries, British and Foreign Birds.

*What a Fraud!

Mrs. Cat: "Well, mistress has been taken in, and no mistake. I heard her say she gave 7s. 6d. for this bird. It's the biggest fraud I ever came across, really, and no flavour at all! These foreign birds are no good. I would sooner have an English Sparrow any day." As a matter of fact, it was the imitation of a bird in the lady's hat.—Sent by Eric Clarke (age 9), 61, High Street, Godalming.

*A Wild Hawk.

It was a lovely day when I left my home to ramble over the fields. The birds were all singing in the hedges, and not far away I noticed a man bird-catching, and watched him for a while. Suddenly I saw a large Hawk dart down on his bird lime twigs, and when I went near it began to scream. The man took it away, and it pecked at his hands so much that they were all covered with blood. At last he managed to put it in a cage, and carried it home. Some days after I went to the man's home to see it, and it was admired as a pet by his children and myself.—Samuel Campbell (age 15), Burnside Cottage, Beith, Ayrshire, N.B.

A Walk in the Wilds.

Having got our Christmas holidays, my brother and I had a long walk through the woods and moorlands which are most interesting at this time of the year. Passing a farmer's stockyard, we saw a large number of Chaffinches and a pair of Bramblefinches. The first were very busy picking the grain, and took flight at our approach. We passed the lock on our right (which had a fine sheet of ice upon it, but too thin to venture upon); a couple of Ouzels were sporting in the vicinity, while a lovely Merle in sable hue flew to the green yew, followed by his mate, more rusty in colour. A Robin was warbling out a plaintive song in the glen, while a number of Fieldfares and Larks were hopping nimbly over the frozen lawn looking for their scanty fare.—Alex. Anderson (age 13), Hillside Cottage, Bonnybridge, Stirlingshire.

Worms in Birds: Their Origin, Classification & Treatment.

By G. YATES, M.R.C.V.S.

In consequence of queries arising frequently from readers of CAGE BIRDS respecting worms as affecting birds, their etiology, manifestations and therapeutical treatment, I have been asked by the editor to write for the benefit of readers a series of articles dealing with this branch of parasitology. This, I may say, is a subject of the utmost importance, and cannot be dealt with in a very summary manner.

An Old Science.

Parasitology is as advanced a science as that of ornithology itself, and is practically inexhaustible, but for practical purposes I shall deal principally with those parasites classified under the head of "Entozoa," meaning, of course, those of a commoner nature, found infesting the digestive tract of birds.

Readers possessing birds suffering from these pests should, if desirous of information as to treatment to be adopted in such cases, send specimens of worms or parts of worms for identification. To attempt treatment without would only result in conclusions of an empirical nature, and such as would be likely to afford more harm than good. Every species of bird harbours its own particular parasite, and each species possesses many varieties, each requiring different treatment. Consequently one observes how futile and fraught with dangerous consequences is empiricism in dealing with such cases, as many remedies applied as vermicides and vermifuges are of a potent nature.

By the term vermicides, I mean to indicate those drugs which are intended to destroy the parasite or parasites, whilst the term vermifuge simply applies to those remedies used as expellents. I might reasonably say that more animals succumb to the too frequent and injudicious use of these preparations than from the actual presence of the parasite itself. This may appear to some a bold assertion, but so commonly have I witnessed fatalities arising in this manner that I have the courage of my convictions in making this statement, and would advise readers to adopt the precautions I have suggested, when in doubt or difficulty as to the parasites infesting the occupants of their aviaries.

This subject of parasitism has been closely and advantageously studied by members of the veterinary profession more especially in France and Germany, and of late years has received greater attention by English veterinarians. It still offers excellent opportunities for extending our knowledge in this important section of biological science.

Worms of a Parasitic Nature.

The worms are invertebrate with a soft contractile body, which is symmetrical and non-articulated, or markedly divided into a linear series of rings. This section contain a vast collection, and do not permit of a very good zoological classification, but from a practical standpoint it is commendable to bring them into one group, because of the analogies in their habits, their customs and actions. These are the worms which are of a parasitic nature, and include the Helminths (named by many, Entozoa), intestinal worms, etc, although these may be found in many organs. They are divided into two classes: the Plathelminths with bodies generally flat, and Nemahelminths, whose bodies are nearly cylindrical.

The Plathelminths comprise three orders, viz., Cestodes and Trematodes, and as there are only two of these limited to a parasitic existence, I am necessarily omitting the third order. Nearly all these species are hermaphrodite.

The Cestodes are nearly always segmented and provided at one extremity with suckers or hooks, by which they fasten themselves to the delicate mucous membrane lining the intestines of their host. Those provided with hooks are more difficult of eradication than those possessing suckers. In this position they are more frequently found in the adult stage, but prior to this period they undergo a varying change in metamorphosis and migration, which are often effected in the various organs of different hosts. Microscopical examination of the heads of these parasites with their arrays of hooks, present a formidable and none too pleasant feature.

The Trematodes are non-segmented, are often foliacious or leaf shaped, but are not of such importance as to merit discussion when dealing with worms affecting birds.

The Nematodes comprise an important order, although not mentioned in the above classification, but are found in great numbers inhabiting the intestinal tract and peritoneal cavities of birds. They are elongated and slender, and are not segmented.

A Suitable Habitation for Worms.

The intestines of birds provide a medium for the habitation of a large number of these parasites; in fact, so common is their presence in this position that on conducting post mortem examinations on birds for diagnostic purposes, one is struck with the remarkable regularity with which one discovers their presence in these situations. The reason for their commoner situation in these regions is plainly one of predisposition, owing to its relation with the outer world. Into these receptacles there are taken in along with the food or water either the eggs or larvae of the parasite, or sometimes in a phase of advanced development. As water is a vehicle for a multitude of invisible or microscopical organisms, it follows that this is the commoner medium of the two by which they gain access to their host.

This fact has forced itself more conclusively upon the minds of scientists of late years from the fact that epidemics of verminous disease have been found to be more prevalent among the larger domesticated animals during and after rainy seasons, the otherwise dry soil becoming a more suitable medium for the development of the parasite.

Of the ova or immature parasites which gain access to the digestive economy, many never fulfil their destinies, large numbers perishing. Those that survive, in their development undergo a series of metamorphoses until they arrive at a perfect stage, become sexually mature, and reproduce their own species within their new habitat, and many can multiply in the intestines without indicating their presence by any derangement in the health of their host.

How to Make a Good Bath.
Sent by Mr. A. J. Shipton.

I enclose a sketch of, and particulars as to how to make, a good bath. No solder used. All that is required is a small piece of wire netting (½ inch mesh), a tin box (I use Tilia biscuit boxes, but any small tin box will do), and two pieces of cage wire. Cut one side of the box down to about 2 inches from the bottom, and turn edge over and hammer down; and the other side 4 inches from the top. Now the two ends just turn over about one eighth inch. Slip the cage wire through and hammer down tight. Leave an inch at the ends, which makes the hanger. Now do the same thing with the wire netting over the top. Place the two ends of netting over the hangers, then paint all over.—A. J. SHIPTON.

[Will Mr. Shipton kindly forward his address, as this has been mislaid?—ED.]

How to Make Round Feeding Holes.
Sent by Mr. J. F. Jewes, 21, Fenton Street, Brierley Hill, Staffs.

Perhaps the following illustrated idea re making round feeding-holes for cage fronts will be found much better as regards time and trouble, than the ordinary way of bending with pliers. You will also be sure of getting them round, too. Get a portion of ordinary broom handle about 1 foot long. Bore a hole half way through with a bradawl and near the top; insert the end of a length of wire in the hole, and turn handle round, guiding wire with thumb. You then have a coil, and by cutting with pliers each coil forms a perfect circle. By using a thicker piece of round wood you obtain larger holes suitable for crests and crestbreds, etc.—J. F. JEWES.

Cruelty when Sending Birds by Rail.

At Bedford Borough Police Court on December 28th last, John Lenara, 289, High Street, Brentford, was summoned for causing unnecessary suffering to four wild birds whilst the same were in captivity, contrary to the Wild Animals in Captivity Act, 1900.—Inspector Roberts, R.S.P.C.A., proscented.

Joe Swann, Castle Road, Bedford, said, in consequence of an advertisement he communicated with defendant by letter, and later sent four birds to defendant, one Chaffinch, two Bramblefinches, and one Yellow-hammer. He sent them on approval in an ordinary travelling cage 14 inches long and 7 inches wide. Witness afterwards received them back, but they were returned in a small box. Two of the birds were dead, and one died on being taken out of the box, and the living bird was knocked about the head. Witness had kept birds for 14 years and had exhibited for about seven years. Not more than two British birds should go in the box produced, and it was quite wrong to put four in it. There was nothing on the box to show it contained live birds.—Cross-examined. These birds had been caged for five years, and were as tame as Canaries.

Inspector Roberts, R.S.P.C.A., said that on December 4th Mr. Swann brought the box produced to him. It contained three dead birds, one of which was quite warm. There was also a lot of blood on the box.

Inspector Knights, R.S.P.C.A., stationed at Ealing, said that on December 9th he saw defendant, and told him he called to see him respecting some birds he had sent to Bedford in a box that was too small.—Witness had a further conversation with defendant, who said he sent them back to Mr. Swann because he would not accept a price. Defendant said, "To send them in too small a box would be cruel. I returned them in the box that the man sent them."

Defendant was fined £1 and £1 3s. costs.—"The Bedfordshire Standard."

Under the White Rose.

THE winners and points of the C.M.Y.C.C. competitions are officially declared as follows:—Open Section: First, Ogden Bros., 183 points; second, H. H. Towers, 174; third, A. Cooper, 167; fourth, A. Jowett, 95. Novice Section: First, W. Richmond, 121 points; second, E. Clegg, 87; third, F. Gelder, 62; fourth, S. B. Grayshon, 55; fifth, E. Grange, 32. The season is now rapidly drawing to a close, after Great Horton Good Intent, which is being held to-day (Saturday), we have only one more show, and that is Hoyland, near Barnsley, and it is to be hoped they will have a good entry. They are only a small society, but very enthusiastic, and it is their first show held under the rules of the Yorkshire Union. Then, following Hoyland, we have the great Crystal Palace Show, which winds up for the year all the principal competitions for cups, trophies, etc.

IT is again expected that all the Yorkshire specialist clubs, viz., the Yorkshire Union, Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., O.N.P.C., N.G.M.Y.C.C., Y.C.B.B. and M.C. will join for the great annual gathering and prize distribution (with probably the dinner), inaugurated last year. In fact, part arrangements have already been made, and if things work out as before, it will be a very happy gathering, and worth going a long way to see.

YORKSHIRE Union secretary in his report last week mentioned one item that should be carried out, viz., in regard to the date on which affiliated societies hold their meeting. If at all possible, these should be held during the first 14 days of each month, so that the secretary can give his report to Y.U. and get all business done monthly, and not as at present, often taking from 6 to 8 weeks to get the reports out to societies and back again.

"CAGE BIRDS" CANARY PUZZLE.

CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

Half-guinea Cash for the Reader who is Successful.

A novel picture puzzle appears on this page this week. In the small squares lie hidden a Canary, the parts which go to its making having been jumbled up by our artist. We offer a to the reader who cuts out the squares and pastes them on paper, or cardboard, so arranged as to exactly reproduce the original picture of this Canary before it was "jumbled." Each square will be found numbered. The key to the precise arrangement of these squares (as given by the artist) is locked in the Editor's desk. The prize will go to the reader who succeeds in pasting the squares in the same order as appears on this key, the finished whole being a picture, as afore-mentioned, of a Canary. In the event of none accomplishing this, the prize will go to the effort which comes nearest the said key; or if two or more readers successfully solve the puzzle, to the one who sends in his or her attempt the most neatly arranged.

One hint we will give competitors. The bird is described as "a Canary." To be precise we should say a Yorkshire Canary. But it is a type of "Yorkshire," our artist informs us, which could only be obtained by pairing together the two worst Yorkshires that ever were bred. So don't be surpriscd at the result!

INTRODUCE THIS FASCINATING PUZZLE TO YOUR FRIENDS.

All attempts should be packed flat, and must reach us not later than first post, Thursday, January 27th next, when the competition closes. Write "Puzzle Competition" on the top left-hand corner of the package, and address it to:

Wild Bird Life.

Mid-Winter Music.

The New Year has commenced with exceptionally mild open weather here in the South of England, and such conditions affect wild bird life almost immediately. One would think, to listen to the early morning chorus, that the performers were well aware that the shortest day was passed, that spring was not far distant, and that all the joys of love-making and nesting would commence shortly. But we have a long way to travel before we are out of the wood. The month of February has to be passed, a month that is more fatal to wild bird life than any other. Seldom does it pass without long spells of frost and snow, when the ground is as hard as granite, and a white mantle covers the fields and meadows, leaving only the bare trees and hedgerows exposed to the cutting wind. The plentiful supply of berries is then for a time the chief food obtainable, and when this is exhausted many birds, too weak or too shy to seek the shelter of the farmyards and gardens, perish of cold and hunger.

One can only surmise what the mortality can be under such conditions, for when the sun shines once more and the snow has gone, we occasionally find evidence of the harvest gathered by the wintry elements, a skeleton here, a few feathers there, or just the wings and feet elsewhere—all that remains of some feathered victim—the rats and weasels of the woods and hedgerows having feasted on the bodies. In many cases all traces of these tragedies are removed, so that few of the actual cases of death from starvation and cold are seen.

Meanwhile during this mild open weather our resident birds are growing strong and lusty, and full of life and vigour. Before the break of day the Song Thrush pipes his cheerful song; and all through the day at intervals, until past sunset, when he competes with the familiar Robin to be the last to say "good-night." Across the downs and uplands the Finches flit gaily, and occasionally some precocious young cock bird will be found swelling his throat, and singing with evident enjoyment, while overhead the glorious Skylarks carol unceasingly, soaring upwards as in spring. A change to severe weather will put an entire stop to all this gladness and music, and the struggle for existence will commence once more. Meanwhile, let us enjoy the present, and, like the Thrush and Robin, have no thought for to-morrow.

The Red 38 Gold Crest.

Although the Gold Crest is the smallest of our birds, it is probably the most restless. It seems to be constantly on the move, and thousands cross the seas on migration. It is pretty generally distributed throughout Europe. It is constantly migrating, even from countries where the birds are supposed to be residents. There is a continual shifting of individuals, some migrating, others taking their places.

Cash in Exchange for your Experiences.

There must be thousands among the readers of CAGE BIRDS with much knowledge stored away in their heads upon the above subjects. Utilise your leisure moments to put that knowledge on paper for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, and in exchange for your experiences there may be a cash prize waiting that will help you to buy some bird or other acceptable item you are a-wanting. Turn your spare moments to profitable account. Remember that all articles published by us will be paid for (note rules), also that photographs and drawings may accompany articles.

The Closing Date, remember, is January 24th next.

RULES.

(Read these very carefully.)

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed), on one side of the paper only.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essay) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

All entries must reach CAGE BIRDS office, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C., on or before Monday, January 24th next. Write "Essay Competition," on top left-hand corner of envelope or package.

Peculiar Distribution of Species.

The Stonechat is a very distinctive species, unlike any other, except the Whinchat, from which it is easily distinguished. It is a curious fact that the two do not frequent the same common or moor. Where the Stonechats are numerous the Whinchat is not seen. Such peculiar distribution has been noticed with regard to the Blackcap and Garden Warblers.

The Shows.

DAWLEY (Salop).

The second annual show of the Dawley and Dis. C.B.S. was held in the Assembly Room of the Lord Hill Hotel on Jan. 11th. The room is a splendid one for a small show of this description. The exhibits were nicely staged on a special staging, kindly lent by mine host, Mr. G. Campbell (a keen fancier). Entries turned up well, averaging 14 per class, which is good for a radius show. The quality, on the whole, was distinctly good, especially the Mule class, the winner being a well-known face. Mr. Urban Callear again handled the secretarial reins, and all credit is due to him for the splendid arrangements. Mr. H. Tams judged,

GREEN CANARY ASSOC.

Annual show, held in the Caledonian Schools, Oldham-street, Liverpool, on January 8th. The entry (about 350) was well up to the average, and the quality of the exhibits left very little to be desired. The Greens of all varieties were naturally the feature of the show, but the clear and ticked Yorkshires were also a grand lot. Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) judged the Yorkshires, and Mr. J. W. Bancroft (Sale) the remainder, and their awards left very little room for criticism.

WHITTINGTON MOOR.

The Whittington Moor and Dis. C.B.S. held their second annual open show on December 27th in the Victoria Hall, kindly lent for the occasion by W. Smith, Esq. It was by far the best show the society have had, and great credit must be given to the committee, Messrs. Todd, Buck, Roe, Blank, Thorpe, Lee, and Harris, and to the energetic secretaries, Messrs. Barber and Atkins. A great feature was the line classes of Yorkshires, acknowledged by many fanciers to be the finest ever seen in the Midlands for years. Mr. W. Vardy judged, and gave satisfaction. This society, although in its infancy, bids well to become a good one. Special mention must be made of the fine team of Yorkshires exhibited by Mr. W. Crabtree. Messrs. Thorp, Richmond, Knowles, Simpson, and Athey also sent good birds, and the teams of Norwich shown by Messrs. Hunt, Harris, Dodd, Bescoby, and Righton were voted splendid. The cup for best bird in show went to Mr. Hunt for his clear Buff Nor. hen, a grand specimen. Altogether the show was a great success, and the committee are to be congratulated on the result, which is only a fair reward for the businesslike manner in which they conducted it.—E. BARBER.

FRIZINGTON.

The Frizington C.B.S. held their first annual show on January 8th. The Royal Oak Assembly Room, in which the exhibits were staged, was kindly lent by Mr. J. B. Hussop. The room was capitally lighted and ventilated, and warmed up, which suited the occasion. Mr. Grant acted as president, and Mr. Dixon as vice-president, both of whom are greatly interested in the welfare of this society. Mr. G. Wilson, the chairman, and Mr. R. Armstrong, the vice-chairman, rendered much help in making the show a success. The committee consists of a band of willing fanciers. Every praise is due to the following: Messrs. W. Hosking, J. Hosking, C. Fisher, R. Armstrong, J. Lampshire, H. Finlinson, and J. Finlinson. The secretary's office was filled for the first time by Mr. D. Bell, who accomplished his work in praiseworthy style. The staging was neatly arranged, and every bird could be seen at a glance. Mr. J. Nicholson (Maryport) judged the Canary section, and Mr. G. Wilson (Frizington) the remainder, and their awards were well received.

BROADSTAIRS.

This show was held on January 6th and 7th, at the Assembly Rooms, a very fine place for a cage bird show, being well lighted and warm. The entry was small (no less than half the classes having unfortunately to be cancelled); probably an advertisement in Cage Birds would have had the desired effect of a good entry. YARM.

This show duly came off on January 8th in the Central Hall, Yarm. There was an increase of over 100 entries, nearly 400 turning up on this occasion, which was a source of great pleasure to the officials and committee. All the principal gentry of the district lent their patronage, and a membership of 40 or more make up a strong backbone. Mr. W. Honeyman is chairman, Mr. R. T. Hansom, vice-chairman; Committee, Messrs. J and C. E. Henderson, H. Garbutt, A. Clement, W. Smith, W. Johnson, R. Wallenger, L. Wilford, H. Weedy, J. Spence, J. T. and A. Honeyman, F. Danby, J. Galloway, and T. F. Wilson, with Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby as hon. secs. and treasurers. These men worked right hard, and had matters complete in good time. A word of praise is due to the juvenile members, for these boys are really smart and enthusiastic, and get through lots of work in quick time. Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby are men who thoroughly know their work and do it. Specials were offered for all open classes. The Norwich section did not fill as it should have done with Mr. Hill (of Hill and Stewart) as specialist judge, but the quality of the birds was very good. Yorkshires came up very well indeed, and the A.O.V. class was well represented. The Hybrids, British and Foreign birds came up splendidly, and must be regarded as one of the best seen in this district. All through the classes there was a very high standard of excellence in the exhibits. Competition was very close and keen in consequence. Mr. Hill judged the Canaries, and Mr. Houlton judged Hybrids, British and Foreign, and their awards were very well received all round. The enthusiasm amongst these fanciers is sure to make this one of the leading shows in the North in future.

Annual members' show, held in the Liberal Club on Dec. 27th. Judge: Mr. J. Bailey (Bradford). Sixteen classes were provided. Good specials were given for most points gained up to 9. Mr. L. Dyson won most points (watch), M. Peel 2nd (bottle). T. W. Turton 3rd (bottle), J. Helliwell 4th (silk handkerchief); J. Hirst and A. Senior, 5th and 6th, equal points (fancy teapot and quart Canary seed); E. Radley 7th (pipe and case), Hobson Lodge, and S. Morley, 8th and 9th, equal. Hy. Lodge won Ramsden's special for best red bird. During judging Mr. Bailey drew attention to a specimen which he said was typical of a good many of the present day exhibits. In his opinion we were losing the graceful drawn-out Yorkshire bird by developing too much the fore part. What he thought was needed was introduction of more of the Belgian blood.—J. Lodge, Sec.

SUFFOLK C.B.S.

The 17th annual show was held in the large club room, Globe Inn, Hyde Park Corner, Ipswich, on December 27th. Entries were about the same as last year, numbering 132. Some very fine specimens were on view, and a very fair number of people took advantage of seeing them. The quality of the exhibits was all that could be wished for. Two extra special prizes were given, one for the best Norwich Plainhead in show, and one for best bird in Classes 16 and 22, both being carried off by Mr. William Cook. Mr. C. Simpson again officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction. Through the generosity of subscribers and donors, the committee were able to present a special prize to the best bird in each class. The management tenders hearty thanks to all who contributed to the success of the show.

CITY OF WAKEFIELD.

City of Wakefield O.S. third annual open show was held on January 8th in the Blind Institute Sale Room, Queen Street. Mr. J. Broadley, of Windhill, officiated as judge, his awards being well received. Entries came up badly, no less than six classes out of the 26 provided having, unfortunately, to be cancelled, and seven commanded only half prize money, containing only seven entries each. The total number of entries was 195, averaging on full prize classes 12 per class. This, we hear, will leave the society with a deficit of at least £4 or £5. Sectional specials were awarded as follows: Classes 1 to 6: 1, Bailey; 2, W. H. Shackleton; 3, tie between Ogden Bros. and J. Helliwell; Classes 7 and 8: 1, F. Dixon; 2, W. T. Pepper; Classes 13, 14, 15: Messrs. Hunt and Owen; Classes 16, 17, 18: Axe and Isherwood tie; Classes 19 to 24: 1, Stables; 2, Morrison; 3, Casey; Classes 25, 26: 1, Naylor. Mr. P. Parker, the sec., and Mr. C. T. Parkes, the assist. sec., bad things very well in hand; cards were up in good time, and they were ably backed up by an enthusiastic working committee, amongst whom we must specially mention Mrs. Parkes, who worked hard, and very ably superintended the unpacking and the re-packing of the birds, and the society are to be congratulated on having such a friend amongst the ladies. Besides, they had Mr. Isherwood, their hard-working official, and Messrs. Talbot, Taylor, Netherwood, Atkinson, Holroyd, and others. All birds were packed up and on their homeward journeys in good time, and it is hoped that the reverse and great loss on the show will not prove too much for this band of fanciers, all of whom are practically new fanciers; there is not an old stager amongst them. We shall hope to see them come up smiling another year.

THURSO, N.B.

The 21st annual show of the Thurso O.S. was held in the Town Hall on Jauuary 5th. The day was favourable, being bright and clear. The birds were well seen, and made a fine display. The entries were quite up to those of former years, and totalled about 500. Exhibits were forwarded from Inverness, Dingwall, Wick, etc. The quality of the exhibits would have done credit to any of our city shows. The cup for best bird in Canary section was awarded to a Scotch Fancy hen of rare quality, the best we have ever seen so far north. In the Norwich section there were also some fine specimens. This section has greatly improved in size and quality in recent years. Border fancies were the strongest in the show, some almost faultless specimens not getting a look in. These are now becoming the most popular of all the varieties. The secretary, Mr. Millikin, had everything in apple-pie order, and was ably assisted by a committee of most willing workers. Mr. A. Anderson (Edinburgh) judged.

DUNDON, N.B.

The newly formed Cage Bird Association of Dunoon held their first annual show on January 3rd, when all previous records obtained by the old society were broken, 154 birds being staged. The show, which received extensive patronage, was held in the Lesser Burgh Hall. The judging was done by Mr. H. Moreland (Falkirk), and the secretarial duties were carried out by Mr. W. Melville. This society seems to be full of promise.

Entries were not numerous, but several very nice exhibits put in an appearance, especially in the Norwich classes. The winner of the special for best in the show was a very handsome buff Norwich hen, shown by Mr. Hart. Mr. J. Lindsay Deas, the energetic and courteous hon. secretary, and his committee are to be congratulated on the success which attended their efforts, and upon the way in which they managed the fixture. FRASERBURGH.

Annual open show held in the Dalrymple Hall on January 5th. This hall is an ideal place for a cage bird show, being well lighted on both sides and free from draught. We would venture to suggest that all Canaries be fed and watered as soon as they arrive, and not left till after judging. The entries did not come quite up to expectations, this probably being due to so many of the special prizes being confined to local exhibitors. Yorkshires were a nice lot, both in number and quality, and the British and Foreign made a grand show. A most creditable lot of birds was exhibited by Mr. Gavin, who had over 50 entries. The committee, ably led by their joint secs. and treas., Messrs. Grant and Gordon, had everything in good order. Mr. W. Grant (President) put in a hard day's work, as also did the vice-president, Mr. J. Yates; they are both old and hard-working fanciers of the first water. Mr. J. Lyon (Aberdeen) judged, and apparently gave every satisfaction.

PLUMSTEAD AND WOOLWICH.

Annual show of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S., held at Trinity Road Schools, Woolwich, on January 6th and 7th. It resulted in a splendid success, both as regards entries and quality. The entries showed a great advance upon last year's total, for which the committee were grateful, and felt stimulated to greater efforts in the future. The Trinity Schools possess a large well-lighted and ventilated upper room, free from draughtiness. In this room the show was held. The staging was excellent, and the free use of decorative material added effect to the arrangements. The competition in the open section of Canaries was particularly keen, both in Norwich and Yorkshires, whilst British were a very beautiful collection. The members' classes contained some high-class stock. The show was opened by the Mayor of Woolwich, who is an old fancier and a keen critic of most of the feathered race. His Worship was introduced by the President, the Rev. G. T. Bayley, in a felicitous speech. The Mayor spoke of the interest he felt in the breeding and exhibiting of all kinds of live stock, and its influence for good. Thanks were accorded to him on the motion of the Chairman (Mr. G. Meades). The hon. secretaries (Messrs. Pawley and Newnham) were congratulated on all hands upon the very efficient manner in which they carried out their duties, and they received every assistance from the other officers, Messrs. A. Best (vice-chairman), and Borlase, Hawkes, Hall, Putner, Hartland, Maclellan, Miller, J. Smith, and Wood (committee-men). Mr. J. Robson judged the open section, and Mr. F. Easterling the members' classes.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD.

The open show of the Sutton-in-Ashfield Society (after an interval of four or five years) took place on January 8th. The revival of this old-time fixture is due to one or two well-known fanciers, who have thoroughly made up their minds to see that Sutton is not to be left out in the cold. The St. Modweu's Hall is of good light, spacious, centrally situated, and very adaptable for such a function. The schedule unfortunately caused a little misunderstanding, and a few birds were "wrong classed." Another year our Sutton friends will see to rectifying this error, and provide a clearer classification. They are genuine sportsmen, true to the core, and what can be done in the future will be attended to in every detail. President, Mr. Jesse Briggs; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Jones, Peat, Clayton, and Woodhouse, all of whom are heart and soul in the work of the society, and rendered most liberal assistance. The committee consists of a band of very willing workers, and every praise is due to Messrs. M. Norwood, G. Bingley, H. Booth, G. Long, G. Norwood, G. Poole, W. Wardle, W. Dobb, J. Norwood, D. Shaw, H. Riley, and C. Waldren. The treasurer and chairman is Mr. A. Clayton (Railway Inn), who is the son-in-law of the late Mr. Simms (noted Crest fancier), and an enthusiastic official. Under his guidance progression is sure to result. The vice-chairman is Mr. W. Osborne, a capital understudy, and the secretary is Mr. E. Parnell, a trier to the farthest end. He works wonderfully well, great credit being due to him for the exertions he put forth. Norwich were very nice, the Crests and Crest-breds, and British were most pleasing. Novice members staged some choice specimens. Specials were won as follows:—Best Nor., S. Cook; Crest, L. Burrows; C.-B., M. Norwood; novice Nor., W. Wardle; C. or C.-B., Shaw and Booth; Peat's medal for hottest fed, W. Vardy. Judging was over in good time, and cards were displayed promptly. Everything went smoothly and well, and the management throughout was excellent. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) placed the cards, and his awards were well received.

CHIRNSIDE.

The 29th annual show was held in the Volunteer Hall on January 1st. The cage birds were staged at the end of the hall. The entry was a good one, and the quality all over high class, many noted winners being on view. A splendid Pied Scotch Fancy carried away special for best bird, and right well did he deserve it. The B.F.C.C. medal was won by a grand three-pointed buff cock. Breeding pairs were also good, headed by a splendid pair of marks. A very nice evenly-marked Mule won his class somewhat easily. The secretary, Mr. Shiell, had everything at his finger-tips, and there were some hard-working stewards in the persons of Messrs. Ferguson, Denholme, Scott and Young. Mr. Joseph Thomson (Newtongrange) judged, and his awards all over were well received.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, 10 of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." ENGLAND'S ROLLER EXCHANGE.

We Import every variety of German Roller, from 5/- to £5; we sell for cash or exchange for other livestock: Isaacs, 82, Neal-st., Long Acre, London.

FOR YEARS PAST.

I have publicly invited intending purchasers of Rollers to have one of my Leipzig Rollers on a week's trial, and one from elsewhere at any higher price, on similar terms; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not a far better bird at lower price, return it to me, and have the whole of your money back. I am frequently publishing letters from persons who have done this and they tell me that my birds have beaten birds costing twice and even thrice the money elsewhere. I now have an enormous stock of pure Leipzig Rollers, all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft rouladcs, piccolo trills, Nightingale jug-jug, bell harp and flute notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark chopping, or any other harsh notes whatever, price 6/- and 7/- each; special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, etc., 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a few special Seifert contest Rollers, fit to win contests immediately, 15/-, 17/6 and 21/- each. These contest birds are exceedingly soft and melodious, with lovely deep "round" rolls, etc., and are guaranteed of same strain, and bred by same man that won first prize of £60, with 6 of these birds, at Hamburg, on Nov. 21st last. Leipzig Roller hens 2/- each, 3/6 couple. I also have a large stock of Hartz cocks (often sold as Hartz Mountain Rollers), in full and vigorous song, day and gaslight, at 4/6 each, seven for 28/-; Hartz hens, 2/6 couple. These Hartz cocks are exceptionally loud, free songsters, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where a good loud singer is required. Special Roller singing cabinets, with folding doors, 2/6 each. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/6 each. The following letters are entirely unsolicited, and full name and address is given with each one, so that any sceptical person can make fullest enquiries as to my statement. "19, The Crescent, Worsley. Dec. 10th.—Sir,—I must say the Roller you sent me has far exceeded my expectations. He is a real good one, singing both day and gaslight, and what music. Yes, he is a gem, and I am more than satisfied.—Yours, C. Ridyard." "Pershore Road, Gt. Hampton, near Evesham.—Dec. 11.—Sir,—Thanks for Hartz cock you sent me a month ago; it is best songster I ever had. Thanking you for honest and prompt dealings.—Yours, Ernest White." "29, Clifford Road, West Stanley. Dec. 6th.—Sir,—Received Roller in splendid condition; this makes the seventh from you in 12 months. It is a champion songster; they have all given every satisfaction. Thanking you for prompt and honest dealings.—Yours, Wm. Roc." "6 Belle Vue Terrace, Penzance. Dec. 8th.—Sir,—Rollers to hand safely; many thanks for sending two such good birds; they are both singing now. It is a pleasure to deal with such an honest man.—Yours, A. Eddy." "Harness Stores, Byfleet. Dec. 2nd.—Sir,—Received three Schoolmasters, all in best of health. All these are singing grand, as I write this card. Thanking you for your selection.—Yours, F. Eyes." "22, Union Terrace, York. Dec. 2nd.—Sir,—Roller arrived safe; my friend is delighted with it, and I think it a beauty. I like your new style of sending them out. —Yours, H. Brough." "6 Derby Square, Preston, Lancs. Nov. 29th.—Sir,—Leipzig Roller arrived safe, and is more than I expected for the money. He started singing before being unpacked, and will sing while I hold the cage in my hand.—Yonrs, J. Holmes." "Mountain, Pantygasseg, Pontypool. Nov. 30th.—Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller safe. He is singing all right. I give you credit as a packer.—Yours, G. Calder." "18, Henry Street, Hyde, Manchester. Nov. 28th.—Sir,—Allow me to thank you for your business methods. The Roller is singing splendid, as I write this, and his changes of song are a surprise to me, and all who hear him. I have heard birds that have cost three times the money that I would not exchange him for, and I have myself given more, and they were not a patch on the one you sent me.—Yours, J. Thorley." "15, Gordon Road, Finchley, London. Nov. 25th.—Sir,—Please send three Hartz cocks and box cage. The Hartz cocks I had from you last year still sing splendidly, and give every satisfaction.—Yours, W. Green." "51, York Street, Baker Street, London. Nov. 26th.—Sir,—Received the 4 birds yesterday, in good condition. The Hartz cock I am delighted with. He is a beauty. I have heard expensive Rollers that he would bear comparison with, and the Roller hens are fine birds, and would sell for double in any shop about here.—Yours, M. Hollins." Kindly note: All are safely and warmly packed, and sent on full week's trial, on receipt cash, or "Cage Birds" deposit system. I take all risks and refund cash promptly if every satisfaction not given. See British Bird column.

Are there any Beginners

Interested in these? If so, they will fill your requirements, and have the same personal attention and care as if you were paying the highest prices.

If you cannot afford a big price, send for a pair of my correctly matched Norwich at 8/6 or 9/6; and now note this.—In most cases where you send for pairs at this price, you are sent two buffs, often both marked birds—this is where you do not get what is required—well, I send you one marked, and one clear, one buff, and the other yellow. Then for 3/6 I will send you a Double Breeding Cage, fitted with everything complete, for an immediate start. Total for Birds and Cage, 12/3 for 8/6 birds, or 13/3 for 9/6 birds. But I would strongly recommend you to have my Cage No. 100; it has sand drawers, and is fitted with sanitary furniture throughout, and the price is only 5/-.

To the Experienced.

Travelling Cages in all cases, 3d. extra.

For full detailed list of Lancashires, Lizards, Cinnamons, Border Fancies, Dutch Frills, etc., send for my Copyright, Illustrated list—a post card will do.

Easy Payments by joining my Original Bird Club.

The first ever brought to the notice of fanciers; the first payment system, with its many objections, is double as old as some of those who claim so much for it. To use an old saying, it is as "old as the bills," but has neither their beauty nor usefulness.

Some Appreciations of our Xmas Number.

I think your Christmas Number a really splendid twopennyworth.—(Miss) H. M. BATES (Manchester).

The plate with CAGE BIRDS Christmas Number was a treat. I wish the journal every success.—A. STOCKTON (Chester-le-Street).

Your Christmas Number is simply grand, and I cannot find words too good for it. It is honestly worth sixpence.—A. BROWN (London, N.).

I am delighted with CAGE BIRDS Christmas Number, and value it. It is such a treat—full of valuable instructions to all who love the Fancy.—A. E. SYMONS (Bideford).

Your latest coloured plate is really a work of great merit on the part of both your artist and your printer, as it is so natural and lifelike.—GEORGE BROWN, secretary, Leith O.S.

I have only just started to take in your CAGE BIRDS, and am very sorry to think I have never done so before. I am more than pleased with this week's coloured plate.—B. TIDY (Sittingbourne).

The 1909 Christmas number of CAGE BIRDS, to my idea, is perfection. I am sure if the birds could put their notes into words their song would be full of praise for CAGE BIRDS.—JAMES A. DOUGLAS (London, W.).

I have enjoyed the few minutes I have just had with the "Star and Starlings," so much so that I could not refrain from sending the supplement to an old birdy friend of mine.—G. W. OLDHAM (Hazel Grove, Stockport).

Your last coloured plate (Favourite Finches) outclassed all previous ones in my estimation, and is a real piece of art-craft.—E. MELLORS (Hucknall Torkard).

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for two years, but your last Double Number surprised me indeed, for "The Season's Greeting to all our Readers," and the supplement are well worth double the money. I hope all readers are as pleased with them as I am.—GWILYM EVANS (Llanelly).

Although I've been a fancier from my schooldays, and many years ago was a breeder and exhibitor of Crested, Norwich, British birds, etc., and secretary to the late Diss Ornithological C.B.S. (Norfolk), and have taken many Fancy papers in my time (lastly your CAGE BIRDS), hardly creditable though it may appear, I have never before this put my hand to pen, ink, and paper to write on matters relating to the Fancy, but what with Mr. Lowne's (Yarmouth) interesting notes, Mr. Chirgwin's (as usual, interesting and most amusing) letter, your beautiful coloured plate, and the Blackbird on the front page of supplement—I could not let such fine work pass without comment. Briefly, I consider it "ne plus ultra." May success always crown the efforts of CAGE BIRDS.—WALTER LE RANE (London, N.W.).

Please accept my hearty congratulations (both yourself and your artist) for the splendid treat given us in your superb Christmas number, which fairly puts all previous issues "in the shade." The Blackbird's Christmas Dinner is quite true to life. We who live in the country see such sights every winter, when poor Blackie is very hungry, and his task, to all appearances, is labour in vain. It brings to my mind the latest: a boy who had started work, told his mother his mates had potatoes for their suppers, and he would like some likewise. This drew from his father the remark, "How the dickens do you expect to be fed on the fat of the land on 10d. per day?" The Blackbird in winter is like the boy—highly pleased to receive scraps from the table even of the potato, although his income is small.—J. PATTERSON (Chirnside, N.B.).

MY VISIT TO THE SCOTTISH NATIONAL SHOW.

By W. REID.

It was with feelings of the greatest possible pleasure that I looked forward to my visit to the "Scottish National" on New Year's Day, for I had heard so much in regard to the general excellence of this show from fanciers who had been there before, that I felt I was going to see something out of the ordinary run of cage bird exhibitions, and, let me say here, I was not disappointed.

We arrived at Edinburgh in good time, and having been met at the station by several fanciers who had been staying there overnight—Messrs. B. Armstrong, John Currah, and others—we made our way to the hall, in the midst of a miserable drizzling rain, which, however, had no effect upon us, as we are quite used to this sort of weather in our own district. At the Corn Exchange, what a galaxy of beauty met our eyes! We North of England fanciers are very keen, and we pride ourselves upon the excellence of our exhibitions, yet I raise my hat to the officials of the Scottish National, and I candidly admit that I have never seen anything to equal their show, either in numbers, quality, or excellence of management even at the best of our North of England shows; and that is saying something.

The first things that strike a visitor are the great size of the hall, and how perfectly adapted it is for its purpose. The staging is really excellent, and those responsible for its erection certainly know how to do these things to advantage. Thus the visitor finds the staging nearest the doors erected in semi-circular fashion instead of in the orthodox straight rows, thus avoiding any possibility of draughts (even if there were any), as the backs of the cages face the entrance.

One thing which impressed me very much is the system of having breaks in the long rows of staging, which enables visitors to get from one side to the other, and amongst the different sections, without having to walk from end to end of the hall. This is a feature which I think could be advantageously followed by our large English shows, for it is really a benefit to everybody.

The method of entering the hall (through turnstiles) was unique to the fanciers who had not been there before, but not more so than the method of getting out again. When anyone wanted to go out to see how the weather was progressing, he found he had a penny to pay (that is, if he intended returning), and it was this fact that occasioned the only "growl" that I heard during the whole of my visit. One fancier (or visitor, I don't know which), remarked that he would like a little refreshment, but he didn't want to pay the penny to go out. I knew a friend of mine had a small bottle of "something" in his pocket, and if the face of the individual referred to had not been so suggestive of his capabilities, I would probably have felt inclined to introduce him to my friend. But it reminded me forcibly of the big navvy I had heard about. This navvy entered a "pub" where some of his mates were enjoying themselves, and one of them asked: "Are you going to have a drink, Mick?" "Yes," he replied, "I'll take a mouthful." "Oh, no you won't," retorted the other, "you'll only just get a pint, the same as the rest!"

When our party arrived at the ball, it had broken up, some going for one section, and some for another, according to their individual fancy. We Norwich fanciers of course made straight for our favourites. We had not been there above a minute or two before we noticed that some of the birds were remarkably level in colour, for it is not often that one sees a Norwich with its flights and tail feathers the same tone of colour, both under and above. We could not help expressing our admiration of the manner in which the birds were put down (or got up, whichever you like), but we heard afterwards that they had been tested and disqualified. We wondered how it was that these birds had not been noticed before; it was hinted that these little things are so common in Scotland at the present time that fanciers are quite used to it.

Taken altogether, the Plainheads were a really grand lot, and well worthy of the reputation of the show, and the judges appeared to have been very happy in their selections, for although in one or two instances the awards did not meet with popular approval, it should be remembered that there is sometimes a great difference between judging a class of birds one day and criticising them the next.

The other sections were also grand, and in some cases the birds were continually surrounded. This was notably so in the case of the shield winner, Mr. Armstrong's dark Crest, "King of Kings." Another exhibit which attracted great attention was Dr. Galloway's grand clear yellow Siskin Canary Mule, and it was remarked that it would be a paying business to have birds like the above couple and several others that I could mention, formed into something like a "side show."

As one watched the crowds of fanciers and visitors continually passing along and noted the happy and contented look upon their faces, it was easy to surmise that everybody was satisfied with the exhibition; and truly they had cause to be. This show appears to be the happy meeting place of fanciers from all parts of the kingdom, and I was quite astonished at the number of old friends and acquaintances I met. I was also very pleased to meet with many well-known fanciers from far-off districts, fanciers whom I knew by repute but had never previously seen.

And what a hard-working body of fanciers these Scotchmen are, to be sure. Everyone of them appearing to be eager to do his share to make the show a success.. The visitor was attentively listened to, and if it possibly could be done his wants were promptly attended to. As for our Scotch friends' hospitality, it is unbounded. Although I am not a strictly temperate man by any means, I sometimes have the courage to refuse too much of even a good thing. I am glad it happened so on this occasion, otherwise I am afraid I should have been in a state somewhat similar to the Tyneside lady who tried to commit suicide in the river, but did not succeed because (as the boatman who pulled her out candidly informed several of us as he rowed us across a week or two after), "She was so full of whisky she couldn't sink!"

At the close of the show, we made our way to the station for the journey home, everyone highly delighted with his visit. It would have done the officials good if they could have heard the praises bestowed upon them, and the many wishes expressed that they would long provide such a treat to fanciers.

SOME GOSSIP FROM "AN OLD HAND."

Another year had passed away, and once more I found myself in "Auld Reekie." Once in Edinburgh's Corn Exchange, I moved to the Scotch Fancy Section, where my heart is, and found Scotland's foremost breeders out in great force. Amongst them we noticed the veterans Messrs. McLennan, Thornton, King, Allan, Pringle, Crosbie, Melrose, Craig, Rodgers, Ramsay, Gordon, Whitefield, Menzies, and many more. A very pleasing feature was to meet so many of their wives with them, and admiring each point of the birds with more than a critical eye; indeed, we heard one or two helping their husbands to make the purchase price a little easier. Those are the dears that keep their "hubbies" safely at home! The great talk here was the want of high-class birds, such finding a ready market at good prices. Only one cannot shut one's eyes to the fact that Scots Fancies are down in numbers within the last few years. Twenty years ago they were quite as numerous as the Border is at the present day.

The supposed "King of the Fancy," the Belgian, was criticised keenly, all seeming to agree that you could not get a good one either for love or money, neither here nor on the Continent. We came across Mr. Jackson, of Pershore, an old admirer, who has been out of the Fancy a few years. We heard he intends to go over to Belgium and see what can be picked up. I wish him success.

I now pass an opening labelled with the word "Refreshment." We think the caterers might well add the words "Dinner, teas, etc.," as many fanciers we met told us they could not find a place to get dinner outside, and were more than astonished to hear they could have been served inside.

We now arrive at Messrs. Patterson and Bruce's "Wee Gems," some rare ones meeting our charmed view. Here the competition was extremely keen, all the talent being forward, giving the judges aforementioned a hard time of it, through which they came with every credit.

Of Mr. John Craig (Brechin) here is a good tale. Meeting Mr. Craig, we went out for a "refresher," and coming across another enthusiast, pressed him to join. His very first remark was: "What kind of chap is Craig who is to judge Bathgate? I think he will be an old d——." You can picture his embarrassment when he was told to look round and see him, looking as spruce as ninepence!

Another "gentleman" we overheard say that there "seemed to be a terrible amount of those vermin of Borders here." Now I feel sorry for his wife (if he has one), for he must be without an eye for the beautiful, and her charms will be wasted on one who could not see the beauty in one of the most graceful and perfect of the Canary race. When he sees this in print, he may take a second notice of her, or begin to look into the beauty of the bird.

Some great Linnet fanciers from the South were disappointed at not seeing Mr. Bishop's Scottish champion. On enquiry we were informed that Mr. Bishop refused a tempting offer for this Linnet, and since then it has joined the great majority. Hard lines, as it was a real good bird and a great winner.

Everyone was delighted with the Softbill British, and the Foreign, both as regards variety and numbers.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

Author of "The World's Birds."

A Pinioned Pratincole.

The case of the winged Ringed Plover or Ring Dotterel, about which a correspondent asked recently, reminds me of a very out-of-the-way bird which I was the means of introducing to aviculture by getting hold of a winged specimen. It was when I was in East Africa in 1892, and I was with a friend on the mainland opposite Mombasa Island, when my companion winged one of a flock of Pratincoles passing overhead, and I brought it home alive, and ultimately got it safely to England and presented it to the Zoo in his name—the first specimen of this curious group of waders ever kept in England, as far as I know. The wing was badly smashed between the elbow and the pinion, so I cut it off at this point, and the bird recovered from the injury all right. I fed it first on grasshoppers, and, during the voyage home, on raw meat cut up small, and it did well.

A Feathered Compromise.

The Pratincoles, or Swallow-Plovers, as they are sometimes more intelligently called, are a very curious little group of birds. In general appearance, as I have tried to show in the outline sketch appended, they are just the sort of bird one would expect to get by crossing a Plover and a Swallow, supposing such Mule-breeding to be possible! In colour, however, they favour the Plover tribe, being brown or drab in tint, with black and white tails, and they have no real relationship with the swallows, producing downy and active young. Some time after they had my specimen at the Zoo (which belonged to the Madagascar species, Glareola ocularis, not previously known to occur in Africa), they got specimens of the common Pratincole of Europe (G. pratincola), and these bred in the small aviary in the Diving-birds' House, or at any rate laid eggs and hatched chicks, though the latter were not reared. This species of Pratincole, by the way, occasionally visits England, where it is, of course, promptly suppressed on sight by British ornithologists, eager to advance the cause of science! At the Cape, Pratincoles are well known as great enemies to locusts, and are in fact usually called "Locust birds," and protected accordingly.

An Unfortunate Sparrow.

Those who read our correspondence columns will have noticed that the Ring Plover alluded to had had its broken wing healed in such a way as to show no sign of the injury. This is, in my experience, very rare, for, as far as I have seen, when a bird has had a wing broken and this sets again, it is usually in such a position that not only is flight impossible, but the appearance of the specimen is permanently spoilt. I once, however, captured in the Zoological Gardens a cock Sparrow, which could not fly at all, but yet looked perfectly all right. However, on examining his wings, I found that one would not open, and had evidently been broken, but had set again in the closed position, and I have wondered ever since how that Sparrow had managed to survive among rats and cats all that time. I only caught him by getting him against a length of wall, and I handed him over to a keeper, who no doubt consigned him to the animals' commissariat, the proper and legitimate destination of the Zoo Sparrow.

The Pied Mynah.

I was asked the other day to identify a Mynah which was described to me as black and white, with a conspicuous white patch on the cheeks, and a bill red at the base and white at the tip, and resembling in general shape our own Starling. This is the Pied Mynah of India (Sturnopastor contra), and I found it in Bengal the commonest of the Mynahs next to the brown House Mynah (Acridotheres tristes). Unlike that bird, and indeed unlike Mynahs or Starlings in general, it does not breed in holes, but builds a great untidy conspicuous nest on the branch of a tree. It is a species I always liked very much, as its notes are particularly cheerful and pleasant; indeed, I never heard it utter a harsh one. It was commonly found looking for food on the turf alongside the House-Mynahs, but while these birds were also often running on the roads, I never saw the pied species off the grass, and it seems to be the most truly insectivorous of all the Mynahs. One very curious thing about it is that the young birds have the inside of the bill orange and the legs black, while the adults have white legs and the inside of the bill as black as though they had been drinking ink. I once saw a curious semi-albino variety, pale grey where it should have been black, in a cage outside a native hut.

Notes from Erin.

IT is with regret that I learn of the death of Mr. Byrne, father of Mr. M. Byrne, the well-known British bird enthusiast of Dundalk.

MUCH comment is being made owing to Banbridge and Ulster O.A. not having sent out prize cards for their recent shows.

MR. KEATING (Dundalk), the well-known Yorkshire fancier, has presented the masters of the Christian Brother Schools with a number of the coloured plates (presented with CAGE BIRDS from time to time). They are being framed and hung in the school rooms for the purpose of helping the youths with their natural history lessons.

AT Sligo Show a Dublin fancier had a bird disqualified for alleged staining. I have heard that the bird disqualified was recently purchased by this exhibitor, and sent to the show as received. As he is a well-known sportsman, I am sure all who are acquainted with him will hope that his explanation will be accepted by the governing body.

DUBLIN Cage Bird, etc., Show, proved a great success, which was due in no small way to Mr. Gibson, the courteous and energetic secretary, who was ably assisted by Mr. Dowling. We hope to get the secretary into the "fighting line" of exhibitors next season.

WE are pleased to see that the ladies are coming well to the front this season as exhibitors. We congratulate Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. O'Neill, Mrs. Cambling, Miss Bolton, Miss O. Perrin, Miss O. M. Smith, Miss Wall, Miss E. B. Smith, Miss Carroll, etc., and wish them every success in their hobby. May their example be followed by many other ladies.

WITH much regret it has been noticed that the N.P.C. Show, fixed for this month, has been withdrawn, and that apparently (for some reason or other yet unknown to many fanciers), this popular club will not hold their show this season. However, we hope that the committee will reconsider the matter, and hold the show as usual, when no doubt all will come forward with a bumping entry and make the venture a record show.

A NEW club has been formed in Holywood, co. Down, to be called the Holywood and Dis. C.B.S. Mr. F. Cole, 7, High Street, Holywood, is acting as hon. secretary, and he will be pleased to hear from intending members.

CLOSED RING.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

INTENDING EXHIBITORS should remember that the last day for making entries is Saturday (January 22nd), and post early to make certain of being in time, as the management clearly states that there will be no extension of time.

There should be a great entry in view of the splendid prize money and other attractions, and if any readers wish to enter birds, but have not received schedules, they should refer to the review of the schedule given on page 31 last week; or describe their birds to the Manager, who will see them entered in the proper classes.

TELEGRAMS or other communications asking for results of the judging cannot be answered by the show authorities. Under these circumstances CAGE BIRDS will be pleased to supply exhibitors with the result in any class upon compliance with the following rules:

1. Fully-stamped and addressed postcards or telegraph forms must reach us, at 154, Fleet Street, not later than February 3rd.

2. The number of each exhibit and number of class must be stated, and spaces left blank for the awards. For instance:—"Jones, 100, Market Street, Leicester.—Class 30, 259 ——, Class 31, 263——," etc.

3. All the applicants for results at the Palace must write RESULT on top left-hand corner of the envelope, in which the postcard or telegraph form is sent to us.

CAGE BIRDS will have its usual stall at the Palace, and we shall be pleased to welcome visitors, to greet old friends, and to make new friends. Our "Visitors' Book" will be in its usual place on the stall, and we trust every one present will make a point of leaving their signatures therein. Any of our publications may be purchased of the attendant in charge.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep feelings of regret, writes Mr. H. Smith, hon. secretary of the Littleborough C.B.S., that I have to report the death of our esteemed president, Mr. Frank Fish, death overtaking him in the street (after a trying illness), on January 8th. As all his friends know, he was an ardent lover of the Lancashire Canary, and during this season has figured very prominently on the show bench. He was always a very faithful member of our society, and I feel sure all fanciers who have known him will deeply sympathise with his wife, relatives, and the Littleborough fanciers in their severe loss.

In sending us a copy of the Queen's Park and Dist. C.B.A. annual balance-sheet, which shows a balance of £11 15s. 3d., Mr. J. C. Birch, the secretary, writes that that balance would have been even bigger but for the loss on the annual show of £1 13s. 1d.

The general balance-sheet of the Oldham and Dist. C.B.S. is of a very encouraging nature, and the secretary (Mr. Steeple) and the other officers are to be congratulated upon the fact that the carry-forward is £6 7s. 11d., as against 3d. carried forward from the previous year's accounts.

All unsold tickets, duplicates, and money realised on account of the above society's sale on behalf of our old member, Mr. A. Wilson, writes Quarter-Master Sergt. Cant, hon. secretary of the Hamilton (Cadzow Oaks) O.S., must be returned at once, to allow of the draw taking place.

The City and Suburban A.C.B. are holding a matched pairs show on January 29th at the Church Institute, Paddington Street, Marylebone, W., for which a schedule, comprising 25 classes, has been issued. A splendid lot of specials is provided (31 in all), and the society are expecting a large attendance of the public.

We are having a table show of stock pairs (Crests and Norwich) at our next meeting at the Mechanics' Hall, on February 2nd, limited to 20 miles of Nottingham, writes Mr. G. E. Wilkinson, hon. secretary, Nottingham and Notts. O.S. Particulars will be sent to local secretaries.

Our first annual balance-sheet has just been published, and shows a balance in hand of £1 0s. 11d., writes Mr. J. Urquhart, hon. secretary of the Annandale C.B.F.A. Allow me to thank you for the report of our show in your columns. All our prize money was paid within eight days of the show.

Readers who intend to send their birds to compete at the great annual festival, the Crystal Palace Show, must remember to post their entries to-day (Saturday). Any forwarded later will not be accepted, as the management clearly state that there will be no extension of the date of closing. Be in time. If you have not a schedule, enter your birds from the detailed review of the prize list and classification given on page 31 of last week's issue.

I am now making all the marking rings for the Aberdeen University Natural History Department in the scheme they have in hand for trying to find out more about the migration of birds, particulars of which were published in CAGE BIRDS about last April, writes Mr. S. Drake (Halifax), the well-known maker of marking rings for Canaries, etc.

The balance-sheet of the North London C.B.A. shows the cash at bank and in the secretary's hands to be £6 6s. 3d., and the secretary, Mr. R. P. Harper, writes: I am pleased to say we are still going along very satisfactorily, and have several new members to nominate at our next meeting, and also a new cup to consider for most points.

The Reading and Dist. C.B.S. ninth annual report and balance-sheet for 1909 are distinctly encouraging, the balance at the bank and in the hands of the secretary being £5 15s. 10d., as against 5s. 9d. at the end of the previous year, which reflects every credit on Mr. W. H. Pyke, the secretary, and the other officials of the society.

I have been quite inundated with replies thanking me for promptitude in paying out prize money, writes Mr. W. H. Wright, secretary of the Carlisle Show, and also for the splendid way all exhibits arrived home. Our change of date brought us a remarkable change in entry, and the gate money was the largest taken for this last six years; in fact, everything was a success.

Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show.—Errors in schedule: Special No. 255 should read 2s. 6d.; Special No. 258 should read Bound Vol. Exhibitors are particularly requested to write after their entries the words or letters necessary to enable them to compete for club or trade prizes, as no alterations can be made on entry forms received. Entries positively close Saturday, January 22nd.—(ADVT.)

It is with regret that we learn of the dangerous illness lately undergone by Mr. A. C. Burn, the popular chairman of the City and Suburban A.C.B. Pneumonia came within an ace of claiming this good fancier as its victim, but fortunately he has managed to withstand the attack, and his many friends will join us in wishing him a speedy and complete recovery.

Through the illness of two of my children, I was temporarily compelled to hand over the books of the South Shields C.B.S. to the assistant secretary, Mr. Howden, but I am glad to say the children are all well again, and all correspondence can be forwarded to me in future. Also kindly note that I have removed from Marlborough Street to 76, Hartington Terrace, South Shields.—JAMES BARRASS, secretary, South Shields C.B.S.

The Crystal Palace Show.

I have had a record application for the schedule of the Crystal Palace Show, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden (the show manager), and for the last few days it has been entirely out of print. The Foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches will be judged by Mr. Silver and not by Mr. Russell Humphreys, as inadvertently appears in the schedule.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Will those members who have not yet paid their subscriptions for 1909 kindly let me have same at once, as I am revising list of members and I shall be compelled to strike out the name of any member not having done so before January 25th? Will members kindly note, too, that I have sent out all cash specials? Anyone not receiving theirs should write me at once.—JNO. HOPKINS, hon. secretary.

BATHGATE.

The 16th annual show was held on January 15th, and it proved a record success. No fewer than 750 birds were forward. In this number were included the gems of Scotland and England. Norwich were forward in force, and were carefully selected by that well-known exhibitor, Mr. Smeaton, and he seemed to pick his winners all right, as his awards were well received. Borders were a grand and choice selection, but two well-known Tweedside exhibitors made their presence keenly felt and accounted for all the 1sts in this section. Messrs. J. and J. Patterson captured seven 1sts, and Mr. McKenzie B.F.C. medal and two 1sts. All the classes were keenly contested, and we noticed several well-known winners had to be content with a card. Mr. J. Craig judged these classes, and his awards, taken all over, left little to be desired. Messrs. Patterson also won the Bald Challenge Cup for most points in show. Yorkshires, although not numerous, contained some good specimens, and the awards were carefully selected. Mules and Hybrids were a choice selection, some real hot ones being staged, and very keen competition raged in these classes, and the judges had their work cut out in selecting the winners. British as usual were the feature of the show, and it is now a recognised fact that this is the Palace of this variety in Scotland, and to win here you want something good. Every class was hotly contested, and to single out an individual class would almost be an impossibility. The four Greenfinch classes (Bathgate with these were the "pioneers") brought together the splendid entry of 68, a show of British which many shows would be proud of. These classes were judged by Messrs. S. Ward and Mackay; the former took the odd numbers and the latter the evens, and, taken all over, their awards were well received. The show was held as usual in the Corn Exchange, and the executive with their past experience had everything in apple-pie order, and ably assisted their worthy secretary, Mr. Bald. We noted the genial president, Mr. J. Livingstone, gracing the show with his manly presence, and working as hard as possible. We are the more glad in chronicling this fact as Mr. Livingstone has been poorly of late. The vice-president, Mr.-G. Cain, was as usual carefully attending to the wants and care of the exhibits and exhibitors alike, and the show of 1910, we are pleased to say, is the greatest success Bathgate has ever attained.

The Shows.

DUBLIN.

The show of the Dublin Pigeon and Cage Bird Association, which was held in the Rotunda on January 12th and 13th, secured about the same number of entries in the aggregate as last year, but our section was much less, possibly due to the show being later, and to the fact that the Irish birds have been run pretty hard this season. Mr. Gibson and his committee are to be congratulated upon a very nice show; the quality generally was about the best we have seen at a Dublin fixture, and the exhibits were most of them shown in A1 style. The Drummond cup was won by a grand young Crest shown by Mr. Birse, who was a most successful competitor in many classes. A most noteworthy achievement was that of Mr. Keogh, who with his novice special winning Yorkshire secured the special for the best Plainhead Canary in the show, thus beating all the champions. Yorkshires were quite the feature of the show, and a really grand lot they were. We must spare a word for the grand team of Norwich shown by Mr. Thompson. The British were a nice quality lot; the special for the best went to a remarkably fine Thrush shown by Mr. Mulcahy. Notable exhibits in this section were Mr. Aronstien's handsome Bullfinch hen, Mr. Bailey's Goldfinch, and each of the exhibits in the two A.O.V. classes. Mr. Gibson is quite a don amongst secretaries, earnest, energetic, business-like, yet good humoured and courteous; he is just the man for the post he holds, and his efforts are ably seconded by the committee. Mr. C. A. House judged.

HERTFORD.

The cage bird section of the Hertford and Dist. F.A. has steadily increased in numbers each year, and this, the sixth exhibition, held on January 12th and 13th, has proved more successful than ever; in fact, should there be the same increase another year, larger premises will have to be found. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that fanciers are finding out that their birds are well staged by cage bird men in a comfortable and warm room, with a good light, quite away from other sections of show, where the birds are staged in a way deserving of special mention, on shelves so arranged that every bird is well seen by visitors, and easily removed by the judge without disturbing any other cages. These shelves and brackets, we understand, were designed and presented to the society by one of their most enterprising members. The secretary, Mr. F. Looker, is to be highly congratulated on his very able management of affairs. It would not have been difficult to find six or seven real winners in each of the Yorkshire classes; in fact, one had to look for very little faults to find any real difference between the first three. Mr. J. Robson judged.

CAMPBELTOWN, N.B.

The 33rd annual exhibition of the Campbeltown O.A. was held in the Argyll Hall on January 1st, and proved a decided success. The officials are a genuine lot of fanciers, who are not afraid of work. The president is G. W. Gardiner, Esq., and the vice-president, Alexander Ollar, Esq. The hon. secretary, Mr. C. W. Pratt, is an ideal one, and handled everything in very fine form, with credit to himself. President Gardiner is very much respected, and vice-president Ollar is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as "The Pansy King." The Argyll Hall is most suitable, being roomy, free from draughts and affording excellent light. The entries were in excess of the previous year's, while the quality was of a much higher standard. Gold medal for best bird was won by Mr. D. McCallum; the silver medal for second best, by Messrs. A. and N. McPherson. Mr. J. H. Adam (Glasgow) placed the cards, and his awards were well received. I was recommended by a brother fancier to CAGE BIRDS when it first came out, and I have taken it ever since and no others, as I reckon it is the best published concerning birds. I have got some very sound information from time to time, and no fancier should go wrong if he follows the articles in it week after week. The articles of this last few weeks' on the Norwich Canary are very good and an excellent guide.—THOS. HY. HARRISON (Warrington).

I regret to say that our society this year is looking very badly off for membership (writes Mr. R. Binks, junr., sec. Ferryhill and Dist. C.B.S.), and is not likely to be carried on because of a society being formed at Spennymoor, to be carried on by table shows. Most of our members being novices, and not being able to win in open competition, they have left our society to join Spennymoor, leaving us with about six members, and I don't think we can carry our society on with such a small membership.

I am moving to larger and more commodious premises at 105, Cromwell Road, Milton Street, Partlecroft, Manchester, writes Mr. H. Orford, bird cage manufacturer. I am getting my orders pretty well under since the fire I had a few weeks ago, and hope soon to get square in my new surroundings. I also wish to say that I have had not one word of complaint from customers whose orders have been delayed through my misfortune, which speaks well for the consideration which these gentlemen have for a fellow fancier's loss.

OUR BIRTHDAY NUMBER.

It is gratifying to us to be able to announce that our Birthday Number of last week, which in itself broke all records, received a welcome from readers that placed yet another record to its credit. The demand for the issue was absolutely unprecedented, while never before have congratulatory letters reached us in such shoals.

To the senders we tender our most sincere thanks, and though pressure on space forbids this week, we shall hope to publish a selection from their letters in our issue of next week.

Last year many readers delayed ordering their copies of the Birthday Number, and found when they went to their newsagents that it was "sold out." This brought us not a few letters of complaint, and to meet the situation this year we have kept back at the office a limited number of copies so that by sending stamps or postal order to the Publishers, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Early application should be made, or the supply may be exhausted.

To Secretaries of societies and others willing to distribute copies of CAGE BIRDS' Coloured Calendar for 1910, or place same where they will be seen by the general public, we shall be pleased to forward a supply if they will kindly make application to our Publisher, at the above address; a postcard will do.

I must really thank you for the splendid drawing your artist (Mr. Norman) has made of the eye-marked yellow Border cock (1st Morriston), in the best Birthday Number you have ever issued. It is true to life, and reflects great credit on him. I may say that this is the first clear bird I ever bred, as I have been an enthusiast of Greens and Cinnamons for years. I parted with the bird to a gentleman in Maryport, and I know he will be glad to see it as well. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success and another prosperous year.—JOHN HOCKING (Swansea).

I have removed to "Brynteg," Alexandra Road, Brecon, writes Mr. D. H. Tedstone. The Refuge Assurance Company, Ltd., has been pleased to promote me to district superintendent. The company took for me larger premises than I had before; my inspector states that they are the finest in the whole of the Birmingham Division (which I am in). When I came here five-and-a-half years ago we had no business in the place; now they have made it into a district. The towns under my supervision are Brecon, Hay, Builth Wells, Rhayader, Llandrindod Wells, Llangammach, and Llanwrtyd Wells. My time will be fully taken up, so much so that I shall be compelled to reduce my stock, which I shall be advertising in your columns in a week or so. I have a splendid room for my birds.

THE FUND TO DEFEND THE BRITISH BIRD FANCY.

In case there should be some among those who read this notice who are unacquainted with the facts upon which the above appeal is being made, we may repeat that the Society for the Protection of Wild Birds is seeking to establish that no person may be in possession of a recently-taken British bird if that said bird is included in the list of protected species for the district in which the said person resides. Whether the bird was legally taken in a district wherein it is not protected they contend does not affect the case.

The society recently brought a test case against two London bird-dealers (Messrs. Preston and Flowers). The case came before Mr. Biron, the magistrate sitting at Old Street Police Court, and he arrived at the decision that the society's view of the matter was correct, and he condemned the defendants in costs.

The extreme seriousness of this decision will be at once apparent. It means that in protected districts (and they comprise practically all the thickly-populated areas and towns in the British Isles) everyone who keeps a newly-taken British bird, and every dealer who exposes one for sale, can be prosecuted and fined.

We, however, have it on high legal authority that if this decision of Mr. Biron be taken to the High Courts there is every likelihood of it being set aside, and in response to a request, have opened a fund to enable this course to be adopted, and the legal aspect of the question to be adequately thrashed out, as the defendants in this test case have not the means to carry the matter further, the estimated cost being from £50 to £60. This, we think, all will admit is but a trifle compared with the disastrous consequences which may ensue to the British Bird Fancy (the decision means its death-blow) should Mr. Biron's dictum be allowed to go unchallenged.

The need of funds is urgent, however, so do not delay; send your contribution at once, addressed to Mr. Geo. Crabb, c.o. the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and state clearly in your letter that it is intended as a donation towards the "Preston and Flowers Defence Fund." Mr. Crabb is the well-known gentleman who for so many years was chairman of the London and Provincial O.S., and a keen lover of British birds. He has very kindly consented to act as treasurer to the Defence Fund, and is arranging to open an account with a London Bank, therein to deposit the funds.

In our next issue we hope to have a lengthy statement to publish regarding the position of affairs. We would urge upon all readers, and this applies especially to dealers and those with trade interests, to support this Defence Fund, for in reality it is an effort being made to safe-guard them.

Here is the second list of subscriptions which have come to hand: The London and Provincial O.S., £1 1s.; L.S.R., 10s. 6d.; Manchester and N.C.O.S., 10s. 6d.; Allen Silver (Upper Tooting, S.W.), 10s.; Attercliffe C.B.S., 5s. 7d.; East Ham F.A., 5s. 6d.; "Catalona," 5s.; Crewe O.S., 5s.; W. Garner (London, N.), 5s.; Holywood C.B.S., 3s. 6d.; Fitzwilliam Linnet Club (Sheffield), 3s.; W. Sanford (Mexboro'), 3s.; G. Grimwood (Deptford, S.E.), 2s. 6d.; W. Owen (Woolwich, S.E.), 2s. 6d.; J. W. Levitt (Monk Fryston), 2s. 6d.; W. Rutherford (Crook), 2s. 6d.; Clitheroe C.B.S., 2s.; H. Nightingale (Stonebridge), 1s. 6d.; H. Grange (Hull), 1s.; C. C. B. Gordon (Taunton), 1s.; J. Hooke (Longthorpe), 1s.; D. Brown (Barrow-in-Furness), 1s.; and W. Thompson (Hull), 6d. These, with the amounts (£8 15s.) acknowledged in our last issue, bring the total to date to £14 0s. 7d. We hope to have a much heavier list to publish next week.

Appended are the names of some of the societies which we hear will have the matter placed before them in the near future. We feel quite sure, too, that it is the intention of still more to deal with this appeal, which concerns a question so vital to their interests:—Doncaster C.B.S., Clackmannanshire C.B.S., Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A., Loanhead C.B.A., Dewsbury O.F.S., Highgate Hampstead C.B.S., Wigan C.B.S., Choppington C.B.S., Warrington C.B.S., Lutterworth C.B.S., Norwich Amateur C.B.A., Lincoln C.B.S., Hyson Green (Notts) C.B.S., Yorkshire County British Bird and M.C., Barnsley C.B.S., Leeds Linnet F.A., Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., Swansea C.B.A., Bannockburn C.B.S., Yorkshire C. and C.B.S., of Ireland, Barrow C.B.A., Dunfermline C.B.S., Boness O.A., Musselburgh O.S., Carlisle C.B.S., Pelton Fell C.B.S., West Stanley C.B.S., Ambie C.B.S., Windhill Shipley O.S., Glasshoughton L.S.S., Denton C.B.S.

SOME OPINIONS OF READERS.

My committee have much pleasure in subscribing one guinea towards the good cause, and wish you every success in your noble efforts to secure a reversal of this iniquitous ruling.—H. E. TRINGHAM, hon. secretary, London and Provincial O.S.

With regard to the danger of the British bird Fancy, we will do our level best in support of the suggested defence fund. I will send the hat round at our next meeting, also we intend having a collecting box at our coming members' show, which will be placed well before visitors and members.—G. BESCOBY, secretary, Doncaster C.B.S.

Your letter, writes Mr. Harry G. Whibley, hon. secretary, Tunbridge Wells and Dis. F.A., was placed before the annual meeting of this association. I am desired to inform you that all sections of the association are in complete sympathy with the movement inaugurated by you, and although they are not in a very strong financial position, the committee have been instructed to make a grant to the funds for the defence. This I will endeavour to supplement by personal canvas of cage bird fanciers, and write you immediately after our next meeting. The association feel that should such a tyrannical decision be allowed to stand, other hobbies may be attacked in a similar manner.

I have on more than one occasion visited Club Row, also several other shops in that locality, and have spent some pleasant half-hours there (in addition to my money). I venture to say the true meaning of the Act is being misconstrued, making it very hard on bird fanciers, and especially bird dealers (and they are not all wrong 'uns). The S.P.W.B. inspectors know little about the habits and the difference between British and Foreign birds, or between the different species, also what would be a house-moulted or a field-moulted bird, or a cock or a hen, also in some cases a young bird from an old one. The question of recently-taken gets over me. People, such as large dealers and catchers, cannot be expected to have each bird caged off separately, and although they may have a good lot on view in cages at their shops, to save time a lot are sometimes run together. Now, though these birds may have been caught weeks, even months, put such as Larks, Buntings, and Chaffinches, in a cage, and let a strange face come quite close to them, and naturally the bird is shy, but that is no proof that it is "recently taken." Even your hand-reared Larks are very nervous if a stranger comes too near. I know of a case here where a policeman came across a man I know, who does a little catching, and had a permit on him; he told him he might catch Goldfinches, but he was not to let him see him with any Redcaps. Now, that policeman knew something, didn't he? Anyhow, I wish Messrs. Preston and Flowers every success, and hope all bird lovers will rally round, and according to their means come forward with their subscription. I am of the opinion that the greater part of CAGE BIRDS readers are only working-men like myself, but if we all help a little that will be something, even if we go short of an ounce of tobacco or a "pint," as the case may be.—JOHN HAWKINS (Lincoln).

I am pleased to see your valuable paper take up the cudgels on behalf of the bird dealer. We know there are several who do not keep their premises in the sanitary conditions required, or observe the bird laws so correctly as they should do during the close season. Still, my experience is that with few exceptions they do their best. It is a pity these petty prosecutions are not levied against some large stores or dealers, who would be in a position to properly defend themselves. They are invariably directed against some little man, who has little or no means to have his defence properly heard. Many of the dealers know what my efforts have been; and the Bird Dealers' Protection Association which was formed some years ago, dropped out of existence mainly through the apathy shown by the dealers, and want of strong support from the then existent Fancy Press. Everyone of us knows that the small number of birds caught is infinitesimal in comparison with those shot and destroyed. Yet we never see a prosecution for shooting! Only last week I saw strings of dead larks hanging in a London store to be sold for food. Think of this! As readers will know, I have interested myself largely in the British bird laws, and every one of us should lend our aid and assistance in getting this decision set aside. As I construe the present bird laws, this is a most unjust and wrong conviction, and in spite of the magistrate's decision I still maintain that a bird legally caught can be sold anywhere. Now the Crystal Palace Show is close at hand, why should not your valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS, call a special meeting there, and form a strong committee to support this appeal and have justice done, also for future protection, so that in any future prosecution we shall have the machinery ready to set to work. Fanciers of British birds, at last your hobby is in very serious danger, and if this conviction stands will soon be wiped out. With it go the cage and appliance makers, seed dealers and many thousands of persons who gain their living, directly or indirectly, through these trades. Will you see it go without making a little effort? Do not lose the old English spirit of fighting which made us in years gone by. Do not let these pettifogging officials treat you like children—officials who would interfere with and do away with the most awful crime (?) of keeping birds in cages, where they live a longer life than they possibly could under their natural conditions. Wake up! Everyone must and should lend a hand in fighting this battle. —T. R. TROWER (London, N.).

CANARY QUERIES.

Loss of Feathers and Wheezy.

E. Lacey.—First of all see the bird is not exposed to extremes of heat and cold by being too near the fire, and at the same time protect it from all draughts and impure air, such as will occur if the cage is hung high up near the ceiling of the room or near and above a burning gas or lamp in the evenings. Aim at keeping the bird in a regular, but not overheated temperature, with plenty of fresh, pure air without draught. Closely examine cage, and see if you can discover any trace of red mites, and, if so, thoroughly eradicate them. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and twice a week give a mere pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, inga, maw, and gold of pleasure seeds, and three or four times a week a spray of watercress, when you can get it free from frost. Twice a week for the next month give a morsel of bread and milk dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and then sprinkled slightly with soft sugar. Moisten the bare place twice a week until the quills are well through with a small feather dipped in warm olive oil. Allow the bath freely, and when the wheeziness occurs given ten drops of glycerine, and five each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and tincture of lobelia in the drinking water for a few days.

Under Suspicion.

J. G.— Am strongly inclined to think the cause of your losses is the dreaded septic fever. To put the matter beyond a doubt you should send the next that dies without delay for a post-mortem, and meantime put your stock under strict isolation, and thoroughly cleanse and disinfect the room and cages and all appliances, and do not put any birds into a cage vacated by one of these deaths until it has undergone the strictest disinfection. If it is an old or only fairly worn cage do not attempt disinfection at all, but smash it up and burn it at once—it will pay you best in the end. Do not import any fresh birds upon any consideration until the disease is thoroughly stamped out. Look up these replies during the past few weeks for information on the subject, and also get Dr. Clarke's handbook on "Septic Fever," 7d. post free, from our Manager, and study it. Keep the birds on a diet of canary and rape seed, dry, with a little crushed plain biscuit, also given dry, and add a saline aperient to the drinking water for a few days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day—this may tone up the birds, and help them to win, but of "cure" in the order sense of the term, there is none.

All at Sea.

Billy Muggins.—Your management makes the fact that you are a novice quite obvious, and I do not consider your question "rot" at all. You should have said whether you bought the birds matched for breeding from a responsible person, or merely three hens and three cocks. I hardly think you could have done the former, as the birds do not appear to be well matched. The two pairs you call yellows are probably two yellows and two buffs, and the pair of variegated, instead of being mated together, should each have had one of the clear (unmarked) birds for a partner. Thus—a variegated yellow should be mated to a clear buff; a variegated buff to a clear yellow; and a clear yellow to a clear buff. You should not have put the birds together yet. The cocks should have been caged separately, and the hens might have been allowed the run of the whole aviary with the partition removed. Procure now without delay three breeding cages, either singles or doubles, as you prefer, and put the hens in them—one in each cage—leaving the cocks as they now are in the separate compartments of aviary. Then towards the end of March, when the birds are quite ready for breeding, introduce each cock to the hen you want to mate it with. If in single breeding cages, put the cocks in small cages and hang on the front of the breeder for a day or so before putting them into the cages with hens. Keep them in these cages for breeding, and after removing the partitions from the aviary, and cleaning it, keep this as a flight to which the first broods may be drafted as soon as able to do for themselves. See whether the aviary is exposed to damp or draught. You should be able to get wire fronts at any bird dealer's and specialities in London.

Yorkshire Wants Benefit.

E. C. W.—Beyond saying the bird is quite out of song you do not appear to suggest that he shows any other symptoms of illness. If this is so, I do not think you need worry much about it, as many birds, undoubted cocks, do not come into song very freely until somewhere about February after their first two seasons are past, which I should say is the case with your bird. If the claws (toes) and shanks show prominent, thickened, so to speak, scales, the chances are all in favour of the birds being several years old. I referred to "undoubted cocks" just now, because I think there is some reason to doubt the sex of the bird in question. Try what a month of the following treatment will do for it. Keep it well away from the fire, to avoid extremes of heat and cold, but see that it is quite free from draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Twice a week give a small pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp and inga; and on two other days give a small piece of bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. On each of the other days give a spray of green food when obtainable. Keep cage supplied with clean, gritty sand, and allow the bird to bathe when it desires. If the snapping of beak does not cease give twenty drops of whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil in the water every second day for a week. Shake this well together.

A Long Silence.

A. R. S.—As you say the bird dropped into moult as soon as you bought it just after last Easter, I presume it did not moult again last autumn. If it did not, it will most likely moult again as soon as the weather gets mild and settled in spring, and you can scarcely expect to get much song from it now until it has got over the moult again. I suspect the bird is kept in an unfavourable position, and probably exposed to cold draughts, in addition to which your dietary is probably bad, though this depends upon what you call mixed canary seed. Look into the manner of keeping the bird first of all, and see that it is in a comfortable place, quite free from draught, but not overheated, and not too near a fire to expose it to extremes of heat and cold. See that its cage is kept clear, and is quite free from red mite. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary seed to one part summer rape as a staple, and twice a week give a few grains of a mixture of hemp and inga, and three or four days a week a spray of watercress or other suitable green food, if you can get it free from frost. Twice a week, also, on days when you are giving neither of the above extra items, give a small piece of bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and slightly sprinkled with soft sugar, and continue this for a month. See the cage is kept strewn with clean, gritty sand. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards.

Over-fed Hens.

M. A. L. X.—No doubt the condition of things you now describe is due to over-feeding. This overfed condition, when far advanced, is often very slow to improve, as it is little really practical limitation you can put upon the quantity of food consumed by the birds. You must still further reduce the quality and also control the quantity of food supplied, to do which adopt the following method for a month or so. Keep the birds in good sized cages, say, in groups in large flight cages; keep the cages well cleaned and free from husk and waste seed, and supply definite quantities of food daily, allowing a small teaspoonful of Canary for each bird daily, and twice each week reduce this amount by one half, and make up the same quantity with summer rape, given dry. Every day give a spray of watercress, young leaf of dandelion, or other green salad, which you may be able to obtain in good condition for use. Do not give any other foods of any kind, no apple, no carrot, or banana, or anything of that kind. Keep cages strewn with clean gritty sand. Every third day give eight drops of syrup of buckthorn in the drinking water. Continue this for a month, then report result. Be careful not to miss feeding any day, and do not give more than the quantities named for each day's supply. There is no charge for these replies, and no necessity to subscribe to anything—everything of the latter description is wholly voluntary. Only too pleased to help. Have not address to carry out your suggestion re reply per return. Let these hens bathe in mild weather only.

Two and One.

E. D.—To carry out this system you must proceed in just the ordinary way in getting the birds ready to start breeding at, say, about the first week in April. Use a single compartment breeding cage for each hen, and keep the cock in a separate cage by himself. When the cock is in full vigorous song and anxious to mate (at the proper time), and one or both hens are also ready for mating, put the cock with the hen that is freshest and most anxious to begin. When this hen has built and laid her full complement of eggs, let her begin to sit, and then remove the cock and mate him with the second hen, leaving hen No. 1 to hatch out and rear the young by herself. Similarly, when hen No. 2 has laid and commenced to sit, remove the cock again, but this time put him in a separate cage by himself again, and keep him alone until hen No. 1 is again ready to receive him for the second brood, when you will repeat the same tactics as before. If all goes well, hen No. 2 should be ready to have the cock introduced for the second brood by the time hen No. 1 has commenced to sit on her second clutch of eggs, but if she is not quite ready, then you must return the cock to his separate cage again when hen No. 1 commences to sit on the second clutch, until the other hen is ready for him to be introduced. The same process will be carried out if you go in for a third brood.

Mating and Making a Strain.

Rugbeian.—You have set me a poser. It is difficult enough to advise one how to mate given birds which one has never seen when the owner knows something about them or their antecedents, but to tell how to mate and build up a select strain from three individuals which you have acquired, and of which you seem to know nothing, borders on the impossible, especially as you desire to work off these three birds alone without purchasing any more. Does it not strike you that your stock would very soon be closely in-bred? There is also the possibility that the birds may already be related, seeing they formed the sole stock of their former owner. Providing the birds are good sound coloured Cinnamon, and are suited to each other in other respects, you are right in supposing you should mate the buff cock with the jonque hen, but in such a small stud as this it will surely be a lucky chance if they happen to suit each other to a nicety. As regards the buff hen, if you cannot make up your mind to get another Cinnamon cock for her, try to exchange her for another jonque hen, which would match the cock, and run the cock with both hens alternately. Then next season you may be able to import a fresh cock or two, and thereby be able to go on for a year or two afterwards in working your own stock together without getting them too closely in-bred. The idea of crossing your own Norwich with the hen in question and then crossing back to Cinnamon, and working up a strain of your own is, in my opinion, altogether hopeless, seeing you have only one Cinnamon cock as a foundation, and, I take it, do not know whether he is quite pure bred or not. At any rate, the game is not worth the candle, and I would strongly advise you to adopt the alternative mentioned above.

Brevities.

The Sequel (F. E. N.).—I suppose it is an oversight, but you have really omitted the sequel after all, as your letter does not say how the bird is now, so I cannot tell whether you are in need of further advice or not. However, I trust the bird is doing well, but if it is not, then, please, write again, and I shall be glad to help you. Meantime, treat the bird as advised in last reply after it had been gradually weaned off the soft food. No harm will result from giving the birds poppy seeds gathered from the garden in place of maw, but when the choice rests equally between the two the maw is preferable, as it is larger, and has more substance.

Hair-Splitting (Cestria).—In unvarnished language, I take it you wish to know whether one could safely take advantage of what is, perhaps, a rather loose term as a class description, by exhibiting a Yorkshire which has an adult tail in a class provided for "unflighted" birds, because the said bird has not had its flights drawn. Assuming that the tail was lost by accident, as you say, you must look at the matter from the standpoint of the judge; and as the loss of the tail and growth of adult feathers is calculated to give an advantage in length over its competitors, whilst on the other hand an adult crop of flight feathers is not so desirable in certain birds which may already be on the verge of the fault of crossing wings, you must see that such a bird would be open to suspicion, and would doubtless, and very properly, be passed without comment. Although theoretically unflighted may mean only non-removal of flights, the term by former practices and customary usage applies to both tail and flight feathers.

Suitable Mates (G. R.).—In asking what will form suitable mates for given birds, you have omitted to say what kind of birds you would like to aim at breeding. I presume the two birds you want mates for are brother and sister, and from what you say about the green cock from which they were bred I should say he was bred from Cinnamons; or, whatever his pedigree may be, it is very closely related to the cinnamon on both sides. The cinnamon cock paired to a clear yellow pink-eyed hen from a marked strain would give you a good number of cinnamon ticks and variegated, with a fair chance of a few cinnamon even-marks, and an occasional self cinnamon. Mated with a self-cinnamon hen, the young would probably be mostly self-cinnamons, with an occasional foul cinnamon or green-ticked or variegated. For breeding self-cinnamons or cinnamon-marked, you could not do better than mate the yellow cinnamon hen to a self-cinnamon cock; or a clear buff pink-eyed cock would give you a variety of cinnamon ticks and marks, with clear pink-eyed birds, and few self-cinnamons.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

A Sick Bird.

Anxious.—I am afraid the case is almost hopeless, but while there is life there's hope. Keep it in an even and warm atmosphere, yet not a dry heat. Also it is important that the cage should be below the level of any gas jets. Try it with a piece of sponge cake merely moistened with boiling milk, and afterwards lightly sprinkled with maw seed. Cease your present treatment, save keeping the bowels moving freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia as required. Give one drop of oxymel of squills direct to the beak, and supply it with very weak brandy or whisky and water (chilled) to drink. I must emphasise that it must be kept in an equable, but not dry, temperature. Putting a very small portion of honey and borax just inside the beak twice a day might possibly give it a little relief. You will, of course, supply the ordinary seed mixture as usual. I'm almost doubtful if it will be alive when this reply reaches you; if it should be, try the treatment for seven days, and then report progress.

Treatment of Gouldian Finches.

Lupton.—The main feature is a roomy cage—exercise counts for a great deal with these birds. Keep them in some room where the temperature is pretty equable, and also where they will get light and air without draught. I should advise putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of their drinking water once a week, say, for four weeks. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, a pinch of lettuce and grass seed occasionally, also a little "paddy" rice and oats. Green-food, a little of any ripe fruit they will take. A little cuttlefish crushed to the size of white millet, mixed with their seeds, and also scattered over top of sand will also be advisable. If they will take a little milk sop it will also help at this juncture. This species is difficult to get over the hardships of importation, but providing they are not kept in small cages—not difficult to keep fit afterwards.

Cockatoo off its Food.

Hamilton.—You have done quite right to stop the magnesia, but the chemical food had nothing to with this ibis, and I should advise you to well colour the drinking with the chemical food for some time yet. By all means encourage the bird to eat by giving it, not bread and butter, but a piece or so of plain biscuit, just dipped in the chemical food and out again, when you are at meals. I deal with my parrots so, it stops all clamour, and they mostly are eating more or less the whole time meals are on. You must not stint the boiled maize, which should be well dusted with flowers of sulphur, until the bird is eating dry seed mixture freely. It is a good plan to mix a little of the latter with the boiled maize. It may be possible there is some internal growth wearing out the bird, but you can only wait developments or consult a vet. You must persevere; a bird gets into a bad state such as yours has been in for some time, and it will take time to remedy matters. You must give the magnesia again on the least sign of constipation, but stop same at once for a time, as soon as the voidings become watery. Report progress in a fortnight, please.

Budgerigars in Window Case.

Budg.—You will require to screen the glass at nights, or your birds will be frightened to death with cats. Also you will require to lay a piece of felt or something over the glass during the winter, and some sort of a shade in summer, for, hardy as this species is, no bird can stand sudden extremes of temperature. Under such circumstances I should contrive a hinged wooden shutter, which could be lowered at night, and also used as a protection against heat or cold. You could have two pairs, and they should certainly breed and do well, if you take the above precautions. Note: While ventilation must be secured, draughts must be avoided, or you will have no luck. Budgerigars can stand almost any amount of cold if sudden extremes, damp, and draughts are avoided. Of course, a wise precaution during a spell of arctic-like weather would be to keep a felt cover to put over the glass at nights, and even during the day during exceptionally severe periods. With a little trouble and careful attention birds can be successfully kept without suffering even in unsuitable quarters. If all is not clear to you, repeat query.

Cockatoo in Poor Feather.

Summer.—As I informed you, this bird had got into a very unsatisfactory condition, and things will only right themselves as the bird recovers tone. Only give the magnesia now as may be required to keep the bowels moving freely, not watery loose. Give the chemical food as strong as the bird will take it in the drinking water. You can give the flowers of sulphur both on the potato, and also on either moistened plain biscuit or stale household bread—on both if you like. Consult the bird's taste. Supply as much ripe fruit as the bird will take; also vary the kinds as much as possible. The bird is certainly making progress. The portions which the bird is inclined to scratch, etc., might well be painted over with compound tincture of benzoin (using a camel hair brush for the purpose) at intervals of a day or two. The only thing is perseverance, but I should like to know, say, a month hence, how the bird is progressing. Except as modified above, continue the treatment of our previous reply.

Taming an Indian Parrot.

Inexperienced.—This is often very difficult, and there is nothing else but patience, kindness, and quietude to conquer this. Parrots and Parrakeets mature slowly, and some of the commonest species have not been much bred in this country, and actual date is not known. You have a young male, probably nearly or quite two years old, and the colours of its plumage will become brighter and more intense as it matures. As it becomes thoroughly accustomed to you, its wildness will gradually disappear; till this occurs, anything—sudden noises, hasty movements, etc.—calculated to scare it, should be avoided in its vicinity. As soon as it is sufficiently tame, keep it in your midst, talk to it, make a fuss of it, and the like, and it is sure, sooner or later, to respond to this to some extent. I have met with many very talented birds of this species, and also with others, which never uttered more than an occasional "Polly," or perhaps mimicked the dog or cat. If you can once get it thoroughly tame, it should then soon begin to talk, at any rate, a little.

Tanager Queries.

Zebra.—(1) This species is not exactly rare; still, it is certainly uncommon, and not often on the market, and the name "Blue-winged" is the one it is commonly known by. I do not pretend to gauge advertised names; a dealer has something to sell, he does not recognise it, so he gives it a name, appropriate or otherwise. I will give scientific name next week—no time to refer before going to press. Value 20s. to 40s., according to condition. (2) This is quite right, and I have not known them to suffer under such conditions, providing they have plenty of soft food, ripe fruit, and some insects; there is one in my aviary at the present time which has been there eight years under the conditions they name. I should, however, say, that the Pekin is an inveterate nest-robber and egg-eater. A few Softbills do not make the aviary more filthy if you are liberal with sand; it must, however, be cleaned out at least twice as often as an enclosure for seed-eaters. (3) Not exactly a shelter shed; but have the ends of aviary wood, and half the front wood and glass, with a shutter to cover up the other part at night and during cold weather. (4) I have seen in a cage 3 ft. by 2 ft. by 3 ft. high the following species living in amity, and they had done so for some time:—Palm, Magpie, Blue, Olive, Black-cheeked, Superb, Crimson-crowned, and one or two others. It depends on size of cage and furnishings; there must be ample perching and feeding accommodation, without their being on top of each other as it were, and then they will agree all right.

Newly Acquired Gouldian Finches

Miss C.—Give them as large a cage as possible; this conduces more to their health than some imagine. I know of no species that suffers more from lack of exercise than the lovely Gouldian Finch. They are not difficult to keep once they get over the hardships of importation, but many "shuffle off" before this is achieved. You are quite right in keeping them out of draught, but they must have air and light, and the temperature, for a time, should be fairly warm and equable. Let their first morning drink consist of milk that has been boiled and allowed to become all but cold, if they will eat it give a little sponge cake scalded with boiling milk (moistened, not made sloppy), and for one day put one tablespoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water. I do not like mixed seeds for these lovely birds

Canary, white, and spray millet should form the staple diet, with paddy rice and a few crushed oats; a piece of ripe apple or banana kept between the bars of the cage, and whenever you have lettuce a small tender leaf should be given them to pull to pieces. You can continue the iron tonic at intervals. You give no particulars of your aviary, so I cannot say, but they must not be put out of doors at this season, though I have kept them out of doors all the year round; but the first year they must be turned out in the spring, and I have kept them under these conditions, and found them to live, on the average, for six years so.

Brevities.

Grey Parrot not Talking, etc. (Beckett).—Please give me details of the surroundings of your bird, also his demeanour, and the general conditions under which he is kept. Please cover the whole ground and give full details; I then shall be in a position to suggest a remedy, at present I cannot.

What Birds with Canaries? (C. Heal).—Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Zebra Waxbills, and Green or Grey Singing Finches. Supply white and spray millet in addition to the seeds you are supplying to the Canaries, and they should do well. You must not put Foreigners out at this season of the year; get them acclimatised or hardened off in a roomy cage indoors, and put out in May. If the season is forward they might go out in April.

Gold-fronted Green Bulbul (C.L.H.).—This is infinitesimal; authentic hens are not easy to obtain, and, except dried skins, I do not think I have handled a living female; but the hen is reputed to have the gold-front less intense and somewhat smaller in area than that of the male. I fear it will be only by a lucky fluke that you will be able to get a female Gold-front; the sexes, so far as I am aware, can only be told by comparison, and even then for this to be of any use the birds compared must be fully adult.

Songsters (Full Song).—Neither the Sprosser nor Nightingale is a seed-eater. I am of the opinion that Grey and Green Singing Finches will meet your requirements as well as any I know, as would any of the Serins, but they are not common on the market; but the Singing Finches can mostly be purchased at quite a cheap rate. A rarer bird is the Alario Finch, a South African species (usually costs about 6s. to 7s. 6d.); watch advert. columns and procure as opportunity offers. Any of those named would cross with the Canary and thrive on much the same treatment.

Green Parrot—What Book? (M. Moles).—You have either a Ring-neck or Alexandrine Parrakeet; most of these species talk more or less. I have known really talented birds of either species. You would find "Popular Parrakeets" from this office very helpful, 1s., plus postage. Diet: A seed mixture of Canary, white millet, hemp, oats, maize, dari, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, in about equal parts except the two first, of which use a double quantity to any of the others; also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, with grit, cuttlefish, and water. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any animal food, and the bird should do well.

Parrakeets (Parrakeet).—I think you may take it that the condition of the birds verifies that the environment and treatment suits them. You are supplying all that is necessary in the way of seeds, but I should supply a little ripe apple and a fresh lettuce leaf occasionally. I should put up the logs and husks early in March. Your space is fully occupied, but I think they will do all right, especially as you intend adding an open flight to your present closed-in aviary. Keep clean cuttlefish hanging about, and supply a large shallow dish of some kind for bathing purposes. If you have any difficulty when they settle down to nesting send particulars, but do not be frequently looking in the nest.

What Birds? (D. Ross).—(1) It is a Grey Waxbill, an African species—shows to advantage in a roomy cage, well lined with twiggy branches. (2) Infinitesimal, but the hen is a trifle slighter, and also a trifle less brilliant than the male; but this only holds good when adult birds are concerned—the eye needs training to distinguish these points. The best way to do this is to closely observe a cageful of these birds whenever opportunity offers. (3) It is evidently one of the Spennophila, many of which are almost impossible to name from an incomplete description; if you can describe it for me a little more fully I shall possibly be able to name it for you in our next. (4) This must wait till species is recognised. (5) The Grey Waxbill is a very shy breeder in captivity; but, given a roomy aviary, with a growing bush or bushes, there should, at any rate, be a probability of success.

Building an Aviary (Thorburn).—You cannot do better than have one-third of the total length made into a well-lighted shed, the other two-thirds to have a wire front; and as regards the roof of this portion, one-half to be wire and the other (nearest the shed) covered in. Make the aviary as large as you conveniently can; the extra cost is very small, and the gain immense, where you are looking for breeding successes. In the open-roofed part, grow grasses, weeds, etc., and put in a bush or two, such as fir, larch, laurel, and creepers such as wild clematis, ivy, Virginia creeper, etc., and you should have good success. See that all wooden walls and the roof are draught and damp-proof. It is a wise precaution to have these double-boarded with a thickness of roofing-felt between.

Hardiest Seed-eaters ("Know-en-um").—(1) In an aviary, say, not less than 5 by 2 by 5 feet high, the following pairs would agree, and would be probable breeders: Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Bengales, Bronze Mannikins, and Gold-crested Waxbills. But if yours is merely an aviary cage, then you must not put in more than two pairs; in fact, for breeding Foreign Finches in cages, it is best to have only one pair to each cage—the cage not to be less than an ordinary double-breeder. (2) They are all probable breeders—the Waxbills should have a cocoanut shell nest—the others wood box nests—hay and long grass to be supplied as nesting material. (3) Yes, soft food must be given when they are rearing young—several good ones are advertised in our columns; they must also have unlimited green food. (4) Canary, white and spray millet seed, few oats, green food, grit and water for drinking and bathing.

A Sick Green Parrot (Southampton).—Continue to keep a tin of seed mixture in cage, and also crush a little cuttle to about the size of millet seed and mix this with the seed mixture. The items are all wholesome, and if it eats enough it will take no harm. You can also give the boiled pearl barley or boiled rice, providing they are boiled in water only. These should be well steamed so that each grain, while quite moist, is yet whole and not sodden; either can be dusted with flowers of sulphur. By all means use the chemical food; this can be used continuously for quite a period, save when you find it necessary to give either a dose of Epsom salts or Dinneford's Magnesia to keep the bowels moving freely. I should also continue to put a little honey and borax on to the bird's tongue daily for a fortnight at least. Recovery cannot be rapid, but you should see some improvement soon.

What Parrakeets with Budgerigars? (Jackson).—I should advise putting in a Roscila; it is brightly-coloured, handsome, and, so far as my experience goes, quite harmless with Budgerigars, as also are Cockatiels, and the combination would be a pleasing one. Diet for the larger species: Oats, hemp, dari, and sunflower seed, in addition to the Canary and millet supplied to the Budgerigars. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful; see advert. in this column.

Yellow-fronted Amazon not Talking (Bland).—Amazons are not as teachable as Greys, and require more patience. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, and constantly repeat to it, clearly and distinctly, such words and short phrases as you would like it to utter; it is better not to mix them up too much, but keep to one or two till these are learned, and then try others. Gain its confidence by petting, etc. It should certainly speak even if it does not become a fluent talker. Keep the Grey's bowels moving freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of drinking water); give two doses with only one day between each, afterwards at intervals of two or three days. If the voidings become watery loose, you must stop the magnesia till normal. Report progress about ten days hence.

Blue-fronted Amazon (Painter).—There is no given period; some are much more teachable than others. The diet has been given almost weekly for some weeks. Yours appears right, providing you are not giving tea, coffee, or milk slops, or animal food, which must not be given. If the bird is in good health I should not change the diet. It will commence to talk and imitate sooner or later. All you can do is to continue your present method, and the bird will ultimately respond. Make a fuss of it, talk to it, constantly repeating such words as you wish it to learn. A bird will remain silent sometimes for months, and then surprise you with several words or short sentences at once, and make quite a talented talker. There are very few Blue-fronts which do not talk.

Foreigners and British (X. Y. Z.).—Chaffinches and Bramblefinches are dangerous in a mixed community, and the Yellowhammer is by no means safe, but all the following could be kept together: Gold and Bullfinches, Redpoll, Linnet, Twite, Siskin, Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Grey Java Sparrows, Spice Finches, Zebra Waxbills, Avadavats, and a pair of the pretty and minute Diamond Doves. I have kept all, and many others, out of doors the year round, and if your aviary is neither draughty nor damp you should have average luck. Do not be persuaded to keep Budgerigars in a mixed collection, as it will mean ultimate disaster. You will gain experience with the above, and can then add other and more uncommon species. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" valuable.

A Wild Seed Mixture.

Siskin.—It is quite impossible for anyone, however expert in such matters (which, personally, I do not profess to be), to identify the seeds comprised in any "wild seed mixture." Many of those of the group known as "bird rapes" are so much alike that it would be necessary to sow them before the precise plants they come from could be named. And it is bird rapes which make up the bulk of all screenings from threshing machines. The value is very small; note the prices such "wild seed mixtures" are offered at in our advert. columns. For use with Linnets it would be vastly improved if you mix equal parts of gold of pleasure and sesame, with half-parts of lettuce, plantain, and mustard (yellow) seeds, and the bulk of this mix with two equal parts of the wild seed mixture. Give a teaspoonful of this one day and a teaspoonful of best old hemp (cracked) the next day, and this should soon bring any healthy Linnet into rousing song. My own moulted Linnets have beaks as deep blue as bilberries, and would breed now, I feel sure, if I chose to let them.

Three Matters.

Mixed Up.—1 and 2: A heated kitchen (you yourself admit it is "rather warm") is the reverse of a suitable place wherein to keep Linnets, Goldies, and similar British birds. It may quite likely be the cause of your periodical losses; also of the moulting trouble (bareness of feathers) of the other Linnet mentioned. Are you quite sure the latter bird (and the others, too, for that matter) is not worried by red-mite? This pest flourishes amazingly in heated rooms, and is often the unexpected cause of feather and other troubles. 3: Your plan of furnishing and fitting up the indoor room reads excellently, and no doubt the latter will serve its purpose in first-rate style. My opinion with regard to breeding young with a mixed lot of birds in an aviary of restricted size I have often expressed (see our issues of the last two weeks). Then for the size of your place (about 6ft. by 8ft.) you give far too lengthy a list of birds which you propose turning in. The half of thirty would be much nearer the mark. Overcrowding is a fatal foe to successful breeding. I strongly advise you to cut the Linnets down to three, Greenfinches to one pair (or one hen only), and to leave out the Bramblefinch, Redpoll, and the three hen Mules.

Linnet "Going Light."

Wood Green.—I am afraid there is little hope for the Linnet, seeing that he has gone so far as to be as "thin and light as a feather." He is evidently in a very advanced stage of ill-health, and it is seldom of any avail to treat birds then. You made a mistake to give the sulphate of soda and Epsom salts; one dose might have been advisable, but it should have been followed by a course of tonic, "appetite-giving" medicine. I had a case only last week of a Linnet being sent a long journey to me, getting knocked about en route, and going off food, and commencing to lose flesh fast. I changed his food at once, offering cracked hemp, with teazle, maw, and niger seeds, also a wild seed mixture (I have often given the recipe), containing thistle and dandelion. In his water glass (a specially small one, for medicines, holding about one tablespoonful) I dissolved as much crystals of citrate of iron and ammonia as I could take up on the point of my penknife (a small pinch, roughly speaking). One ounce of these crystals can be cheaply obtained at any good chemist's shop. For two days the Linnet ate practically nothing, then suddenly attacked the wild seed mixture. Now he is beginning to look his old self again, and eating heartily of all in front of him. I have used these crystals before with great success; when the loss of appetite is accompanied by great thirst (apparent feverishness) I substitute crystals of citrate of iron and quinine. I advise you to try the crushed seed, the wild seeds, and this mixture; if he is to pull round, this treatment will put him on the right way.

Brevities.

A "Blackcap" (Bermon).—I expected you would find the bird to be one of the Tits. These are insectivorous birds, strictly speaking, but eat hemp and sunflower seeds, also nuts, if they are cracked, and they like a little fat (such as suet) during cold weather. But a softbill mixture must be supplied if they are to continue long in health.

British Bird Queriists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

A Hawfinch's Fit (Flixton).—Hope you recognise the nom-de-plume; no signature to your letter. Your Hawfinch had a fit. It was a mild one, however, and you need not fear that disastrous consequences will necessarily follow. His speedy recovery points otherwise. Give for 24 hours a mild saline medicine, such as sulphate of soda, as much as will lie upon a shilling dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. You did quite right to take Mr. Sandy's advice about the feeding; sunflower seed alone is not good. Let him have the fruit more often, and some berries, if you can get them. He is unlikely to hurt other birds in a large outdoor aviary, but may be wild and nervous himself at first.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Zebra or Australian Dove?

F. D. Keevil.—Yes, your bird was a Zebra Dove, but, judging from your description, not the Australian species, but the East Indian. They are very much alike, but the Australian has not the pink breast, or the bands on the sides, but only on the neck. The Australian Crested Dove is quite distinct from either, being very much bigger, to say nothing of the crest. These Zebra Doves are not good breeders, and I cannot call to mind any case of their being bred, though very likely this has occurred. It would be worth trying. No, White Java Doves do not call as your Zebra Dove did, but have just the same note as the ordinary Collared Dove; in fact, they are simply a white variety of that bird, and not a different species at all.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 525, Caledonian Road, Holloway, London, N., will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

R. Challmer.—Subject: Parrot.—Although the Parrot was delayed in transit, owing to the fact that you had directed it to Reading, and it had to be re-directed to me, it was in a sufficiently fresh condition for examination. You will note my address for future reference. Whilst sorry for your loss, I am glad you determined to submit to me the remains for examination. It has proved so interesting a case from a pathological standpoint, that I have given to it a considerable amount of time, and will endeavour to make clear to you the lesions presented. The disease was of some long standing, and must have originated several months ago, although until towards the end the general health would not be seriously disturbed owing to its chronic nature. There was a chronic pleurisy with effusion, the entire body cavity being completely filled with fluid of a mucilaginous character; the lungs were in a condition known as atalectasis or complete collapse. Now, to take each in sequence. In the first place the pleurisy resulted from bacterial invasion; this in time resulted in effusion being poured out (which invariably follows where serous membranes are affected), and latterly owing to the great increase of this effusion the lungs, due to the great pressure brought to bear upon them, collapsed; consequently, respiration was impeded, and death occurred from asphyxia. There were no marked tubercular lesions, but I have reasons to believe that the causal organism was the bacillus of tuberculosis. You will no doubt be able to connect these pathological changes with the symptoms presented during life; there would be a difficulty in respiration owing to the pressure exerted upon the lungs; this would later become more apparent towards the end, which would result in asphyxia. It was an incurable condition, and death a merciful release.

F. W. Martin.—Subject: Cock Canary.—The symptoms you so ably describe are quite in accordance with the lesion found. I have no reason to believe that it is of an infectious nature. There was marked pneumonia of both lungs, unconnected with any other apparent lesions, whereas, in disease of an infectious nature, although the lungs are the common predilection seat of disease, there usually exist other disease centres, also, such as the coverings of the brain. This is a common cause of loss amongst the Fancy during the winter and early spring, and is brought about by adverse atmospherical changes, although not subjected to draught, as you state in your letter; yet even variations in the temperature of the air, particularly a moist condition prevailing at this period is quite sufficient in itself to produce the disease. The respiratory structure of these small birds is extremely delicate, and in suitable subjects is easily influenced by these changes. As a safeguard against further loss, you may give your remaining birds a few drops of Parrish's Chemical Food administered in the drinking water night and morning, so as to raise the tone of the system. There is no specific for this malady; your treatment must be entirely preventive, whilst adopting such treatment as advised, together with supplying sufficient warmth, you will most likely obviate further trouble.

A Garden Aviary of Interesting Foreign Birds.

By Miss B. E. WILKINSON.

I had almost forgotten the Cordon Bleus—and no aviary would be complete without these—the dearest, sweetest little mites. The cock is a beautiful soft turquoise blue, brighter in the tail feathers, which are long. He has a bright crimson ear patch. The hen is pale fawn, over-laid with blue.

Dancing and Singing.

When showing off, the cock dances and sings a little song, with a long piece of grass or hay in his beak. Java Sparrows dance and sing too, but I never saw this little blue thing dance and sing without the bit of grass, I suppose as a gentle hint that it was about time to make a nest. Any way, that was what they were always doing. There were eggs laid, too, but none ever hatched, but I believe they have been reared in this country, so there is always a chance that others may be more successful than I was.

There were a lot of little Waxbills, but I think the Orange-cheeked were the most interesting. One got out of the aviary, and was flying about all day, but never offered to go far away; in the evening it flew repeatedly against the wire front. I forget whether it squeezed its way in, or if I caught it.

A Zebra Finch cock got out regularly every day, and had to be caught at night on the wires. It was a long time before I could find the hole he got through; it was quite close up to the roof, and only showed from inside, or no doubt he would have returned the way he came. He spent most of the day on a rockery wall, facing the aviary, pecking about, singing, and enjoying his liberty till evening.

Doves of different varieties were always falling out; a tiny pair of Passerines bullied a pair of Bleeding Hearts five times their size; Aurita Lenaida and Crested Australians were continually skirmishing till I wondered why Doves are always described as "so peaceful."

I was most anxious to rear some Bleeding Hearts. They nested freely, but no sooner were the eggs laid than the cock became jealous and would not allow the hen near the nest, or even within sight of it, not that she ever troubled much about it, but she left the sitting entirely to him. They are very striking-looking birds, more curious than beautiful, with a pure white breast in the centre of which is a bright crimson patch, so like blood, even to the smeared look where the colour dies away, that few people on first seeing them can believe it is only a mark. The rest of their plumage is grey, with dark tail and wing bars, tops of head and eyes of deep plain colour, the back and neck beautifully lustred. They spent all day on the ground, only flying into a tree at night to roost.

When frightened they have a curious trick of crouching on the ground, so that their white breast with its conspicuous mark is completely hidden, and lie so still they might be taken for a piece of grey stone.

They are very fond of green caterpillars and the soft food provided for the other birds. Their eggs have a thick shell, slightly tinted buff, and the yolk is bright transparent orange-red.

Treatment of the Inmates.

There are a lot of other birds I should like to say something about, but I'm afraid I have already taken up too much space. So I will leave them till another time, only saying in conclusion, that none of those I have mentioned need any special treatment. Canary seed, white millet, and a mixture of hard-boiled egg, bread crumb, and dried ants' eggs, with some dari and small Indian corn for the Doves, are all they require to keep them in perfect health. The Budgerigars like some soaked bread squeezed dry, when there are young in the nest, but it is not absolutely necessary.

The floor should be kept nicely sanded, and there should be a plentiful supply of sharp grit. I always gave them the shells of all the eggs used in the house, dried in the oven, and crushed fine, as they must have lime in some form. A few branches of trees and bunches of heather and bulrushes, arranged as naturally as possible, and some little boxes and cocoanut halves to nest or sleep in, make an ideal home for them.

A Breeding-cage Contrivance.

Sent by Mr. E. Newmarsh, Bridgegate, Howden, E. Yorks.

I forward you a little contrivance which I am fitting to my breeding cages for next season; no doubt, it may be of some use to the readers of CAGE BIRDS. It is a slide fixed on the sliding partition of double breeding cages, to cover the hole, or leave it open, or cover it with wire, to enable old birds to feed the young. First the sliding partition is to be marked off into five equal spaces, with the hole in the centre space. Then nail on two strips of wood as illustrated (A and B) with one end of each planed down to form a groove when nailed on. Then make the slide as illustrated. First cut two strips of wood (C and D) only the length of the three spaces referred to above. Then plane down edge of each for them to slide in grooves (A and B). Then cut two small pieces (E and F), and place them to cover one space. Then cut another square piece of wood (G), to form cover for hole. H is a piece of wire to hook on a little staple (I), so as to slide backwards and forwards as desired.—A. NEWMARSH.

A Perch for Box Cages.

Sent by Mr. G. W. Maisey, Aldermaston, Berks.

I send you what I think an improvement on perches for any box cages. It also has the advantages of trapping the red mite and of being very simply fitted without any extra expense. On the back of the cage a small staple is driven, the ends of the perches to have a piece of wire driven in and bent. Just hooking on the staple completes the back fastening. The front of the perch is left square, and fits between the wires and also rests on the cross-bar, so that there is no shake when fitted. It projects about an inch (to hold when one is cleaning). A saw cut in the square end for about an inch and a quarter completes the device, and a piece of wire cleans the mite out of this cut very well.—G. W. MAISEY.

This show was held in the Victoria Memorial Institute, on January 19th. Cage birds had a very limited classification, and the prize money was on the sliding scale, yet several very smart exhibits were on view. Mr. J. Stone made an energetic and courteous hon. secretary, and his efforts were ably seconded by the committee. Mr. C. A. House judged.

Mice in the Bird-room.

SIR,—I would esteem it a favour if some of your correspondents would enlighten me upon how to rid my bird-room of mice? The room is a bed-room in my house. To get Virus I am afraid would be too expensive, as my house is situated near an off licence and other business houses that will encourage them in the way of food, so that if I used the Virus I am afraid I should have a return of them very soon if I cleared my rooms for the time. Perhaps some fancier may have been troubled likewise, and been successful in ridding his room of mice, or perhaps have used the Virus or some other preparation. If he would give me his experience it would be greatly appreciated.

New Society for Codnor Park and District.

SIR,—The majority of the Cage Bird members of the Selston and District Fanciers' Society have resigned, also myself as their hon. secretary. A meeting was called for 15th January, 1910, to get as many fanciers together as possible, to try and form a Cage Bird Society at Codnor Park, which I am pleased to state was a great success. It was arranged to name the Society the Codnor Park Cage Bird Society, open to a radius of 20 miles for membership; subscription, 2s. 6d.; headquarters, the Portland Arms, Jacksdale, Notts, where we have a splendid club-room at our disposal, well lighted by day and night (an ideal place for a show). The next meeting was arranged for Saturday, January 29th, at 7 p.m., when we are having a table show of Canaries and British Birds as an attraction to young members. I shall be pleased to give any information to any fancier residing in the radius (20 miles).

Are there "Pot-hunters" in the Western Counties?

SIR,—Now, Mr. "Western Bird," you have asked if we have any "pot-hunters" in the western counties. Well, I will ask you to look back and see what entries the Keynsham Show had, and that will tell you about the "pot-hunters." I should like to know from readers why a show like the above was treated so badly by specialist and novice cage-bird men.

M. BARNES.

SIR,—I quite agree with "Western Bird" as regards specialists going to our local shows and not giving such as myself (a novice) a chance. I may say that we have these pot hunters in Bristol, and people that live in glass houses should not throw stones. I will tell you another thing that wants stopping as much as the "specialists" going to all our shows, and that is this, shows where the secretaries are showing in nearly every class and getting first or second prizes in 8 out of every 10 classes. This is what the novice does not like; if he can meet men fairly he is only too pleased; but the above is not fair.

BARRACK.

SIR,—In reference to last week's correspondence under the above heading, I am quite prepared for criticism. I am a lover of fair play, and a good sportsman, giving help to the Fancy in theory and practice. Whatever personal attacks I may be subject to, I shall take in good part. I have no wish to introduce personalities that are not within the subject, and it will not make me any the less a true fancier, bird lover, or exhibitor. I hope to have many more years of pleasure and many happy hours with my interesting hobby. I have a perfect right to express my views, right or wrong. In reference to Mr. Lack asking me to confine myself to the truth, he could not have asked me a better thing. As far as the word "late" being said, I will apologise, it was my form of wording the sentence; but, Mr. Lack, you meant the same, "late" in another form. When Mr. Dewhurst's son came in (who was there to act in his father's stead through illness), after hearing my explanation of not getting there the night before (as my duties often make it impossible to do what I would), he said to Mr. Lack, "I think Mr. Battison has a good excuse, we might accept these birds," at which Mr. Lack replied, "What's the use of you having rules if you do not carry them out; you are secretary, you please yourself." At the special meeting I was summoned to, Mr. Lack stated that I told them he had not the courtesy to speak to me. This is untrue. My words were, "Mr. Lack was not gentlemanly enough to shake hands (which he always accustomed himself to do). To the best of my belief these are the words that were used. In reference to the committee passing a vote of confidence in the secretary, they could not do otherwise. No one regrets more than I do Mr. Dewhurst not being able to be there through illness. I bear no ill-feeling against either him or his son, whom I have always been on friendly terms with, and treated with the greatest respect. As to Mr. Lack's remarks re cup, there was no cup class (I congratulate him in winning it, considering with so little or no competition, which often occurs in societies). How could I feel a pang of jealousy when he entered for the cup and (his own words) I did not? When jealousy enters my mind, my interesting hobby and I part. Many good fanciers have left societies through young fanciers ruling with a high hand, fixing their own specials, and altering rules, so as to give money into their own classes, so they should not lose it. This is not the way of progress. Now, sir, repeating Mr. Lack's words: Fanciers can judge for themselves who is right, the man who carries out the rules or the man who tries to break them. The schedule show rule is never carried out at any show. For instance, I will quote a recent large show. A friend of Mr. Lack's got a catalogue when entering, and found a well-known exhibitor's name with absent, absent, to his birds, but in the young bird class he won a prize. At the request for an explanation, the secretary willingly told him judging was finished in the classes where his birds are marked "absent," but when the birds were brought in we allowed the young bird to be put in its class, as that one had not been judged." So you see the example some societies set us. I mention this to prove the rule is not carried out even in large shows, where we expect to see it done. It's a rule made for a provision against a rush on the morning of the show, which would cause great anxiety and confusion to all concerned. Now, Mr. Lack, I am asked to confine myself to the truth. I respectfully ask you to write to CAGE BIRDS and inform them how many birds were brought in and accepted after 9 o'clock (schedule time) on the evening before the show? In fairness to myself (as you term it), I want to know this. Who broke the rule that evening, though the rules were enforced next morning?

C. BATTISON.

SIR,—In reply to "Veritas," I can understand a friendly correspondence under a nom-de-plume, but if there is nothing shifty in the background, why not sign your name? Be open when you wish to attack a fancier, for his supposed good. As to only just having heard of rules being enforced, I have heard and seen many, but never the one in question carried out, and I challenge you (if you are a fancier) to say where you have seen it done. Here is a chance for you. If you are not a fancier, I willingly excuse you, for your unkindly remarks, for the want of a little thought. In reference to being a "Laggard," and "pot-hunter," and not taking interest in my societies, secretaries and fanciers can vouch for my being the reverse of it. I have a cause for my action. I know something, and I have acted on principle, like many fanciers of my standing would have done. I hope, "Veritas," I may have the pleasure of meeting you as a fancier, when I think you will relieve your mind of a few of these uncalled-for remarks.

C. BATTISON.

Foreigners in British Classes.

SIR,—On receiving the magnificent birthday number of CAGE BIRDS, the first illustration to attract my attention was the frontispiece, with its many electorial funnyosities of bird life. May I call attention to the wording displayed on one of the posters: "Tariff Reform means no foreigners in British classes?" I trust that this "reform" will soon be put into working order, and may the "Tariff" be too big for the keen exhibitor who pushes the foreigner into the British classes at our shows. I don't profess to know a great deal about the Bullfinch, still I have had a little experience with this red waistcoated gentleman both in his wild state as well as in captivity, having handled many birds caught on the borders of Cumberland and Dumfrieshiro, Bullfinches which have proved invincible at leading shows. The pick of hundreds, these birds took some stopping some three years ago. But I must confess that never have I seen such monster Bullfinches (some house-moulted) receiving the awards at the Cage Bird shows which it has been my privilege to attend this last season. There is only one Bullfinch like in colouring to the British, and that is the larger and purer coloured Russian, and it is the smaller specimens of this breed that I claim get a big share of the awards in the British Bullfinch classes of to-day. Who is going to sprag the wheel? I should like to read some better authority on the "Foreigner in British Classes" subject. I feel on the right track, and hope my remarks may stir things up, and cause the schedule to be strictly adhered to. Let us have British in British classes. To the judges we look forward to decide the nationality as well as the merits of our birds. Let these gentlemen do their work fearlessly and not miss putting a "Tariff" on all foreigners who put in an appearance in any British classes at our shows.

CORBIK.

Novices and their Prize Cards.

A Novel Suggestion.

SIR,—In "Notes from Erin" I notice a comment on the grievances of novices in regard to prize cards. I may say in Glasgow there is the same grievance amongst a large number of novices I have come in contact with, who take more pride in a good card than they do in a money prize. Another grievance amongst novices at confined shows is members judging, a grievance that could be easily remedied. I would make a suggestion that there is plenty of room in a city, like Glasgow for a society to be run on amateur lines, supplying good prize cards, neutral judge and no prize money, members having the option to show at open shows for money. I think a society run on these lines would appeal to novices. However, I would like to have the opinion of fellow fanciers.

NOVICE.

Am I a Novice?

SIR,—After reading "Am I a Novice?" in your correspondence columns, also the reply by Mr. Hill, I shall be very pleased if the same gentleman will say if the reading of rule 37, 1st portion, would still hold good if the said 1st prize was won at an open mixed show, where all the prizes were on the sweepstake principle, without any other prize money being given, except probably a special prize of 2s. 6d. for the best exhibit in each section (including poultry, rabbits, cavies, pigeons, and cage birds)? Personally I cannot understand the rule being applicable in such an instance. I remember visiting a show of this kind with about 100 exhibits all told, where only two competitors had ever shown in open competition, and neither of them was in the cage bird section. If rule 37 of the Y.U. holds good in this case, does it not put a bann upon the novice belonging to a society of this kind, of which there are a good many in our country districts, where cage birds are not so generally catered for as in Bradford and district? I thank Mr. Hill in anticipation of a reply, and wish the Y.U. the success it deserves.

NOVICE.

The Welsh C.B.C. Patronage and Swansea Show.

SIR,—Just a word or so on the above subject. Again, Mr. H., you have evaded the question. Although I challenged you as a last resource to substantiate your statement against the W.C.B.C., you will not rise to the gist of the argument but grovel in the mud of invective. Well, stay there; that's the place that suits you best. Truly, readers of CAGE BIRDS have had chance enough to form a true conception of yourself. Yes! the W.C.B.C. is a society worthy of the name, well-known throughout the principality, and I am their secretary, and I it was who despatched the wire to CAGE BIRDS (authorised by my committee of the W.C.B.C.) that we were withdrawing our patronage through your non-compliance with our rules, which you were holder of. Do not measure me by your own self-opinionated ideas. If you claim to be as secretary of your society—their chief instigator and prime mover, I do not claim to be such as secretary of the W.C.B.C., but do my duty in carrying out their requests. I finish with the ultimate unalloyed satisfaction that you have positively failed to prove your own words re the patronage of the W.C.B.C. being forced upon any society. The "trump card" which you have boasted about, but not produced, must be but a phantom of your very elastic imaginary vision, and, your correspondence throughout has been no other than the rude arrangement of deliberate prevarications, unworthy of any one who would term himself a man.

Our Invaluable "Breeding Room Register." By G. E. Weston. Post free, 7d.

A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird breeding easy." This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred—keep account of their strong and weak points. It contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

Mules at Yarm Show.

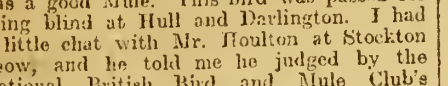
SIR,—It will be interesting to know why Mr. Houlton gave first prize to a dark Greenfinch Mule which is blind in one eye. Now, any one of our judges can make a mistake, but I was told this was not one, as the stewards pointed it out to him when judging, and he said it did not make any matter, as it was a good Mule. This bird was passed for being blind at Hull and Darlington. I had a little chat with Mr. Houlton at Stockton Show, and he told me he judged by the National British Bird and Mule Club's standard. Surely blind birds are not made eligible in the above standard?

TYRO DARLINGTON.

Uniform Show Cages for Border Fancies.

SIR,—I would like to draw the attention of others to the exhibiting of Borders, and the cages they are in. As a starter in the hobby, I have been paying great attention to them at a good many shows round about this district (Fife) and the difference in the cages is astonishing, which makes one believe that it is the cages that win, not the birds. I think there should be a rule drawn up that cages should be uniform (all of the same style) and the committee of all shows should have power to debar birds from competition if not in the one style instead of with different spars, fountains, and seed boxes, and so on. This would make keener competition and more entries.

LOOKER ON.

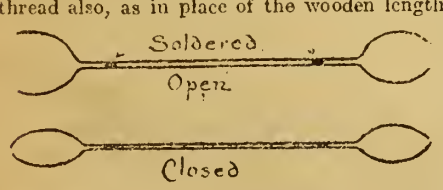


A Resignation at Tredegar.

SIR,—In reply to "Old Fancier," who states in "Twitterings" that the oldest British and Mule exhibitor of Tredegar has resigned from the society for the reason that the fanciers were putting on classes to suit themselves, if the said exhibitor had told "Old Fancier" that he resigned because they did not give him a class for dark Goldfinch Canary Mule (in which he believes he could win), it would be more truthful. "Old Exhibitor" has Goldfinches, Greypates, Hawfinch, Parrots, and a Yellow Yorkshire cock that has won 1st and special, and the society has given three open classes for Yorkshires—one for novice, and classes for Goldfinch, Greypate, any variety Hardbill, any variety Mule and Parrots. The society last year lost 7s. on the Dark Mule class and 6d. on the any other variety mule class. The specials for the cage bird section are entered in schedule exactly as given.

ONE IN THE KNOW.

A Netting Needle and How to Make it.



SIR,—I noticed an article recently in CAGE BIRDS, re the making of nets, and I am sure it will prove very useful to a great many of your readers. I have made my own nets for a good many years. I send you a sketch of a needle which I think is a great improvement on the old-style wooden one shown in the above-mentioned article. The advantage is that you can wrap more thread on it, and it will pass through the mesh without picking up any other threads. First take a piece of ordinary cage wire about 17 inches long, and bend it as shown in Fig. 1. Then take a piece of straight wire and place in the centre and solder all together. You may make the needle any width across the eye according to the mesh you require to knit. Allow the centre wire to stand out one inch at each end.

WM. PROCTOR.

SIR,—In your issue of December 18th, Mr. Penfold described a wooden netting needle. I take the liberty of sending a sketch of one I have always used in making nets. It has several advantages over the wooden ones. It is easier to wind full, and you can use both ends. It will hold about twice as much thread also, as in place of the wooden length you have thread. It can be made in about 10 minutes, and will last for years. It is made of two pieces of ordinary cage wire (the ends rounded off so that they will not catch in the netting) soldered the full length except the ends. The sketch explains itself. To wind, just force the ends open, and when full, press them together, leaving a space just enough for the particular kind of thread your nets are to be made of.

NETTER.

Prize-money at Vale of Leven Show.

SIR,—We would like to know what is wrong down Vale of Leven way. We exhibited at their show held 11th of December and gained first and special prizes, but we have not yet received our prize-money nor special. We have written to the secretary, and as yet have had no reply. Would some of the officials or members kindly explain to the Fancy, as this is likely to cripple the Vale of Leven Show in days to come.

HAMILTON AND WALLACE.

What is Cuttlefish?

SIR,—In reply to Mr. McLean's letter in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, I wish to inform him that Cuttlefish bone is really the bone of a fish. This fish is known as the Guy by the fishermen in the South of England. The cigar-shaped bone (viz., Cuttlefish) is the only bone in the whole body, and any fancier who lives near the sea can gather these bones by walking along the shore. In winter a good many of these fish perish, and the bones washed upon the beach during the winter months; and these are quite ready for use. In regard to the properties of Cuttlefish, most Canaries like it for the simple reason that it contains a certain amount of sea salt which does the birds good besides being a substitute for grit and invaluable for breeding hens as a shell producer. If these few remarks enlighten our correspondent in any way I am equally thankful for sending them.

W. MINTY.

SIR,—With reference to Mr. McLean's letter re Cuttlefish, it is not a manufactured article but the bone of a very strange fish, which can be picked up on the shore. When picked up it is almost black, and has a skin over it, and when touched, it throws out a black fluid like ink. Some people boil it, but it can be left in the sun to dry and bleach.

W. H. TILBURY.

Help Wanted from Skylark Keepers.

SIR,—In reply to S. Knight in your issue of Jan. 8, if he will feed as follows I don't think his birds will go light. (1) Pea-flour mixture: one part lard to three parts pea-flour by weight; melt lard and then add pea-flour. (2) Hemp seed whole and Canary seed. (3) One teaspoonful of dry ants' eggs daily. All the above can be mixed up together in the food box or given in separate pans. I have a long food box to hold three tin pans, one for the pea-flour mixture, one for hemp, and the third for Canary seed and ants' eggs. With the exception of the ants' eggs, the other food is given as much as the bird can eat. No moisture is added to the pea-flour mixture, which does not require to be changed. Except on the day a fresh turf is given a little clover or grass or other green food should be put into a green food rack every day. Three or four mealworms a day are also an advantage, and keep the bird tame. I have kept Skylarks for many years, and do not recollect having had one go light. The ants' eggs should be good, costing about 2s. 6d. a lb. The sand drawer should contain enough sand for the bird to be able to dust himself a heap in one corner.

O. HARRISON.

SIR,—I should like to give my treatment of the Skylarks. I simply keep a few Britishers, and have at present two Skylarks, one seven years old and one three years old. The seven-year-old-one I have had since it was a few months old, and the other I have had two years. Both are in stout song, literally fighting one another in song, as I sit writing these lines. I never hang them outdoors in the winter months, but wait till spring comes round. But I always take them in again when it is getting dusk. In the summer I take them out in the fields and let them hear their own feathered tribe singing aloft, which, I am sure, does them good. Their food is simply this: I get a one-pound packet of Victoria chicken meal, that which contains little else but crushed biscuit; to this I add 1oz. of dried flies and 1oz. of ants' eggs. That is my stock food, and they get nothing else except three or four mealworms daily; these they will take from my finger or my lips or from any strangers. I mix their food with a little cold boiled potato, carrot or turnip. I have brought up nestlings on this mixture together with a few mealworms cut up and added. Of course, it can be made better by doubling the quantity of dried flies and ants' eggs, according to one's pocket. I may say I have tried several kinds of packet food, but the birds would neither sing nor fatten on them. Like fancier S. Knight, the Skylark is my favourite bird, and I would keep more but for the noise; when you have two singing stoutly one against the other you have quite enough, and sometimes too much. I may also say that my Larks are hung in the kitchen which we live in, it being only a single house in a backyard, so you see they have no green fields to look upon, only the blank walls, and they get the full view of the washing-day work, yet they keep in good trim, and sing eleven months out of the twelve, only resting when in the thick of the moult. The cage I keep them in measures 14 inches long, 8 inches wide, and 10 inches high, with a bow full length of cage projecting out 5 inches from the front of cage. It has a wooden back, a cloth top, and wired sides, with glass food and water vessel. I prefer glass to the wooden food box, as you can keep them much cleaner, and the food keeps the fresher. I think if Mr. S. Knight would try the above simple mixture, he would do better. Wishing him more luck, and greater success to CAGE BIRDS, which I call the birdy man's friend.

J. W. LINCOLN.

SIR,—Take one breakfast cup full of bread-crumbs, one ditto pea meal, one ditto chopped suet, one fresh egg, and mix all together and bake to a nice brown, but do not burn it. I have kept Larks for years on this as a staple food—I am an old fancier.

J. L. ADAMSON.

SIR,—Seeing the letter regarding Lark keeping, I pen a few lines to say I think your correspondent is bothering far too much with the birds. I have kept them for years, and I find the less I bother them the better. I have one now in the kitchen 4ft. from the ceiling, and I simply keep him clean and give him fresh sand every week, and food that I buy at a local shop with occasionally the packeted Lancashire Lark food, and give half of each with a little green food sometimes, such as watercress and dandelion. Do not put the birds outside at present. Mine is singing both by day and gaslight. I have him in an ordinary square Lark cage rather larger than the bought ones, and made by myself. I think if your correspondent adopts this simple way he will have better results—at least, I honestly hope so. I also give a pinch of the Lancashire Lark food to my Linnets now and then, and they seem to enjoy it and do well.

T. H. RAWLING.

SIR,—After perusing the correspondence re the above, I quite sympathise with Mr. S. Knight, of Willesden. In the first place a kitchen is the worst place for all birds except the Parrot tribe, which require warmth during the winter months. Every fancier should have a thermometer, as then he knows the state of the temperature. Canaries and all British birds do better in a cold room, that is to say, a room set apart for birds only. I have known birds taken from one room, where there has been a fire, and put into one where there has none, to have a loss of feathers, and it is often stated that such birds are constantly moulting. But it is not so, it is the change of atmosphere. The mode of feeding I consider too heating. The soft food, what is that? And "meat meal" is another conundrum. Coarse oatmeal is too hot. "Hemp mixed," mixed with what? A teaspoonful of Canary seed daily is enjoyed, given in a dry form and scattered amongst the sand, but never mixed up with other things. The menu for Larks, Robins, etc., and most soft-billed songsters should be as follows: Grated liver (baked in an oven, not burnt), bread crumbs, ants' eggs and grated carrot, all mixed together; and every alternate day, hard boiled egg, bread crumbs, ants' eggs, and a pinch of maw seed, with a little crushed hemp. Soft Bilo (Trowers's) is a good appetiser; I have known many to thrive on it. I always give two mealworms daily, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Four or five daily are too many, as they are medicinal. Larks in particular suffer from loss of feathers round the eyes; this I attribute to the confinement and want of fresh air, also to the giving of too heating food. The remedy for this is vaseline heated to a liquid. Then anoint the parts affected with a camel-hair brush. You say your cage has had a good scrubbing. I should burn it. After 40 years' experience I find new cages the cheapest. Give the birds plenty of room. Cleanliness is a great help towards the longevity of a Lark, and all birds. Take a visit to the Zoo Gardens and you will note all the cages, the perches, the feeding and drinking utensils, cleaned daily. This is the secret of success with birds in confinement.

JAMES STOREY.

SIR,—Your issue of January 8th contains a letter from Mr. S. Knight on the above subject, and I should like to inform him that I am a fancier of the Skylark, and when I first started I bought scores of Larks, but could not keep one long before it died. Now, in the first place I do not agree with Mr. Knight's method of feeding. The Skylark has the most delicate organs of all British birds, and if Mr. Knight will try my feeding mixture I think he will get along much better with his birds. Get ¼lb. of leaf lard, 1lb. of pea meal, ½lb. of bean-meal, and two teaspoonfuls of crushed hemp. First, put the lard in a tin in the oven to melt; when melted and all the rought bits are out, put the two meals and the hemp in the tin with the lard in and mix all up together. Put it in a slow oven for 20 minutes, and make sure it does not burn. Also give mealworms twice a week, and green food three times a week. I do not like the chopped meat and gravy he mentions, because many Lark fanciers have an idea that anything containing salt will make the bird waste and die. I have not much fancy myself for the bow-fronted cage. I make all my own cages with nothing but the bottom wood, the top being all wire, and a cord not a little below the top. I would like to give one more hint. Instead of covering the bottom of the cage with a turf, give the bird plenty of gritty sand, and remember that no bird can live without sand. If Mr. Knight or any other Skylark fancier wishes for any further advice, I am willing to do my best for them.

The Clarke v. Crisp Controversy

SIR,—Owing to my difference with Mr. Clarke, he appears to think it necessary to make a special effort to deify himself at my expense; he is quite welcome to his self-advertisement, and also to all the aggrandisement it affords him. Furthermore, he is quite at liberty to discuss publicly all my actions in connection with the Fancy, provided he does not suffer from convenient lapses of memory as in the present instance. It is quite true that a consultation took place at my house, and a reply was drafted to the letter which appeared in the Fancy Press; but I challenge him or anyone else to prove that I have ever sent a letter to the Press other than those of my own composition. Mr. Clarke's memory appears to be particularly faulty just now. Perhaps on more mature reflection he may probably call to mind other occasions when I was not even present, when he either wrote or dictated letters which subsequently appeared in the Press, but not over his own signature. Seeing that I have expressed my regret at having doubted Mr. Clarke's veracity the matter is now ended as far as I am concerned.

Song Wanted from Thrushes.

Sir,—In Cage Birds I noticed a reference to Thrushes, and I may say that I have had two for the last two years, and cannot get more than a little warble now and again from them. They are both clean moulted, and have been for the last four months, yet they are no further to the front as regards song. I have tried all sorts of foods, but to no purpose, so I thought that some reader might inform me what is the best to feed them on to get some song.

A Late Young Linnet.

Sir,—No doubt some of your readers will be surprised to hear that I caught a young (nestling) cock Linnet on Waltham Marshes (Herts) on New Year's morning. It must have been in its nest in the beginning of December, as it has still got its nest feathers on it. It is quite as strong as any old bird. I have been bird-catching for the past 16 years, and have never heard of such a thing before. The bird is well and strong, and can be seen at any time, or I will send it carriage paid to your office for inspection should any of your readers desire you to see it. I shall be pleased if you will insert this in Cage Birds, as I think it has not been known before.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Show.

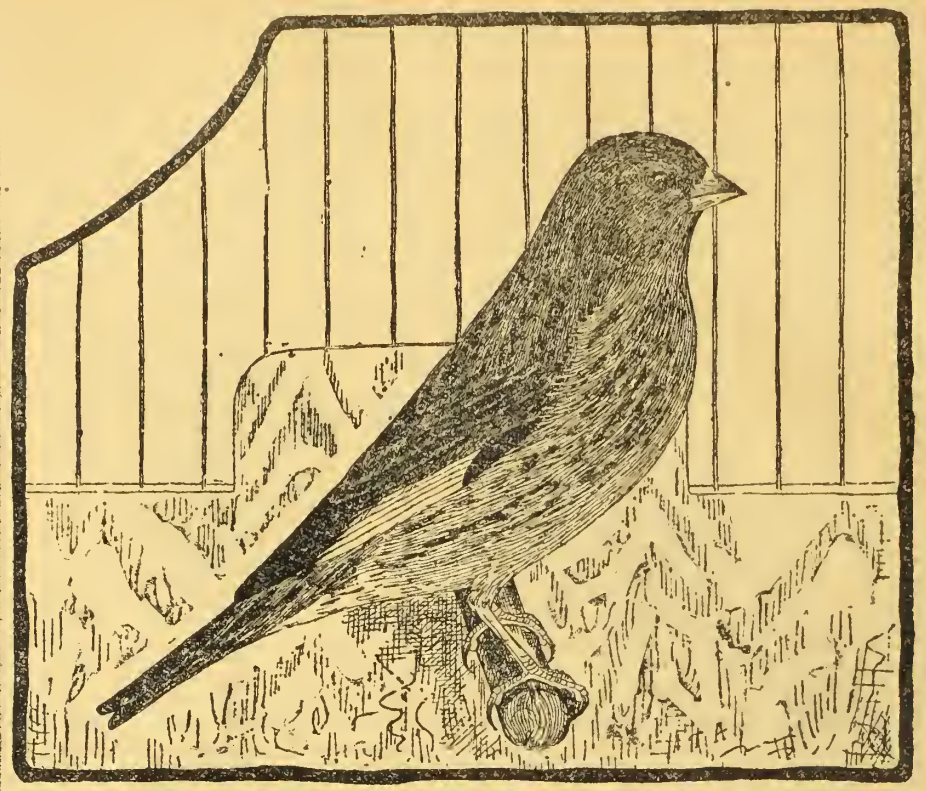
Sir,—I notice that Mr. Kaye draws attention to the dilatory manner in which the prizes awarded at the Dulwich O.S. Show, held 12 and 13 October last, are being distributed. I entered two birds which secured 1st and 3rd prizes respectively. On 15th November the secretary informed me that I had also received a special, which he would forward. I wrote thanking him for the information, and said as I regretted to hear that the show had not been so successful financially as could have been desired, I would not press them for the prize-money, but should like to have the special. Hearing nothing further I wrote again on the 10th January, but have failed to elicit any rejoinder. It is not very encouraging to exhibitors to be treated in this way, and as the special was in kind and not in money, I fail to see why there should be such delay in its delivery.

Exhibitor.

Sir,—I see others have not received fair treatment at Dulwich Show, as well as myself.. They wrote to me begging for entries and I sent them four, which took first, second and special, electro-plated cruet given by Mr. P. G. Sprules, for best vhc. I have written two letters to Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers enclosing stamped envelope; but not being able to get a reply, I wrote to Mr. P. G. Sprules (vice-chairman) enclosing stamped envelope, thinking ho would have the courtesy to answer it, but I have not received a reply. If the society is in financial difficulties, I think they might have written and explained matters, also sent the special, which has nothing to do with the society.

Devonport. W. Collings.

Sir,—Permit me to add my grievance to that of your correspondent, Mr. Kaye. I have written at least a dozen times to the secretary and show managers requesting payment of prize-money and specials, but with the exception of a post-card received in November stating that one of my specials was being forwarded (which, by the way, has not reached me yet), my correspondence has been coolly ignored. I would suggest that this is a fit and proper case for investigation by the "Cage Bird Union." The show was held under its rules, and was, so far as one could judge by appearances, a really successful show; and so far from being in financial difficulties, they ought to have been in a prosperous position. There is evidently a screw loose, and it is the duty, I think, of the "C.B.U." to set to work and locate it.



J. S. Wilson.

P.S.—The special prize mentioned has reached me to-day, January 18th. There is no letter with same, nor any mention of prize-money overdue.

Is there Trouble Ahead?

Sir,—In reference to the above, may I be permitted to say that your paragraph in "Twitterings" on Jan. 8th was correct in every detail. It may interest "Twite" and "Lover of Justice" to know that the names of both the secretary and the society were sent to the Editor, who of course used his discretion as to the advisability of publishing the same, and to prove that I at least am quite unbiased in the matter, I may say that the other side of the question (which I heard at the "Scottish National"), was also sent to the Editor, and was probably in his hands before the letters of either "Twite" or "Lover of Justice" reached him. Whether or not the members of the society concerned are in accord with the wishes of the officials, I do not know, as I merely stated the position of affairs as it was explained to me. I might also say that I was requested (not by the secretary, but by one of the speakers) to forward to Cage Birds the full text of the speeches made during the journey to Edinburgh. Both "Twite" and "Lover of Justice" appear to have jumped to the conclusion that Newcastle was the society concerned, I suppose because the name of Mr. Currah was mentioned, and it may be assumed from this that there is only one big society and one secretary in the North! Happy Newcastle! Lucky Billy Curry! The letter of "Lover of Justice" appears to me to have been written more with the intention of ventilating some old grievance against the Newcastle officials than anything else, and I certainly think he should have made sure that Newcastle was the society concerned before he proceeded to attack the integrity of the officials, for he clearly admits he did not know when he says he "began to wonder." With the inability of "Lover of Justice" to see where there is any coercion or injustice in rule 17, I have nothing to do, and I can only say that my opinions on this question are well known, and have been fully expressed in the columns of Cage Birds. "Lover of Justice" is entirely wrong when he says that every society affiliated to the C.B.U. became so by the vote of the majority of its members, and I tell him at once that the minority is ruling the majority. Every society affiliated to the Union became so merely by the vote of the majority of the members who attended the respective meetings, and the attendance of members in the cases of 90 per cent. of the societies concerned was not one-third of the total membership, simply because the majority of the members did not take sufficient interest in the matter to come and vote. When I advocated a plebiscite of fanciers at that time, I meant it to be individual, and those concerned knew that well enough, and it was only a trick on their part to send voting papers to each society instead of to each member, for they know well enough that the majority of the members would not be present to vote. It would be as well for "Lover of Justice" to recognise these facts before he informs fanciers that the majority is ruling the minority, for, if I am not mistaken as to his identity, he knows as well as I do that what I have said is quite true. Let "Lover of Justice" understand that I am not out against the Union at the present time. Far from it. But if it is to stand, then I say, let the rules be rigorously enforced, and treat all fanciers alike. Do not punish one man for breaking rule 17, and let twenty more go scot free. I have no hesitation in saying that had the rules of the Union been enforced in district No. 1 during the past show season as they should have been, there would not have been near the amount of discontent that there has been, and further, the practicability or use of the Union would have been settled, either one way or the other. In regard to the 2nd prize Mule at the late Newcastle Show, I have nothing to do with this, but it seems to me that I am responsible for its being made the medium of an attack upon the integrity of the Newcastle officials. All I can say is that had I been "Lover of Justice," I would have acted up to my nom-de-plume, and would have ascertained at the time what the officials had to say about the matter. This would have been much better than waiting four months and then taking advantage of someone else's correspondence (upon a different subject altogether) before he brought the matter up, and then only under a nom-de-plume. These noms-de-plume are becoming far too common in the correspondence columns, and when a man has anything to say, be he "on the warpath" or otherwise, he should never be afraid or ashamed to sign his name, at least that is the opinion of

W. Reid.

Sir,—The remarks made by your correspondent "Twite" evidence the fact that there is considerable "twittering" amongst those to whom the C.B.U. is dear. Allow me to say I quite endorse the sentence "Clear to some of us," but not in the same sense as meant by your correspondent "Twite," who ends his letter with it. And the majority were against leaving the C.B.U. (at present). Your readers may look forward with interest to the near future for developments. With reference to "Lover of Justice's" sarcastic insinuations about the secretary and chairman being the Newcastle Society, if he attended any of the meetings of the society he would soon find out that no chairman or secretary, or any clique, would be allowed to dominate its business. "Lover of Justice" says he hears that the majority of the members of the N.C.B. Society wish to remain affiliated to the C.B.U. May I point out to him that it is dangerous to rush into print on mere hearsay. "Lover of Justice" should be sure of his facts before he commits himself to writing, as in this matter he is wrong. Again, he says he fails to see where there is coercion in the C.B.U. May I suggest to him the necessity and importance of reading the rules of the C.B.U.; perhaps he has not yet done so. Further, let me say in reference to the accusation against officials of the N.C.B.S. stirring up strife at every opportunity, that the only unpleasantness or strife that has ever taken place in the N.C.B.S. has been caused by and through the C.B.U. With regard to the Mule case at the last N.C.B. Show, if "Lover of Justice" is aware of the true facts of this particular case his action in putting it before your readers in the way he has done is most contemptible. Allow me to put the true facts before readers, then they will be able to form an estimate of the character of this so-called "Lover of Justice." This mule could not be found when the members' class was brought out to be judged, because the exhibitor, instead of putting the label for the members' class on the front of the cage, had stuck it on the top. Your readers will understand without further explanation the reason it could not be found when wanted for judging in the members' class. When the exhibitor complained to me about the matter, I told him we would have the class judged over again. I was not the N.C.B.S., but their show manager. This course the exhibitor earnestly entreated me not to take, as he admitted that it was entirely his own fault in putting the label on the top of the cage where it could not be seen. So the invidious and contemptible insinuation against an official of the N.C.B.S. is without the slightest foundation.

J. Currah.

Sir,—We hear sometimes at our meetings about information being given to outsiders. I think it would have been better if the secretary of this society (we know now what society) had kept his information until the general meeting; as for the chairman, he is dead set against the C.B.U. What a brilliant gathering it must have been on the way to Edinburgh. Thirty fanciers voting against the C.B.U.; I wonder if the C.B.U. is quaking! Rule 17 seems to be the bone of contention; but what about Rule 16? How many of those 30 fanciers have been before the C.B.U. for infringing this? It is well there are two such rules. The Newcastle C.B. Society have not decided to leave the C.B.U., and I do not think that the majority of the members want to leave. I hope the other societies in the Newcastle District will not be coerced by the officials of the Newcastle Society into leaving the C.B.U.

Durham.

Sir,—Perhaps a word of explanation from me might clear the air somewhat. Your correspondent's "Twittering" was substantially correct, and I do not mind admitting that I was the secretary referred to; further, I say that my prophecy was partly fulfilled, for at our committee meeting it was decided that it would be advisable to leave the Union. There were 15 members present, and the decision was unanimous, and I was instructed to lay this on the agenda at our next meeting instead of the cage-making demonstration by Mr. Shepherd. Accordingly the matter was laid before the members, and they decided that we ought to work in conjunction with the surrounding societies, as it would not be fair to their members, nor to ourselves, to leave the C.B.U., whilst they remained members of it. As regards the latter part of "Twite's" letter, my chief interest has been, and will be so long as I remain connected with it, to promote the welfare of the Newcastle C.B.S., irrespective of whether it is affiliated to the C.B.U. or not. I am pleased to note that "Twite" puts "at present" at the end of his letter, for I have a letter from a neighbouring society in which they ask us to take the lead—whatever we do they are prepared to follow. "Lover of Justice" writes in such a splenetic sort of way that he practically answers himself, and if he will be so good as either to write me personally or sign his name to the correspondence I will be pleased to give him a full explanation of the question at the end of his letter, and which, I think, will be entirely satisfactory to the owner of the bird in question; if not, I shall be more than pleased to lay the whole case before my committee. Up to the present I have had no official communication to the contrary. In conclusion, let me say that the popularity of the Newcastle Society is not based upon trivial matters, but upon the stand which it has always taken to uphold the right.

W. Curry.

Several letters on the above subject unavoidably held over.

Elgin's New Cage Bird Society

Sir,—At a meeting held on January 10th, it was decided to form a new association for Elgin, to be called Elgin Cage Bird Association. The followings office-bearers were elected: President, Jas. Lumsden; vice-pres., Robt. Garden. A committee was also formed, composed of prominent fanciers in the town. It has been long felt that such an association was needed so now it has been started I hope the fanciers in Elgin and district who have not already joined will do so at an early date. I shall be glad to give full details of membership, etc., to anyone interested.

The Norwich Plainhead Canary.

Mr. G. DOBINSON (Seaton Delaval).

Although not of many years' standing, my experience with Norwich Canaries has been marked with success. To commence with, I might say that it is not altogether an easy matter to get a first-class strain of birds, as I have had my ups and downs, having found out that good stock birds are not always to be had for even good prices. I have had some sorry disappointments—birds which appeared alright to the eye; but not knowing (or having) even the stock from which they were bred, and having paired up to my best stock, the birds have produced nothing but wasters. Thus I have wasted a season. And once a fancier gets a good strain he wants to be very careful when selling his surplus stock which birds it is he parts with. He should study his stock carefully.

My method has been to keep all the best hens I have bred, and when wanting a change of blood, I have bought cocks (which, by the way, a fancier with a small stock must introduce occasionally). I contend that in the breeding of exhibition Norwich, the chief feature is a good sample of stock hens. I like hens of medium size, not too large, having good type, nice head, short wings and tail, and particularly grand quality. I also like them paired up to large cocks also of good type. But I don't object to a little coarseness of feather, providing other points are excellent, viz., good head, short wings and tail, and nice wing carriage. And I am inclined to believe, after careful observation, that you get the type and quality from the hen's side. Of course, you can't always get two birds good in all points, and I generally try to counterbalance the bad points. For instance, if you've a hen having poor wing carriage, try if possible to pair her to a cock that is extra good in its wing carriage. And when pairing up I always try to have one in each pair of birds ticked or lightly variegated, as the green blood keeps the colour good, and without rich colour birds are useless for exhibition purposes. I find that with good stock you don't breed quantity, as I have not averaged more than three per hen per season. I have never exceeded this number, but oftener I have been below it. Last season with nine hens I finished with nineteen young.

As to the stamp of birds exhibited to-day, I don't see much room for complaint, as at all the shows I visited this last season, I found, with the exception of one of two instances, that the birds in the cards were all of good size and type and grand quality; and I think that if anything there is an improvement on 1907 and 1908 as regards type and quality. There has been a lot of controversy in the Fancy Press of late as to the stamp and size, and also the model of the Norwich Plainhead. As regards the model, I don't think much improvement could be made on any of the birds depicted in the coloured plates given with CAGE BIRDS. If any one who has kept the coloured plates would refer back to that given with the issue of CAGE BIRDS of February 23, 1907, and look up "A Blaze of Colour," I think he would find a model to suit.—G. W. DOBINSON.

Mr. W. R. MILES (Chichester).

During my 25 years' experience as a breeder and exhibitor of Canaries, I must admit that the Norwich Plainhead stands an easy first favourite in my estimation. The Plainheads are one of the hardiest varieties of the Canary tribe, being good breeders and feeders. I should advise any who are thinking of taking up this variety to place themselves in the hands of a first-class breeder and exhibitor, and to pay a fair price for their stock, when they will be on the right road to success.

In pairing, I favour a medium-sized hen, with size and colour in the cock. If you pair this way you won't go far wrong. Give a little egg-food after pairing until the hen commences to sit; then feed on plain Canary seed. On the day previous to the eggs hatching give a little egg food. I always use equal quantities of hard-boiled egg and Osborne biscuit. After the young are three days' old give green food; I prefer chickweed, having used this with great success; in fact, I never use anything else. I continue this treatment until the young leave the nest. After this I do not allow them to have any green food at all.

When the young are about five or six weeks old, they should do for themselves. And this is the time when the trouble begins. Free access to water and over-feeding on egg-food are the causes of hundreds of deaths. If fanciers would use as little egg-food and water as possible, I am sure their birds would not be troubled with inflammation of the bowels.

Get your birds on to seed as soon as possible. I use German rape seed soaked in cold water for twelve hours; I rinse it well in cold water, and dry with a cloth. I find this is a fine thing to wean the youngster on. I then give crushed hemp and Canary seed. When the young are six weeks old, you will find them on hard seed; give a little egg food then once a week. When they are eight weeks old, those intended for exhibition should be put on to colour-feed, which should be continued until they are clean moulted. Old birds should be put on colour-feed at the end of July, and this should be continued through the moult.

The above is my method of breeding and feeding. I might say that I have been fairly successful, having won over 4,000 money prizes, six challenge cups outright, dozens of medals and teapots, etc. Some of them have been illustrated in CAGE BIRDS.

With reference to the present-day Norwich. I must say that just lately I have seen a great many that are bad to find fault with. You do occasionally see a long-sided bird get in the money, but taking them on the whole they are a good lot. I confess I like a good big bird myself, but it must be really good. I can assure you that wherever I adjudicate, a "good big 'un" will always beat a "good little 'un"; I know which are the hardest to breed. I trust these few lines will be of use to the amateur.—W. R. MILES.

Mr. G. L. HARBER (Merthyr Tydvil).

My first experience of the Norwich Plainhead was about twenty-five years ago. I remember buying a pair from a bird dealer in Liverpool (of which city I am a native). The Norwich was then a small bird, not much larger than the present day Border Fancy, and very much of the same type. Fifteen years ago I again took up the Fancy, but the type had altered beyond recognition. The birds that were winning at that time were as big as Lancashires, and almost as long. Size and colour were the main objects, though several breeders had kept to the old type, and still had size. Prescot, near Liverpool, was a veritable hot-bed of the good 'uns, and one had to dip his hand pretty deeply to take anything from there. Is not that so, Mr. Wellings?

My opinion is that we cannot improve on the type that is now asked for; but we must get more size, though the great difficulty is to produce a big bird with short tail and flights. I think this is the most difficult point to fix. My model of a Norwich was the winning unflighted Buff at the last Crystal Palace Show. —G. L. HARBER.

Mr. W. MORRIS (London, N.).

Having been a breeder for a number of years, and having always made it a practice to experiment with a pair or two, I have come to the conclusion that the secret of success is in the strain of the hens which the fancier keeps.

In the pairing of my stock I take very great care, for you cannot be too careful over this most important item. It is better to have three good pairs of birds than six pairs of second-raters. There is nothing more disappointing after the breeding season than to find that you have bred nothing worth looking at. It is perhaps almost unnecessary for me to say that the usual method pursued is to pair a yellow cock to a buff hen, or vice-versa. It is my rule to pair a clear to a ticked, or a clear to a marked bird. Now I have found that you breed more marked birds from a marked cock than you do from a marked hen, and if your stock is practically clear I advise you to use the marked cock; if otherwise, use the marked hen.

Colour plays a most important part, and without it one stands but little chance of getting into the front ranks on the show-bench. Without green blood in one's strain it is useless trying to produce colour; it does not matter what amount of colour-feed you give a bird, if you have not a fair amount of marked birds in your room. The method to adopt is to pair a very heavily-variegated yellow cock to a heavily-variegated buff hen. From these you should produce some good greens, and if one should turn out to be a yellow green hen do not part with it at any price, as the young from this kind of hen paired to a clear buff cock give one a good start on the road to success.

Another very important point in the breeding of Norwich is the quality of feather, and if breeders would only keep their best-feathered birds and allow the green blood to assist them, never using the coarse-feathered birds, they would maintain that high standard which is required in the up-to-date Norwich.

Double-yellowing and double-buffing I do not advocate, as I have gained but very little by it. All my show birds have been bred in the usual way, and I make it a practice only to show birds bred by myself. Good carriage in the Norwich is a very essential point, and this can be brought about by avoiding those birds which are very heavy behind, as good wing carriage and tail go together. The head should be broad, rising well from the beak, with the eye in the centre finished off with a short, thick beak. By all means avoid birds which are heavy in the beak, as this gives a bird a snaky appearance.

A few other things to avoid: Birds with long legs and big feet; drop tails; wings that cross at the tips; also long-barrel birds, and especially small eyes.

In-breeding is very essential, especially if you want to fix a good point; but never go nearer than cousins. I have bred good birds from half-brother and sister. Now, fanciers who say they do not believe in in-breeding, and who pair their birds by sight, have a lot to learn. I should like them to know that the show birds they themselves have, have been in-bred for years, and if it was not for the generosity of the old fanciers in selling them some of their best hens they would not be where they are at the present day.

I am glad to see the marked improvement in the show bird of to-day—the grand size seen in the yellow classes, equal to that in the buffs in every way. Quite two sets of winners could be found in each class at several of our leading shows. The numbers in the classes, too, speak well for the go-ahead Norwich of to-day. Referring to judging generally, I think the judges give every satisfaction. Of course, in one or two cases a long-sided bird has got into the prize-list, but I hope the time is not far distant when all judges will go for the short and thick one. —W. MORRIS.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Rooks' Ways in January.

Of our commoner birds the Crow family is one of the first to show signs of the approaching nuptial season. The largest of them, the Raven, not unfrequently nests in February, which is generally the coldest and most unsettled month of the year; but this fine bird has been so reduced in numbers, that is, has entirely disappeared from its old haunts in the west, its last stronghold being some remoto districts in Scotland, that its habits and nesting are only observed by the favoured few. In the South of England the Rooks begin to show some sort of interest in each other's affairs at the turn of the year. Just now there are some curious little antics being constantly performed. The Rooks appear more restless and quarrelsome than usual. While they are feeding quietly in the fields one will suddenly look up, make a dart at another with outspread wings and open beak, have just one round, and then settle down again. Sometimes several of the nearest birds will join in these gambols, so that for a minute or two there is quite a nice little free fight.

As I write there is one perched upon the summit of an old walnut tree. This post he has held for the last half-hour or so, balancing himself in the strong breeze. As a brother Rook flies by he leaves his post, joins him for a minute (possibly to have a word with him) and then returns to his perch. This he has repeated some half-a-dozen times. It appears to the looker on that his desire is to get a mate to join him, perhaps to help spend an idle hour. Although other birds are feeding around, he cannot be acting as a sentinel, as none is required here, where Rooks are never molested.

That these birds do occasionally have one or two on the watch is certain, for I have frequently seen an odd bird perched on the tallest tree at the edge of the field where the flock is feeding, and upon my approaching he has taken wing, calling loudly to the others who at once make off. One of the most marvellous cases of sentinel duty is that of the wild geese, who, while marching across a corn field feeding, will all be busy but one, and he moves with them, but only as a looker-out, and on no account must he feed until another takes his place. When one considers the isolated position in which the Rook builds, exposed to the four winds, to rain, sleet and snow, it certainly seems somewhat curious that they should nest so early. Their eggs and young are frequently exposed to most inclement weather, but from what one can see the mother birds attend pretty closely to their charges and so retain heat in the nest.

Mimicry Among Birds.

When in flight there is a great resemblance between the Cuckoo and the Hawk. This was noticed by the ancients, who thought the Cuckoo became a Hawk in winter.

A Local Bird.

One of the most local birds we have is the Kentish Plover, which frequents only the pebbly beach between Sandwich and Hastings, where the birds nest year after year. Occasionally one or two are found elsewhere, but they are only stragglers.

Vanished Species.

The Crane has been described as breeding in our fens in 1544, and the Spoonbill is recorded by Sir Thomas Browne as frequenting Suffolk and Norfolk for breeding purposes in 1688. The last Bustard of the numbers which once tenanted the southern downs was killed in Norfolk in 1838.

"Nothing New Under the Sun."

The small bird-traps used to-day in Egypt to catch birds are almost identical with those portrayed by the ancients thousands of years ago.

The Hardy Heron.

The Heron, like the Rook, is supposed to be united to its partner for life, as the same nest is occupied year after year. Unless its life is cut short through accident, the Heron is doubtless a long-lived bird. They are hardy, powerful, and very tenacious.

Nesting of Eagles.

Golden Eagles are not prolific breeders. They do not arrive at maturity until they are five or six years old, and some never acquire adult plumage, even at that age. Well-known pairs will frequently miss a season without nesting, simply using the old nest as a resting-place.

The Rustic Bunting.

The little Rustic Bunting, a bird five and a half inches in length, with brown head, white throat, and rufous band on chest, has been recorded in Great Britain three times, the first in 1867. It is a native of Siberia, and winters in China. It has been captured in most of the countries of Europe.

A Plea for the Owls.

In one of his excellent books on birds, Lord Lilford writes upon Owls as follows:—"I cannot help once more taking up a text that I have, I fear, worn almost threadbare; it is—never destroy or molest an Owl of any sort. I consider all the Owls are not only harmless, but most useful, and the Barn, White, or Screech Owls are perhaps the most serviceable to man of any English birds.

The Parrots of Queensland.

The Parrot is such a commonplace of English life that the following information about the Parrots to be seen in the picturesque "bush" of Queensland (contributed by a Queensland correspondent), is interesting. He writes: The headship of the birds of flight is here accorded to the Parrot tribe; their intelligence claims it. Of the Parrots proper we have none, but their place is bountifully supplied by the Cockatoos and Parrakeets. A lively feature in a Queensland landscape is a flock of Sulphur-crested Cockatoos clambering about the branches of a forest tree, which seems laden with masses of white bloom. Black Cockatoos, of which there are several kinds, are not so sociable, but the naturalist may be fortunate enough to enjoy the charming sight of a company of them swooping down into an old swamp-oak on the bank of a creek, and before descending to drink disporting themselves with a great display of wing and tail blazing with red and yellow—a sight well remembered by the writer. The great Palm Cockatoo, with its fearsome crest and beak, is found only in the North. Small Cockatoos, delicately coloured and more or less plentiful in their respective habitats, are objects of traffic, among them that favourite household pet, the Galah, the best mimic we have except, perhaps, the White Cockatoo. Seed-eating Parrakeets in a multitude of handsome liveries haunt the forests, but are not often seen till they join in an attack on a settler's crop. One cannot help recalling the delight with which the "new chum" riding through the bush saw for the first time a troop of Green and Crimson Parrakeets dash into a small tree a few yards away, and watched them, as with chatter and screech they climbed about the branches. Of this group the King Lory, Moreton Bay Rosella, and Crimson-wing are the best known. But of all the Parrakeets, the most likely to greet the eye in the forest are the Honeysuckers. Their chosen food is the honey of the gum-tree flower. In some parts of the forest some kind of gum-tree is generally to be found in flower, and the Parrakeets by day, as well as the flying foxes by night, make it their business to hunt them out. The man is to be envied who, standing beneath a tree clothed with bloom, marks the birds—Blue Mountains, Scaly-breasts, and Musks—in busy silence and every posture (upside down as often as not) searching every flower, whilst their vivid colours, in beautiful contrast to the pale green foliage, are glancing in the sun.

In the Courts.

A DUBLIN DEALER CONVICTED.

Alleged False Pretences.

At the Dublin Criminal Sessions, on January 14th last, John King, keeper of a bird store in Capel Street, Dublin, was charged with having obtained credit under false pretences. It appeared that the accused obtained birds, rabbits, etc., from a number of firms in England, for which he did not pay, and these firms obtained decrees against him for the amounts, but the Sheriff was never able to levy the decrees, as the bailiffs always returned "no goods."—Mr. T. F. Molony, K.C., appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Gausen for the defendant.

Mr. Stygall (Peterborough) swore that in May, 1908, he advertised pigeons, and in response to that he received a postcard from the accused. He then sent a letter stating that he would accept 18s. 6d. for the birds. He received a letter on May 17th, 1908, which contained a reference to the accused being well known at the North Wall, to the 30 years' experience of the purchaser in the business, and that he would send cash by return. Witness then sent on the birds. He did not receive the cash.

Mr. Molony: What was the inference to be drawn from that letter?—Witness, answering the question, said the opinion he formed of the letter was that the writer was an honest man. Witness was impressed by the 30 years' standing which the writer alleged he had. Continuing, witness said that he wrote to the accused in July, and received a reply with an offer of 10s. if witness were satisfied. In January he received a postal order for 10s.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gausen: Did you arrange with the newspaper in which you advertised for a deposit before the birds were sent on?—No.

There is a method by which you could have made yourself perfectly safe through the paper?—Yes.

James Paterson (Northumberland) swore that he advertised ferrets, and got a letter from the accused, who agreed to purchase eight for 16s., and promised cash by return.

Mr. Molony: I believe from that day to this you are waiting for the cash?—I am (laughter).

Henry Walker (Bolton) stated that he advertised twelve "homing" pigeons at 24s. The accused wrote offering less, but witness declined the offer, and he received a letter from the accused telling him to send them on, and promising cash. He did not receive the cash.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gausen: Was it your opinion that he was carrying on a genuine business or no business?—I say he was carrying on a fraudulent business—a swindle, that is what we would call it in England. (Laughter.)

In England you never have anything like this? You always pay?—This would be crushed out in England.

Sergeant Bruden, swore he visited the premises of the accused, and the latter said, "I admit I got them all. I don't deny it. They are all small sums. It looks very bad. I am not making very much out of it." Witness drew his attention to the fact that he had paid only three small sums out of the whole. He read out a long list of decrees against the accused.

Mr. Gausen, K.C., for the defence, submitted that the accused was carrying on a genuine business, but got into financial difficulties. Taking the letters of the accused, he suggested that the only fair inference from them was that he was in business—a business going on for 30 years.

Mr. John Blood Smith, solicitor, was called for the defence. He knew accused for 15 years. He dealt with accused from time to time, and always found him honest in his dealings.

The Recorder: Did you hear the list of decrees read out here by the detective? Can you say that a man was carrying on an honest business having regard to those decrees?—Witness: I only know of my own dealings with him.

The prison warder also gave evidence of previous good character.

The Recorder, in summing up, said that the prisoner in his letters represented that he was well known by the London and North Western Co. The letters showed that the prisoner represented himself as a solvent man. If by misleading statements any man's goods were obtained, it was not a question of civil but criminal proceedings. Two reasons were given at times why men were trusted. One was that they were known, and the other was that they were not known—(laughter). It was a case in which the credit of the city was at stake, and the jury should not let it go abroad that if these debts were incurred the debtor could escape payment and punishment.

The jury retired to consider the case, and after an absence of a few minutes returned with a verdict of guilty, but strongly recommended the prisoner to mercy on account of his family.

The Recorder: Really, what should have been done in this case was to plead guilty, because it is not defensible. Offences of this kind must be put down. He would give favourable consideration to the recommendation of the jury. He did intend to give a heavy sentence if the accused were convicted.

Mr. Burne asked that it be taken into consideration if the prisoner paid back by instalments.—Mr. Molony said the Crown were not a debt-collecting agency.

The prisoner was then removed.

Under the White Rose.

IT is with great regret that I report the death of one of Bradford's oldest fanciers, Mr. J. H. Stonehouse, of Otley Road, who passed away on January 13th, in his 67th year. He was interred on the 17th inst. Mr. Stonehouse was a lifelong fancier of the Yorkshire Canary, and also liked to have a Linnet or two included in his stock. He was very well known by the older generation of fanciers, and acted as secretary for the first open show held in Bradford as long ago as 1879, a fact of which he was justly proud, and he expressed his satisfaction at the grand show held by the City of Bradford this season as compared with the first attempt. At the time of his death his stock consisted of some thirty odd birds, though for some time he had said he could not follow them as he would like, and had contemplated leaving the Fancy, not from any abatement of interest, but on grounds of health. Without doubt, his many old friends will be surprised to hear of his death, which occurred rather suddenly. I am sure all will condole with his widow and family.

THE N.G.M.Y.C.C. have completed their list of patronage shows, and the following is a list of results: Open Competition: First, Ogden Bros., 128 points; 2nd, Sutcliffe and Son, 124; 3rd, E. Smith, 66; 4th and 5th, W. H. Shackleton and P. Mason, tie 54 each; 6th, L. Briggs, 32. Novice Competition: 1st, E. Clegg, 47 points; 2nd, F. Self 12. The junior novices (for novice members of the club who are competing in the Y.U. novice classes) also have a competition, the final of which takes place at Hoyland to-day (Saturday), and I hope to be able to give their results next week. For a first season the competition has been pretty keen, and the officials look forward with confidence.

BANKFOOT and Dis. C.B.S. will hold their first annual tea, concert, and prize distribution at their headquarters, the Bankfoot Schools, on Saturday, January 22nd, when they will be pleased to welcome any fancier or friend who cares to attend. Tea will be on tables at 4.30, the concert will begin at 7 p.m., and a splendid tea and huge programme are what they promise. It is interesting to note that so hard have the officials worked, that there is a prize for every member who has exhibited during the session.

YORKSHIRE Union Show season closes today at Hoyland, and it is hoped this venture will prove a success. They are a good distance removed from the exhibiting centre of the West Riding, but they are stout of heart, and have a few good members amongst them, who will do all they can to make the show a success.

GT. HORTON Good Intent Show held last Saturday was only moderately patronised. Entries came up meagrely—240 in 20 classes. But the officials were still smiling, and they think the loss on the show will be only comparatively small; however, after the last two real good shows they had, it seemed such a drop.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Annual Meeting.

The fourth annual general meeting for the election of officers, etc., was held on January 11th before a capital attendance. The meeting was very enthusiastic over the treasurer's report, Mr. Farrar stating that the balance carried from 1908 had been more than doubled; this places the society in a very strong financial position, and every member is bent on making 1910 the most prosperous year in the history of the society. The treasurer's report was adopted with acclamation. Messrs. W. Laycock and A. Wilkinson (auditors) said they had found the books in a most satisfactory condition. The secretary then thanked the officials and members for their loyal and unfailing support, stating that their success was due to the united efforts of the members to place the society in one of the foremost ranks. Final arrangements were made for the third annual tea and concert and prize distribution on January 18th. The following officers were elected for 1910:—President, E. Suddards, Esq. (who was sincerely thanked for his unswerving loyalty, generosity, and his deep personal interest). The members decided to nominate six vice-presidents instead of four as formerly, and the following were elected to that position with a unanimous vote: Messrs. G. R. Rushworth, G. White, J. Stobart, L. Briggs, W. Blakey, and W. Greenwood. Mr. J. Farrar was re-elected as treasurer, and was heartily thanked for past services; Messrs. W. Laycock and A. Wilkinson were re-appointed auditors. Mr. H. Hill was appointed as secretary for the ensuing year, and he nominated Mr. W. Cruise (late vice-president) as his assistant; this met with the approval of the members, and Mr. Cruise was appointed assistant-secretary. The balance-sheet for the annual show on New Year's Day was eagerly awaited by the members, and when this was read out, showing a nice little balance on the right side, the members were one and all delighted. This was the crowning point to one of the most enthusiastic meetings the society has held, and was indeed a fine finish to its most successful year.

ECCLESHILL C.B.A.

The society will hold their annual supper (date not given—Editor) followed by a distribution of prizes won at members' shows held during the season 1909, supper to commence at 7 p.m. sharp. The following members are the winners of the specials:—Champion Section: 1, J. Chippendale; 2, T. Elsegood; 3, A. Price; and 4, W. Lee. Novice Section: 1, F. Studd; 2, F. Gelder; 3, F. Clark; and 4, W. Sparks. Mr. F. Studd also wins society's silver cup for most points during year.—W. NETTLETON, Sec.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

General meeting, held on January 12th, when there was a good attendance. It was decided to hold the last club show in conjunction with the City of Birmingham Members' Show on January 26th, at the Crown Hotel, Hill Street, Birmingham. Mr. Roe was elected to judge. The attention of members is drawn to the 15/- selling class which has been added for this occasion. The committee trust every member will be represented.—A. PADDOCK, Hon. Secretary.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Annual meeting, held at the Nag's Head Cocoa House, January 4th, Mr. T. Wright presided over a very good attendance. The treasurer paid over all prize money won at the annual show, specials having been forwarded to the outside exhibitors previously. The cup for best bird in show (won by Mr. Winnard) was despatched to him within three days after show. Owing to the lateness of the hour it was decided to defer the election of officers until the next monthly meeting, February 1st. The secretary would be pleased to receive from outside members any nominations for officers or committee.—J. SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, held January 3rd. The secretary made a few remarks on the balance-sheet, which was unanimously adopted, there being a balance at bank and in hand of £3 3s. 11d. As showing the remarkable progress of this association, the total receipts were over £20 in advance of last year's (1908). A vote of thanks to the retiring officers and committee was unanimously carried. The election of officers resulted as follows: Chairman, Mr. F. Williamson; vice-chairman, Mr. C. R. Carr; treasurer, Mr. H. Ovenden; committee, Messrs. C. H. Cooper, J. Sbankley; J. A. Bartlett, F. Wallace, A. T. Billingsley, F. Marshall, J. S. Roberts, and A. W. Farmer; auditors, Messrs. G. B. Leclair and S. A. Griffin; assistant secretary, H. W. Burbidge, and as joint secretaries, Messrs. B. F. and A. B. Forse.—FORSE AND SON, Hon. Secs.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester, on January 8th, a good number of members being present from Prescot, Oldham, Sbaw, Hazel Grove, Glossop, Denton, Middleton, Manchester, and Rawtenstall. A good night's business was gone through, it being decided that the medals from the Toronto society be held over till next year. The medals were much admired. The secretary gave the points scored for the two challenge cups, as follows: Lancashire challenge cup, W. Adams, 123 points; W. Lee, 67; J. Vickers, 40; J. Oldham, 33. Novice Lancashire medal: A. Hordern, 53 points; W. Riggard, 11. Lizard Challenge cup won by J. Dewsnap, 201 points; J. Rukin, 170; J. Hampshire, 113; and W. P. Barnes, 97 points. Novice Lizard medal: W. Dewsnap, 61 points; A. Martin, 31; J. Lee, 30; A. Bosworth, 3; B. Salway, 2; and W. Bacon, 2 points. We also received a new member in Mr. J. Thompson (Glossop). We have still plenty of room for new members, so be proposed at our general meeting, held at Manchester, on March 5th; subscription, 5/-. Mr. J. Rukin won Ramsden's cruet at Scottish National show for best colour-fed Lizard. No novice, unfortunately, entered for the medal given by the secretary. A hearty vote of thanks to chairman concluded the business.—J. RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

The society made a good start for the New Year at their meeting at Johnston's Rooms on January 3rd. The chair was taken by the President (Mr. F. Piper). Four new members were elected, and four others nominated for membership. The secretary (Mr. H. Smith) reported that the result of the Team Contest for the Championship at the Horticultural Hall had not yet come to hand, but he believed Wimbledon had obtained 3rd prize, and if so, thought they had done well. The meeting elected Messrs. Plank and Wright to audit the accounts, and arrangements for the pair show were made. As next meeting (February 7th) clashes with the Crystal Palace Show, it was decided not to meet until February 21st, and to hold the pair show on the same evening. Other details were settled, and Mr. J. Robson was selected to judge. A splendid lot of birds (upwards of 30) were brought up for judging competition, in Yorkshires. Mr. H. E. Tringham, judge, received a very hearty welcome. The points gained in the judging competition were: Mr. F. W. Owen, 18; Mrs. Hare, 15; Messrs. T. Brown and W. R. Angear, 14 each; Mr. Whittome, 12; Mrs. M. Owen, Mr. Carson, and Mr. Bailey, 11 each; Mr. Warley and Mr. Baker, 10 each; Mr. Beeney, 7; Mr. Hare, and Mr. Whiting, 6 each; Mrs. Gill, Mr. Dixon, and Mr. Reade, 4 each; Mr. Billington and Mr. Wallis, 3 each.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held at headquarters on January 6th, a fair number of members attending, Mr. H. E. Tringham in the chair. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Dr. Mitchell Watt; vice-presidents, H. E. Crowhurst, G. Dansie, D. Malvey, J. Robson, and J. B. Waterman; hon. solicitor, H. B. Tweed, Esq.; hon. treasurer, W. Hodson; hon. auditors, J. S. Matthes and F. Cole; hon. assistant sec., H. W. Tomsett; hon. sec., W. Hodson; committee, H. E. Tringham (chairman), W. B. Cracknell, J. W. Cranfield, H. Cunningham, H. Goodwin, E. S. Lugg, L. J. Richardson, W. H. Tomsett, S. H. Stephens, J. W. Norris, D. Rocks, and W. Hodson. The balance-sheet showed the society to be in a healthy financial position, with a good sound membership of close upon 100. Two propositions were down. Proposed by Mr. Hodson, and seconded by Mr. Cole, "That the following be added to Rule 3 of the society's rules: 'And if such subscriptions or levy in arrears be not paid or reduced at the end of six months, the committee shall have power to report same to the council of the Federation for further action.'" After considerable discussion this was carried. Proposed and seconded: "That we adopt the definition as to champion and novice of the London Federation, viz., 'A novice is one who has not won a first prize at three separate shows in novice members classes'; 'A champion is one who has won a first prize at three separate shows in amateur members' classes, or three first prizes in open novice classes, or one first prize in open competition, all pair and young bird shows excluded.'" This also was carried. A suggestion was here made that it was desirable to change the headquarters, seeing we were not able to hold the members' shows at our present meeting place, which added considerably to the working expenses. Mr. Lugg proposed, and Mr. Richardson seconded, that a sub-committee be appointed to arrange this, Messrs. Norris, Cunningham, and Hodson being elected. Votes of thanks to the retiring officers and committee were carried, those to the chairman and secretary being received with musical honours. The meeting terminated with hearty good wishes for a prosperous year to the present officers and committee. A novel and interesting programme is being arranged for the year, and it is hoped members will appreciate the same, and attend the meetings which are held every first Thursday in the month.—W. HODSON, Hon. Sec.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held in Oddfellows' Hall, President R. Dickson presiding. Owing to the holidays there was only a small turnout. It was agreed to leave questions of importance over to next meeting. We held a table show of Border Fancies; the awards were placed by Mr. Hugh Moreland. 1 and 2, Hamilton and Wallace; 3 and 4, Conner. It was agreed to have a table show of Norwich breeding pairs at next meeting on February 3rd.—R. HAMILTON, Secretary.

YORKSHIRE C.S. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held at 17, Hamilton-street on January 10th, Mr. Fry in the chair. Present: Messrs. Rooney, Dowling, McDonnell, Lynch, Holley, Stewart, Gillen, Berse, Lea, Callaghan, and the hon. sec. It was suggested that the society hold a supper either before or after the general meeting, and a committee was formed to go into the matter, as to the cost per member, etc., and report accordingly; and if same could be carried through, to invite representatives from the provincial societies. The treasurer informed the meeting that the society had a balance of over £12 to their credit, and all liabilities have been discharged. The meeting was adjourned to January 17th.—D. CARROLL, Hon. Sec., 17, Hamilton-street, Dublin.

RUNCORN C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held on January 7th in Leo's Temperance Hotel, the excellent headquarters. There was a good attendance when Mr. Cawley opened the meeting. The treasurer, Mr. E. Peck, presented a statement of accounts, which showed a credit balance of £0 13s. 10s. The secretary was then called upon to give his report of the first year's work of the society. He said that the society had done well, both as regards finance and its real object, viz., the study and cultivation of Canaries of all varieties. The members' show, held on December 11th was a great success, and is already bearing "fruit" in the shape of new members. The report and balance-sheet were unanimously adopted. The election of officers was next dealt with:—Chairman, Mr. W. H. Cawley, re-elected; vice-chairman, Mr. C. H. Cook; secretary, Mr. T. P. Baxter, re-elected; treasurer, Mr. E. Peck, re-elected; and a competent committee.—T. P. BAXTER, Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Annual meeting, held at the Oddfellows' Hall, on January 3rd, a good muster being present. The secretary read the balance-sheet, duly audited, showing £12 2s. 8d. in the hands of the treasurer, this being considered highly satisfactory; the previous balance being £6 4s. 9d. Two new silver cups were on view, presented by Mr. Ferens and Master T. R. Ferens, to replace the cups won respectively by Mr. G. Harland and Mr. Olliff for best young bird bred by a member, and shown at the annual open show. The sixteenth annual open show was arranged for November 18th and 19th, this being fixed at this meeting to prevent other societies clashing, if possible. The following officials were elected by ballot: Chairman, Mr. G. W. Oliver; vice-chairman, Mr. T. Pepper; hon. treasurer, Mr. F. F. Howe; hon. secretary, Mr. Ernest R. Ridley; committee, Messrs. Brumby, Barwick, Harland, Longhorn, Perkins, Potter, Stones, and Stamford; hon. solicitor, B. Suddaby, Esq.; hon. auctioneer, W. Clark, Esq.; hon. auditors, Messrs. T. Chapman and W. Sawdon.—ERNEST R. RIDLEY, Hon. Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meeting, held in Palmer Hall, on January 5th, and proved the best-attended meeting we have had for a long time. The chairman proposed that a vote of sympathy be sent to the relatives of the late Mr. J. North, one of our oldest members, which vote was carried unanimously. The election of officers was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows: Pres., Rt. Hon. G. W. Palmer; vice, L. Sutton, Esq., J.P., C. E. Keyser, Esq., J.P., S. Pike, Esq., Howard Palmer, Esq., J.P., Alfred Palmer, Esq., J.P.; treasurer, G. H. Acton, Esq.; chairman, Mr. J. Brooker; secretary, Mr. W. H. Pyke, 25, The Grove; auditors, Messrs. Brooks and Laurence; committee, Messrs. Maisey, Yates, Dearlove, Laurence, Fraser, Brown, Vince, Tremlett, and Hopgood. The subscription was reduced to 2/6 per annum, payable by March meeting; after that date 3/-. Mr. Aston very kindly gave a donation of £1 2s. 6d. towards the funds, and Mr. Maisey offered a silver medal for best Yorks. bred by a member. We decided to advertise in the district papers, and try to get in touch with the fanciers living in those districts. We are prepared to make a fuss of any gentleman that would like to present us with a cup for competition. The secretary read the balance-sheet for the year, which shows a balance on the right side of £5 15s. 10d., which was considered very satisfactory. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, secretary, Mr. Acton, and Mr. Maisey, concluded the meeting. Twelve new members have been admitted at the last two meetings, which shows how things are looking up here.—W. H. PYKE, Sec.

In the amateur section Mr. Cowie was the winner, and in the novice Mr. Bush.—CHAS. W. LAW, Hon. Sec.

MORPETH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held on January 7th, Mr. Marshall (the newly-appointed chairman) presiding. It was decided to hold our next members' and open show on October 15th, 1910, which is our old date. Will other societies in the district please note? We have engaged as judges, Mr. Harland (Hull) and Mr. A. Hay (Berwick-on-Tweed). The desirability of stating a fixed sum as prize money for members' classes was discussed at some length, and it was finally agreed that we pay at our next annual show 10s. per members' class. We have already enrolled a number of new members, and any others wishing to join would oblige by communicating with me, when I shall be happy to present their names at our next meeting.—E. COWLING, Hon. Sec., Fulbeck Cottage, Morpeth.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Annual general meeting held on January 4th, Mr. J. E. Davies presiding. A good number of members attended. After passing a vote of thanks to the retiring officers, the following gentlemen were nominated for the coming year:—President, Mr. J. E. Davies; vice-presidents, Messrs. G. H. Massey, W. T. Hill, J. Garner; treasurer, Mr. F. W. Nelson; committee, Messrs. G. W. Oldham, W. McKeil, J. Potts, J. Lees, T. Mason, F. Hardy; auditors, Messrs. G. W. Oldham, W. T. Hill; C.B.U. delegate, W. McKeil; secretary, W. Stafford, 24, Stafford-street, Stockport; headquarters, Boar's Head Hotel, Stockport. The members afterwards sat down to a good "hot-pot" supper generously provided by Mr. J. E. Davies, and the members "shifted a bit." This was followed by a contest on the gramophone between Mr. Nelson and Mr. Hill, the contest to be decided by the members; terms, six records each. So close was the competition that the show of hands was equal, and the president was called upon for a casting vote; but he caused much laughter by declaring it a draw. We were then honoured by a few ladies coming amongst us. So Mr. Hill gave us some more records. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. J. E. Davies, and to Messrs. Hill and Nelson, brought a happy meeting to a close.—W. STAFFORD, Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Council meeting, held on January 15th, at Gt. Horton Good Intent Show. Mr. R. Halliday, president in the chair. The Council decided to administer a caution to the exhibitor in whose cages mixed seed had been found at one of the Union shows. The Council were unprepared for the startling revelations made, in regard to the objection raised by a Union novice member against lending and borrowing birds for exhibition. The case objected to was proved by both parties implicated admitting the offence. The Council deferred sentence until further information had been obtained. This is the most serious case the Union have yet been called upon to investigate. The matter will be dealt with by the Council at its next meeting, to be called as soon as possible. The tenders for Union novice medals were submitted, and that of Messrs. Pattorini and Sons (Bradford) was eventually chosen. The Brighouse case was again gone into, and after a lengthy discussion, it was decided that under the circumstances they should for their annual show next year hold the date which they would have held this year had they had an open show. A complaint was made anent some entries at a Union show, that had not been paid for, and the secretary was instructed to write to the exhibitor in question. All nominations, alteration of rules, etc., along with the twenty judges nominated by each Society, should be sent in to the Union secretary by February 1st, according to Rules 3, 12, and 48, in the Handbook.—H. HILL, Sec.

BORDER FANCY CANARY CLUB.

Annual general meeting held in Viaduct Hotel, Carlisle, on Jan. 1st, Mr. Richardson presiding. The balance-sheet showed a slight deficit on the year, but the funds stand at nearly £13, which was considered satisfactory after the extra expenditure during the year. All office bearers were re-elected, Mr. Murdoch being appointed delegate for Kilmarnock district, and Messrs. Wright and Nixon (Carlisle) auditors. A motion "that all Border show cages bearing such distinguishing marks as brass or white knobs or side doors at any show where the patronage of the club is given be disqualified from competition in their respective classes," was passed regarding the knobs, but as regards the side doors was rejected. The next motion was that no society get club patronage unless they engage a club member as judge. After some discussion, an amendment "that rule remain as at present allowing non-members to judge," was passed. The motion "that birds with two marks above be admitted as fouls, but when dark at thighs or vent likewise should be uneven; also that birds marked eyes and wings and at base of tail or rump (this mark underneath) if larger than a three-penny piece, be no longer shown as evenly-marked birds but uneven, and which the eye or eyes are divided by a few light feathers round the eye or between the markings ought to be shown uneven," was fully discussed, and it was decided to leave it to judge's discretion. A motion "that club members be allowed to judge three open shows in one season, club or radius shows not to count," was considered, and an amendment "that they be allowed to judge whenever asked," after some discussion, was lost, and the motion was carried. A motion "that any society who had four classes for Greens and Cinnamons should have medals for these classes," was rejected. The next motion was that members be allowed to win two medals each season instead of three; but it was decided to let the rule remain as at present. It was decided that any show having a radius of under four miles be not granted club patronage. A letter was read from a member in Newcastle district asking that more medals be given for novices in that part, also stating he did not think best bird always won medal. Although not charging anyone with unfairness, he thought the best birds should always win. The subject was allowed to drop. It was decided to halve the value of Whitehaven medal between Mr. McKenzie (Kelso) and Mr. Pennington (Wigton). An enlarged drawing of a Border Fancy Canary, by Mr. Norman, was handed round, and it was decided not to alter our present plate. Agreed to have contest either at Hawick or Scottish National, Hawick to have preference. A few new members were proposed and admitted. Next meeting at Edinburgh. The meeting closed with vote of thanks to Mr. Richardson for presiding.—M. JAMIESON, Hon. Sec.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES & DIS. C.B.S

Annual general meeting, held January 6th, Mr. Freeman presiding. The auditors (Messrs. Nicholson and Talt) gave a full account, and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition, with a balance of £4 1s. 3d. on the year's working, added to cash in bank of £9 0s. 10d., making a total balance of £13 1s. 1d. The following officers were elected: Chairman, Mr. Freeman; vice-chairman, Mr. Talt; secretary and treasurer, J. W. Lowes. The following judges were elected for the open show to be held November 5th: Mr. Battye (Huddersfield), Canaries, and Mr. R. J. Howe (Wellingborough), British and Foreign. It was also decided to hold the annual dinner on February 10th at 7 o'clock at the club house, Leeds Hotel. The best thanks of the meeting were tendered to Mr. Nicholson and the retiring officers.—J. W. LOWES, Hon. Secretary.

HAYLE AND DISTRICT F.A

Annual dinner took place at the White Hart Hotel, on January 6th, when about 30 friends sat down to a good spread, catered for by Host and Hostess Griffiths. After the "feed" the members settled down for a pleasant evening, when a good programme was gone through. The toast of "The King," was replied to by Mr. Smale. Excellent songs were sung by Messrs. Bowden, Willoughby, W. Richards before the toast of "The President" was drunk and replied to by the secretary, Mr. H. Ware. More songs followed by Messrs. Dale, Oatey, Trevaskis, and a hanjo solo by Mr. Coombe. The toast of "The Host and Hostess," was followed by a recitation by Mr. S. J. Coombe, and song and a toast to the "Hayle Fanciers' Association," replied to by Mr. J. Richards. Messrs. Biggleston, T. Rowe, and Symons, concluded the programme with some fine songs. Mr. Vinnicombe presided at the piano. The singing of "God Save the King," brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—H. WARE, Sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

First annual meeting held at headquarters on Jan. 5th, when a very fair number of members were present. Mr. Holmes presided. The Chairman made a few remarks re the work of the society. He reviewed the season fully, mentioning our start in February, the rambles, dinner, and the nest feather pair and open shows; and concluded that he did not think any other young society had done as much and yet turned the year with a balance in hand. The adoption of the balance-sheet having been moved and passed, the Secretary urged the members to attend the meetings, and so help to carry on the work. The schedule for the coming year's work was reviewed, and includes, along with the ordinary meetings, rambles, lectures, judging competitions, and shows. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Rev. Dr. Barker, Dean of Carlisle; secretary, Mr. John C. Bell; treasurer, Mr. G. Davidson; show manager, Mr. T. J. Robson; committee, Messrs. R. Thomlinson, D. Bunting, R. Macartney, W. Davidson, J. Robson, J. Robson, junr., A. O'Neill, F. Bell, J. Chaplow, and T. Holmes.—J. C. BELL, secretary.

ROCHDALE (Good Intent) C.B.S.

For the annual meeting a large attendance of members was present, the President, Mr. T. H. Collinge, being in the chair. The report of the year's work was given out, and we have a balance in hand of over £1, which speaks well for the interest of the members, as owing to a very heavy loss on the 1908 show we started with a debt of over £10. But by the aid of whist drives, shows, suppers, etc., we have pulled through all right, and success met us again at our open show, which was a record, with only a small loss of £1 2s. 6d. throughout the show. The membership is about 40, and new members are being proposed. We are already working to make the 1910 open show beat last year's, which we think we can manage. Officers for 1909: President, Mr. T. H. Collinge; vice-presidents, Messrs. Gaskill, Battye, Lord, G. Adams, Brown, Banks; corresponding secretary, Mr. Wm. Adams, 85, Bedford Street; financial secretary, Mr. G. Allam; treasurer, Mr. E. Hartley; auditors, Messrs. Dewhurst and Pleasance; committee, Messrs. Lee, Lord, Leach, Butterworth, Holt, Dearden, Porter, Faulkner, and Nuttall. A vote of thanks to the retiring officers brought a pleasant evening to a close.—WM. ADAMS, sec.

LEEDS O.B.S.

Annual meeting held on January 8th, Mr. F. Farrar in the chair. The balance-sheet was read, and showed a balance in hand of 13s. 6d., which was voted highly satisfactory, as the secretary had at the beginning of the year an adverse balance of £17 18s. 6d. to face, the result of our disastrous (financially) open show of 1907. The auditors, Messrs. J. P. Moir and M. Hornby, reported that they had found everything correct, and the accounts kept in a satisfactory and business-like manner. The result of the election of officers for 1910 was as follows:—President, F. Soames, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.; vice-presidents, W. Turton, Esq., and W. Greenwood, Esq.; chairman, Mr. P. Whiteley; vice-chairman, Mr. F. Farrar; Committee, Messrs. G. Hallett, A. Chew, J. Owen, C. E. Hall, Seth Fowler, D. McMillan, jun., W. Hornby, Leo Smith, Hy. Smith, E. Norton, and W. H. Norton; hon. treasurer, Mr. J. P. Moir; assistant hon. secretary, Mr. J. W. Medley; hon. secretary, J. Chambers. Mr. T. Baldwinson was duly elected a member. Several new rules respecting the members' shows were proposed, including the vexed Novice Question, and a remedy for the one-man-one-class business, but as the hour was getting late, it was decided that these suggestions, and any others the members cared to send by post to the secretary, should be thrashed out by committee, and submitted for confirmation by members at Feb. meeting.—J. CHAMBERS, Hon. Sec.

BUCKIE, N.B.

Annual show of the Buckie C.B., etc., Association took place in the Fisherman's Hall on Jan. 12, and was very well supported, over 180 entries more than at the previous exhibition being staged, which must be very gratifying to the executive, who richly deserved it. Anyone who saw them going through their various duties could not but be struck by the whole-hearted way they were performed. They were led by Mr. Robertson, the convener of Committee. Mr. Geo. Stewart was secretary, and a right good one he makes, doing everything possible for the success of the show. Mr. Dewar (Edinburgh) judged, and he seemed to give every satisfaction.

The gate was a good one, and we noticed many prominent exhibitors present, who were well satisfied with the awards made by Mr. H. W. Battye.

LLANELLY.

The 5th annual show of the Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S. was held in the spacious Market Hall, probably the roomiest place in South Wales for the purpose, on Jan. 18. The entry was extra good, and keen competition was apparent in most classes. Nice specimens were put down by Messrs. Longden (who won the cup), Deacon, Atherton, Beacheroft, Richards, T. Morris, many winners figuriug in the above teams. In Mr. Daniel Johu, the secretary, and his assistant, we have two energetic and most excellent workers, who were ably supported by a strong lot on the committee, who make a body of red-hot fanciers, being here, there and everywhere iu the interests of the show. The Llanelly society should be proud of its show, being now one of the principal exhibitions in the West country. Messrs. Hadwin, Howe, and Cole, judged, Mr. Hadwin taking the Canaries, Mr. Howe the Mules, Hybrids, British and Foreign, and Mr. Cole the Rollers. Satisfaction was the order of the day at the result of the awards. The classes in the Roller section were, unfortunately, poor, but the quality of the birds was of a very creditable nature. Llanelly fanciers should go in for more of this most interesting section of the Fancy.

Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

MORE GAINS.

I have already the confidence of many thousand fanciers who read this journal, and it is with pleasure I note the ever-increasing confidence the readers have in me. This is easily proved by the thousands of unsolicited testimonials I have received from delighted customers (every letter open for your inspection bearing the original postmark). I always have and still do guarantee every customer satisfaction; this can only be done by my original seven days' approval system: all you have to do is to send your orders and p.o. direct to me, giving full description of your requirements. I in return carefully select from my large, well-assorted stock, birds in accordance with your orders, securely pack and forward them, carriage paid, to your address, on seven days' approval. You receive the birds in good condition, and are privileged to keep them seven days at my risk that you may be fully satisfied, and get the opinion of your friends that the birds are exceptionally good value for the amount paid, before deciding to keep them. Should any bird die during the time of approval, I replace it free of charge. You will plainly see with the above conditions it is impossible to be dissatisfied, for you only keep the birds that give every satisfaction. My sending all my Canaries carriage paid on seven days' approval at my risk, together with the high quality and reasonable prices of my birds, are the reasons the thousand and one customers are continually forwarding me their repeat orders. The quality of my birds defies competition. Note the following prices. But you must see the quality, it will astound you. MANY PEOPLE RUN away with the idea that it is impossible to get a really good Roller unless one is prepared to pay a big price. To prove that this is utterly wrong, I ask you to inspect my prices, and read the letters given below. I have several times said that the Lelpsig Roller, as imported by me, from "Hans Weber," is by far and away the best Roller on the market. To prove this to you, I ask you to have one from me on a week's trial, and an ordinary Roller from elsewhere on similar terms, test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not by far the best bird at a lower price, return it to me and tell your friends that Leipzig Rollers are not as good as represented. I send every one on a week's trial, at my own risk, either on receipt of cash, or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and refund every penny of cash if fullest satisfaction not given, and your every expectation not realised. For many years I have imported these birds only, and at present time claim to be the largest retailer of Rollers in United Kingdom, and this enormous trade has been built up solely by the sheer merit of my birds, not by extensive advertising. I now have on hand an immense stock of pure Liepzig Rollers, direct from "Hans Weber," all in full song, day and gaslight, with long, hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, gong, flute, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc., etc., and are guaranteed absolutely free from chipping or chopping, or any other harsh notes whatever, price 7/-, and 8/- each; special Bandmasters, 10/- each. I also have a grand lot special contest birds, which excel in the deep bass, hollow, and laughing rolls, etc., price, 12/6 and 15/- each. These contest birds are of the purest blood Germany can boast of, and their song can be likened to a cascade of ever flowing melody. Anyone wanting to improve their strain of Rollers, or a Schoolmaster, or contest singer, should not miss this opportunity, as these birds are worth treble, and when stock is exhausted, offer cannot be repeated. Special Roller cabinet cages, with loose fronts, and folding doors made specially for my Rollers, 2/6 each; ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/6 each. I also hold an enormous stock of loud, free singing Hartz cocks, every one warranted in loud, full, vigorous song, price 5/- each, seven 31/0; Hartz hens, 2/- each, 3/6 couple, 16/- dozen. See following letters, with full name and address, and dates to each one:—"9, Rosby-place, Uddingston, Jan. 24.—Sir, please send following. The Leipzig Roller I had is giving every satisfaction, singing lovely, day and gaslight. Thanking you for selection, and honest dealing. Yours, David Wood." "Woodhouse, near Sheffield, January 20th. Sir,—Received Roller all right, and I wish to thank you for sending such a gem. He is now singing for all he is worth. Yours, J. Cooper." "132, Anerley Road, Anerley, London, January 18th. Sir,—Thanks very much for sending me such a lovely Canary. He sings all day long; I never thought of getting a bird to sing like he does, at the price. Yours, E. Lear." "29, Victoria Street, Tenby, January 16th. Sir,—Please send following. I am well pleased with Hartz cock, it is singing splendidly, and is more than I really expected for such a low price. Yours, T. Davies." "39, St. James' Street, Trafford Road, Salford, Jan. 12th. Sir,—Bird arrived safe, and am well satisfied with it. Thanking you very much for quick dispatch. Yours, T. Foster." "61, Wellington Street, Grimsby, January 10th. Sir,—Roller to hand, and I am more than satisfied with him. He was only unpacked ten minutes before he started singing. Thanking you for such a good bird. Your dealings are very honest. Yours, F. Gillespie." "Bray, Ireland, January 10th. Sir,—Birds to hand, and I am quite satisfied with them. The cock is a grand songster. He started singing shortly after arrival. Yours, E. O'Neill." "The Square, Aspley Guise, January 9th. Sir,—Roller arrived 'as fresh as a daisy,' beautifully packed. We are delighted with him. Many thanks. Yours, A. Evans." "22, Henry Street, Tyldesley, Manchester, January 7th. Sir,—Rollers arrived in good order, thanks for quick dispatch. Yours, G. Hilton." "24, Marsden Street, Kirkham, Preston, January 4th. Sir,—Roller you sent me has pleased very well. He is a champion. It is a pleasure to deal with such an honest man. Yours, Ed. Woods." The above letters which you will notice are all dated for January, 1910, are open to inspection at any time. Don't forget that all birds are safely and warmly packed (no matter how cold the weather) free of extra charge, and sent on full week's trial, solely at my own risk during the whole time, and money fully and freely refunded if every satisfaction not given. I am the sole importer of this strain of Roller, and all birds are stamped under wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and if any person would like to hear one sing, and cannot call at my place, I shall be pleased to send him one for a week, even if he does not desire to purchase, providing he will deposit cash with Editor of CAGE BIRDS until bird is returned. Inspection cordially invited; over 1,000 Roller cocks on view at all times, and fresh arrivals twice weekly. See British Bird advertisement.

10 1st, 3 2nd, and Specials, including gold medal, £3 cup (won outright), etc. This record was obtained by Miss Niall at this year's Christchurch and Ashburton shows, with a combined entry of 16 birds only. Miss N——, forwarding me catalogues for reference, writes: "All these exhibits were bred from your stock, or supplied by you direct." Such testimony of inherent quality for show and stock far outweighs references to own winners kept for own exhibition uses rather than for sale. Not being a regular exhibitor all birds I possess (except own breeders) are for absolute and immediate sale. Personally selected and unrelated pairs, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- upwards; single birds proportionately; few exhibition specimens, 20/- upwards. 250 specimens in all Yorkshire varieties now ready and fit. All cold-room bred, reared, and kept. All on approval, cash or deposit. Full season's price list sent on receipt of stamp for reply: Jonas Knight (30 years breeder of Yorkshires only), Allerton, Bradford, Yorkshire.

Much Better.

30, Wellmeadow Road, Hither Green, London, January 15th, 1910.—I fetched the birds from the station, almost as soon as they arrived, and so far as I can judge, they are in every way satisfactory. You packed them first rate, and much better than many. F. Kemp to W. Rudd.

Penton, Staffs, January 11, 1910.—I have received both the bird and cage safely. I am delighted with them. The bird whistles beautifully, and the cage looks charming. Your name shall have my best attention. W. D. Radford to W. Rudd.

Easy Payments by joining my Original Bird Club.

The first ever brought to the notice of fanciers; the first payment system, with its many objections, is double as old as some of those who claim so much for it. To use an old saying, it is as "old as the hills," but has neither their beauty nor usefulness.

W. RUDD, THE Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

L. and P.O.S. Annual Dinner.

A Successful Gathering.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society is our oldest Metropolitan Society, but it shows not the slightest sign of advanced age, and no symptoms of decrepitude. Its annual dinner (always a pleasing social function) was held as usual at the Horse Shoe Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, on Thursday, January 20th. Mr. George Crabb filled the chair with his customary distinction and authority, and the only bar to the complete enjoyment of everybody was the greatly regretted absence through indisposition of the genial J. W. Ramsden, the manager of the Palace Show, who has for so long been honourably associated with the work of the L. and P.O.S. Mr. Ramsden has not been in his best form for some months past, and he feared the heat of the room would upset him. Another notable absentee was Mr. Hodson, and the chairman's expressions of sorrow at the cause of both Messrs. Ramsden's and Hodson's absence were echoed by everyone at the gathering. Mr. H. E. Tringham made an energetic and courteous M.C. A capital programme of musical talent had been provided, and the catering requirements left nothing to be wished for. The menu was as follows:—

SOUPS.

Consomme Julienne. Thick Mock Turtle.

FISH.

Boiled Turbot. Lobster Sauce.
Devilled Whitebait.

ENTREE.

Sweetbread Pattics.

JOINTS.

Roast Sirloin of Beef, Horseradish,
Boiled Leg of Mutton, Caper Sauce.

VEGETABLES.

Brussels Sprouts, Mashed Turnips, Potatoes.

POULTRY.

Roast Turkey and Sausage, Chip Potatoes.

SWEETS.

Pears Bourdaloue, Charlotte Chantilly
Gelee aux Liqueur, Ices, Vanilla Wafers.

Cheese. Celery.

Dessert.

The gathering was throughout representative of all branches of the Fancy, and many visitors from other London Clubs put in an appearance.

Amongst those who were present we noticed: Mr. and Mrs. G. Crabb, T. Heath, F. Carl, J. Dobson, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Picard, G. H. Couzens, H. J. Pearce, Walter Lee, Miss Ings, Arthur Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. Palser, W. J. Cranfield, E. S. Thirsk, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Tringham, Fred Andrews, Mrs. Chapman, G. J. Warley, L. J. Richardson, R. J. Pretty, Mrs. Gale, W. Quantrell, Mrs. Harwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. Oldaker, Mr and Mrs. C. W. Law, H. Mitchener, Allen Silver, J. Hazell, A. Lazarus, Rowland Bamber, Mr. and Mrs. G. Mortlock, Miss J. Hoare, P. G. Mortlock, Mr. and Mrs. G. Ogle, J. E. Clark, B. A. Tadman, W. Kiesel, C. T. Maxwell, F. S. Matthes, W. Gilbert.

The proceedings opened with the usual loyal toasts, happily proposed by Mr. Crabb. This was quickly followed by the toast of "The L. and P.O.S." Mr. Crabb said it hardly looked like an L. and P.O. affair without their worthy friend, Mr. Ramsden. He felt they would all in his absence accord that gentleman a very high meed of praise for all the splendid work he had done for their society. The L. and P.O.S., he was proud to say, still survived through all the storm and stress of the Fancy, and their prospects were never so bright or hopeful. The finances were in a most satisfactory state. They had had a most active and useful year, and there was, he rejoiced to know, a considerable balance in the bank. One or two matters had loomed large before the members during the past year. The correspondence on Cinnamons had been carried on, and proved a most valuable contribution on that subject. One of their members, Dr. Galloway, had recently published a most valuable treatise on that subject, which he strongly recommended to their notice. Touching on the question as to whether there were not in existence too many societies catering for the needs of cage bird men, Mr. Crabb hedged himself by a recommendation to those societies who felt themselves superfluous to throw in their lot with the L. and P.O.S. Then there was the most serious question the British Bird Fancy had had to face, viz., the recent attack by the Society for Protection of Birds on the liberties of the bird keeper. The case was sub judice, and, therefore, he could not enlarge on that point, but he would refer all present to the fund started by CAGE BIRDS for the defence of the bird dealers prosecuted, and he urgently appealed to them to support it. Mr. Tringham responded briefly but felicitously. The society was founded, he said, in 1866, and some of the original members were present that evening. The society had an ambitious programme for the future, and had passed a most successful year. The engagement of Mr. Rd. Kearton, in especial, had proved a great success. Their joint show had proved a great success socially, their summer outing had passed off well, and at the present time no less than 143 members were on the rolls as fully paid up. The coming year would, he felt sure, be equally successful. He finally appealed to members to attend the meetings more regularly, and take greater interest in the society's transactions. In the absence of Mr. Ramsden, the toast of "The Fancy" was given with eclat by Mr. Couzens. Loud and prolonged applause testifying to the hearty popularity Mr. C. enjoys, greeted him on rising. The Fancy, he opined, consisted on the whole of a number of excellent sportsmen. The average cage bird exhibitor was a man who took his wins modestly and his defeats without whimpering. Might it always continue so! There were, of course, a small percentage who behaved otherwise, but they were in an almost invisible minority. Mr. Silver replied.—Mr. Matthes gave the toast of "The Ladies." It was unthinkable that any gathering of that kind could be held without representatives of the opposite sex. As fanciers, they found hen birds dull and unable to carry colour, but that was a reproach no one could level at the lady fancier or the fancier's wife. She was always bright and pleasant, anxious and willing to help her husband in his hobby, and though he was a married man, and therefore spoke in fear and trembling, he hoped the ladies would come in still larger numbers to their gatherings. Mr. Picard, who is nothing if not witty and entertaining, gave a drily humorous response. The esteemed secretary had last year given him the same toast to propose, wisely keeping all the best speakers for the other toasts. He supposed he had to reply for the ladies, because no one else was capable of such a task. One could not have too many ladies at such feasts, if it were only with the object of lightening up the dull clothes of the men. Who was it that told the novice that sweet lie, "Your bird is a much better bird than that horrid bird that won the prize"? Why, the novice's wife. Who was the first to congratulate him—(Tringham's voice: "And take my prize money") —(loud laughter). Mr. Mortlock proposed the toast of "The Visitors" in most appropriate terms, and Mr. Carl replied.

The proceedings concluded at a very reasonable hour with the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne. The performers need more than a word of praise. We are not musical critics, and can, therefore, only briefly mention the principal items: Miss Edith Cootes, "Green Isle of Erin," "Georgie in the Park"; Mr. Percy Mortlock, "Sergeant of the Line," "Johnny Ludlow"; Mr. Arthur Bolton, "Garden of Allah"; Mr. W. Putner, "Tax the Bachelor"; Mr. T. Edgar, "Rosamond," and "Come into the garden, Maud." The last-named was most enthusiastically received, and Mr. Edgar was decidedly a popular turn, whose engagement on another such affair should most certainly be secured.

The attendance list for 1909 was read, Messrs. W. Page and W. Sanders tieing for first place. Arising out of letters from Messrs. J. Marley and H. Rawes, it was moved and carried that a subscription list be opened for the purpose of assisting Messrs. Flowers and Preston to appeal against the recent magisterial decision, the money so subscribed to be sent to CAGE BIRDS. The result of the Crest and Crest-bred judging competition was as follows.—Champ.: R. L. Crisp, 22 points; amat.: W. Knight, 30; and Nov.: B. Thrower, 28 points. Silver medals were presented. The annual show balance-sheet duly audited, showing a loss of £2 4s. 5½d., was confirmed; also the annual balance-sheet, showing an income of £156 12s. 0½d., an expenditure of £132 13s. 0½d., with a cash balance of £23 19s. A vote of thanks was accorded to Messrs. W. Prance and A. W. Hart for gifts to the Association. It was unanimously agreed that the society's advertisement be again inserted in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. The following were elected judges:—The Young Bird Show, Messrs. R. L. Crisp and J. Robson for the Canary section, and C. Prior and Allen Silver for the British section; Annual Show, Messrs. T. Heath and J. Robson, Canaries, and H. Norman and Allen Silver Brit. They will be submitted to a final vote of the whole of the members. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Silver for a conditional gift of a 7s. 6d. silver medal for the best Wagtail at the annual show. The following gentlemen were elected officers for the London Federation of C.B.S.:—Vice-chair, R. P. Harper; trustees, A. C. Burn and J. Dewhurst; auditors, W. Mugford, and — Cook; secretary, P. Adamthwaite; delegates, A. W. Curtis and W. Sanders. The report of the council meeting of the Federation was adopted as read. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. P. Adamthwaite for the able manner in which he had carried out his duties as secretary of the Federation. Schedule for pair show on January 29th was drawn up. The meeting was then adjourned.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual meeting held January 13th, at the Horse and Jockey Hotel, when all the old officials were re-elected for the forthcoming year. We have had a very successful year, having increased the balance in hand. It was decided to have a supper at our club-room on the February meeting night, and if all members who were not present at this meeting will let me know by post that they are coming they will help us very much. I may say it is for members only, and it will be free.—W. RICHINSON, Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual meeting held at headquarters, Jan. 17th, Mr. Almond in the chair. Most of the members present spoke strongly against the Cage Bird Union; in fact, not one had anything to say in its favour, and after some very heated discussion we finally agreed to leave this body, as we consider it of no use to the Fancy, seeing that District No. 1 is ruled by one man who looks after any fancier who happens to make a slight mistake but forgets that he is himself an offender by showing common Canaries in Mule classes. We think it full time to sever our connection, and therefore leave the Union for good.—GEO. BUCK, sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held on January 12th, when there was a moderate attendance. Mr. W. Theobald presided. The hon. sec. and treas. presented the balance-sheet, which showe a balance in hand of 21s. The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. W. Theobald; chairman, Mr. G. Grant; vice-chairman, Mr. A. Harvey; hon. auctioneer, Mr. T. H. Boulter; hon. auditors, Messrs. T. J. King and J. H. Boulter; assistant hon. sec., Mr. W. Pounsett; hon. sec. and treasurer, Mr. A. S. Treasure. An attractive programme has been arranged, and the season commences with a pair show on February 2nd, followed by monthly lectures, first feather shows, washing demonstrations, etc. Annual open show will be held on the usual dates, November 2nd and 3rd.—A. S. TREASURE, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND B.C.

The 21st Annual General Meeting was held on Jan. 15 in Nixon's Hotel, Glasgow, Pres. C. Hunter in the chair. The financial statement was considered highly satisfactory, as there is a substantial balance on the right side. The classification and the number of birds which should compete for the cups was discussed, and it was agreed that they remain as formerly. Office-bearers for 1910 were elected as follows:— Pres., Mr. P. Thom; Vice-Pres.'s, Messrs. A. T. Quail and J. M'Nicol; Committee, Messrs. J. Lappin, H. P. Hutchens, H. Cougan, G. Henderson, W. Strawbridge, D. M. Cooper, J. Montgomery, W. Woods, T. M. Scott, R. Rennie, and A. M. Lennie; Auditors, Messrs. W. Hutcheson and C. Hunter; Secy., G. Smart. The following new members were enrolled:—Messrs. J. Young, J. Sheppard, F. Paling, J. Livingston, J. Cougan, A. Saunderson, and J. Forsyth. There will be a show of Matched Pairs at next meeting and a medal for most points and a number of Specials for all classes will be given.—A notice of time that judging starts will be given in CAGE BIRDS on Feb. 5.—GEO. SMART, Secretary.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The third annual tea and concert in connection with the distribution of prizes took place on Jan. 18th, when a good number of members and friends sat down to an excellent tea provided by the ladies. The tables were tastefully decorated with flowers, and all were agreed that the tea was one of the best the society has so far enjoyed. The Chairman for the concert was the Rev. G. Hale Wallis, and his opening remarks were much appreciated. The following artistes sustained a capital programme throughout: Soprano, Miss L. Dixon; contralto, Miss V. Barrow; tenor, Mr. W. Gardner; bass, Mr. E. Ludlam; elocutionist, Miss E. Beard; humorist, Mr. W. Berry; accompanist, Miss A. M. Cruise. Each was in very fine form, and the items were enthusiastically received. Miss Dixon gave a splendid start with "Idle Words," and Miss Barrow was heard to good effect in the rendering of "My Dear Soul." One of the tit-bits of the evening was the recitals of Miss E. Beard, an elocutionist of great promise. The prizes were presented by Mrs H. Hill to the successful members, during the interval in the programme, and a vote of thanks for her kindness was proposed by Mr. E. Suddards. The winners of the valuable prizes were Messrs. Laycock, W. Stables, L. Briggs, J. Northrop, J. Farrar, G. White, and W. Cruise in the Champion section; in the Novice section, Messrs. E. Dinsdale, F. Gelder, C. Walker, Wilkinson Bros., W. Greenwood, W. Brooke and Baldwin Bros.; and in the extra Novice classes Messrs. Wilman and Barker and W. Walker. The Secretary gave his annual report, this showing the society to be in a healthy condition. He complimented the members on their success at the shows. Three of the Novice members have again won the Union Novice medals, two in Yorkshires and the other leading with a good number of points in the Norwich section. The proceedings terminated with the audience singing "God Save the King."—H. HILL, Secretary.

Twitterings.

Our first venture was a great success, which is very gratifying, writes Mr. W. Geddis, hon. secretary of the Larne and Dis. C.B.A. show.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. J. Nicholson. It is now 6, Coronation Street, Grasslot, Maryport, Cumberland.

Bathgate report credits Patterson with winning 3rd prize in the A.O.V. Border Fancy, whereas it should be Bremner.—W. BREMNER (Alloa).

We hear that at the City and Suburban A.C.B.'s pair show the fine entry of 137 has been obtained, thus there should be a treat to-day (Saturday) for the visitors.

It was I who won 3rd in Selling Class (30s.), also commended in the Norwich Hen Class, at the Llanelly Show, writes Mr. G. T. Jones (Brecon).

Kindly note that Mr. Jeffreys, 209, York Road, Battersea, is now secretary of the South-West London C.B.S. for the ensuing year, writes Mr. W. Lilley, the late secretary.

We regret to hear that Mr. Hopkins, of the well-known firm of Messrs. Hopkins and Allsopp (Swindon) is down with a serious illness, and we wish him a speedy recovery.

Kindly note that I have been elected secretary of the Burnley and Dis. C.B.F.S., so all correspondence should in future be addressed to me, writes Mr. R. Fowler, 21, Pear Street, Burnley, Lancashire. We have fixed our show date for October 6th and 7th.

It is imperative, writes Mr. W. H. Manley, hon. secretary of the Bristol C.B.S., that all members should attend our next meeting on February 2nd, at the City Hotel, Wine Street. The balance-sheet will be read, and the officers for the ensuing year elected.

Our show dates are fixed as follows:—First feather show June 4th, young stock July 23rd, and annual November 19th, write Messrs. Forse and Son, hon. secretaries, Leyton and Dis. C.B.A. Will secretaries kindly note same to avoid clashing?

At the Hyson Green (Notts) Show I easily won the premier special for the year 1909, by 59 points, and as the society has upwards of 80 members, I think such a win is worthy of mention, writes Mr. Robert Holmes (Nottingham).

We are holding a special meeting on Saturday, January 29th, in the clubroom, writes Mr. W. Reid, hon. secretary, Sunderland C.B.A., to consider some very important business, and I would like all members to attend if they possibly can.

Visitors to the Palace should make a special point of seeing the "Ever Ready" bracket exhibit. This handy little appliance, which has attained such popularity in the Fancy, will be shown on the stall in actual use. See advertisement in "Appliances."—(ADVT.)

My winning British Goldie was claimed at the late Bathgate Show at catalogue price, £2 15s., writes Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart). Since it came into my possession it has done well on the show bench, having won three firsts, one 2nd, and two 3rds in six attempts. I wish the plucky purchaser success.

A splendid improved seed-crushing mill reaches us from Mr. W. Rudd, the noted bird-specialist, of Norwich. It meets a long-felt want, inasmuch as a moveable plate makes it possible to easily crush the seed to different degrees of fineness. This machine, which is very strong and well-made, should have a ready sale at the low price at which it is being advertised.

I am sorry to say that we are losing from the association Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, who are leaving England to seek fortune in Queensland, Australia, at the end of February, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. secretary of the City and Suburban A.C.B. No one deplores this severance more than myself, for with their departure are removed two of my right hand assistants, whom it will be extremely difficult (after four years) to replace. By every member they are highly esteemed for their lofty principles and unostentatious manner. We wish them the best of good fortune.

Liverpool to Crystal Palace.

Will anyone in the Liverpool district who cares to join a saloon party to the Crystal Palace Show please write to Mr. V. H. Deacons, 21a, Arcade, Exchange Station, Liverpool?

PRIZE MONEY PAID.

Scottish National; Larne.

I was very pleased to see the photo of my birds in your Birthday Number of January 15th. It was No. 7 picture, but I find the wrong name was given, viz., Mr. Hawkes (Chislehurst), instead of being Mr. J. Harmer, of Hawkhurst. [We regret this confusion of names.—EDITOR.]

As I am thinking of opening a branch business in the spring, I am reluctantly compelled to clear my stock of Norwich Plainheads got together regardless of cost, from some of the best strains in the country, as I shall not be able to attend to them, being away most of my time, writes Mr. John J. Brain (Glastonbury).

The Aberdeen O.S.'s financial statement for the year ended December 29th last reveals a healthy and creditable state of affairs, for despite the fact that entries at the annual show failed to meet the prize money, there is still a cash balance in hand. The secretary, Mr. J. Bryson and the other officials are to be complimented.

A new Cage Bird, etc., Society has been formed at Wellington (Salop), writes Mr. A. C. Brotherhood. They are holding an open show on February 10th and 11th. They are going to cancel no classes, and pay prize-money in full (no half prize-money). They have several valuable cups to be won outright. I have been engaged to judge the cage birds.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. COCKS (Peterborough).

It is with deep feelings of regret, writes Mr. Mr. Alf. Rowles (Peterborough), that I have to report the death of Mr. Jonathan Cocks, of Peterborough, who passed away somewhat suddenly on January 23rd, at the age of 76 years. I believe he was the oldest agricultural seed traveller in the country, and was father of Mr. S. L. Cocks, the noted British bird exhibitor. I feel sure all fanciers who know Mr. S. L. Cocks will deeply sympathise with him and his family in their sad and sudden bereavement.

Mr. R. BLACKMORE (Barnstaple).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. Geo. Dix (Barnstaple), that I have to chronicle the demise of my old and respected friend, Mr. Robert Blackmore, of Barnstaple, who was widely known as a breeder and exhibitor of the Belgian Canary. Mr. Blackmore had been ailing for some little time, but his death on January 16th came as a shock to the town and to all who knew him. Mr. Blackmore had been a breeder of Belgians for upwards of 30 years, having won gold and silver medals, besides other trophies, with his Belgians. He was a fancier who would have the best, and paid fancy prices for good birds, which he has said he did not mind if he could get the stamp of bird he required. Being a neighbour, I have spent some scores of hours with him discussing the pros and cons respecting the Belgian. I well remember his favourite, a huff cock; it was a bird of grand style, and it would bring its head nearly to the perch. You would often see Mr. B.'s cheery smile, with a merry twinkle in his eye, and he would exclaim: "Ah! he's a good 'un." He was in his 73rd year. I am sure all who knew him, and especially those who have bought birds from him, will join in heartfelt sympathy with the family and relatives.

Kindly mention that I have had to resign the secretaryship of the West Bromwich and Dis. C.B.S. owing to pressure of private business, writes Mr. T. Duffield. In future all communications relating to this society should be addressed to Mr. J. H. Jennings, 123, Victoria Road, Handsworth, Birmingham, or to the assistant secretary, Mr. F. H. Viles, 1, Warstone Terrace, Handsworth.

If you feel inclined to have an interesting chat over the correct pairing of birds for the coming season, visit the City and Suburban's Pair show to-day (Saturday) from 2 till 8 p.m. There you will find splendid material for discussion. The Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Marylebone, is five minutes' walk from Baker Street (Metropolitan) and Regent's Park (Bakerloo) Railway Stations, and Baker Street 'buses pass the corner of the street.—(ADVT.)

That enterprising and go-ahead society, the Liverpool O.S., despite a formidable loss upon the annual exhibition, is able to show a balance of £6 15s. 10d. to the good on the year's working, which has been a full and strenuous one, and included the capturing of the second prize in the society championship competition at the last Horticultural Show. The secretary, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, and his fellow officials are entitled to take high credit for this most satisfactory result.

The January issue of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—forms the first number of a new series, which bids fair to more than sustain its reputation. Articles by Mr. H. Willford ("My Wilderness Aviary"), Mr. H. Goodchild, M.B.O.U. (on the Scottish National Show), and Mr. R. Suggitt ("Preserving Gentles for Winter Use"), will be found supplemented by others equally interesting and useful, and there are, besides, a number of capital illustrations and notes.

From Mr. Enoch Tams (Church Street, Longton), we have received a magnificent illustrated price-list of cages, cage fittings, and all bird-room requisites, together with seeds, insectivorous foods, etc. Mr. Tams stocks everything the bird-keeper can desire, and a glance at his prices shows that he combines the best of quality with the lowest possible charges. Our readers should send a postcard to Mr. Tams asking for a copy of this fine price-list; it will be forwarded post-free if they mention CAGE BIRDS when applying.

Result of Competitions for 1909-10.

Hoyland Show on January 22nd brought the list of Union shows to a conclusion, and all the various competitions for the season. The competition has been decidedly keen in several of them, as will be seen by the list of points published below, and it has meant a great struggle from first to last for some of the leading exhibitors to carry off the trophies which they had set their minds on to win. A pleasing feature of the shows has been the great amount of entries that have been made this year, in comparison with other years, and this has been maintained right up to the last three shows, with very few exceptions. We have also had the pleasure of seeing two previous Union records swept by the board, the first was accomplished by Bradford City, and this, along with other records, was afterwards beaten with a magnificent entry by the Halifax Society, who are to be congratulated upon their pluck and determination, and the business-like methods they adopted in order to obtain this result. The Shackleton Trophy was undecided right up to the last show, and the result eventually turned out as follows:—1st, J. Bailey, 287 points; 2nd, Ogden Bros., 286 points; 3rd, W. H. Shackleton, 236 points; 4th, H. H. Towers, 218 points. "Ramsden's Prizes": 1st, J. Bailey, 287 points; 2nd, Ogden Bros., 286 points. In the H. W. Naylor Cup Competition: 1st, J. Bailey, 212 points; 2nd, Ogden Bros., 200 points; 3rd, W. H. Shackleton, 177 points; 4th, H. H. Towers, 168 points. CAGE BIRDS Amateur Competition. 1st, H. Hill, 96 points, (25s.); 2nd, T. Bentley, 85 points (20s.); 3rd, P. Drake and Son, 76 points (15s.). The following are also winners of cash specials in the same competition at each Union show:—H. Hill, T. Bentley, P. Drake and Son, W. Beaumont, J. Chippendale, J. Helliwell, S. Lingley, J. Lane, G. White, and W. Laycock, 10s. each; A. Wright and Son, 8s.; H. Charlesworth, 6s.; W. Blakey and J. Waterworth, 5s. each; E. Clegg, F. Townsend, and A. Radley, 4s. each. In the Union Novice Gold Medal Competition the following are the medal winners in the Yorkshire section:—1st, J. Thomas, 184 points; 2nd, T. W. Turton, 118 points; 3rd, T. Elsegood, 101 points; 4th, E. Dinsdale, 98 points; 5th and 6th, tie, W. Stables and C. E. Hall, 92 points each; 7th, A. Whitley, 86 points; 8th, L. C. Casey, 82 points; 9th, E. J. Shepherd, 73 points; 10th, O. Priestley, 67 points; 11th, J. Hutton, 65 points; 12th, F. Firth, 63 points, held in abeyance pending decision of the Council re an objection. Runners up: S. Haigh 62 points, F. Clark 58 points, A. Bennett 52 points, C. H. Greenwood 52 points. Norwich Section: 1st, J. Naylor, 201 points; 2nd, J. Horsfield, 108 points; 3rd, W. H. Ball, 84 points; 4th, W. Plowright, 72 points. "Ramsden's Novice Specials", 1st, T. W. Turton, 118 points; 2nd, J. Horsfield, 111 points; winner of Mr. H. H. Tower's prize, £1 1s., for most points in Yorkshire Novice Classes, J. Thomas. Most points by a Union member in Novice Cinnamon Marked Classes at Union shows, 10s 6d., E. Clegg. Winner of Mr. F. Hammond's prize, 10s. 6d., for most points in Norwich Novice Classes, J. Naylor. For most entries in same classes, and not winning a novice medal, 10s. 6d., Mr. S. Heap. Note: all the above points are taken from the catalogues, and if any of the interested parties find them incorrect, will they please notify me immediately, when the same can be rectified. THE FUND TO DEFEND THE BRITISH BIRD FANCY.

In case there should be some among those who read this notice who are unacquainted with the facts upon which the above appeal is being made, we may repeat that the Society for the Protection of Wild Birds is seeking to establish that no person may be in possession of a recently-taken British bird if that said bird is included in the list of protected species for the district in which the said person resides. Whether the bird was legally taken in a district wherein it is not protected they contend does not affect the case.

The society recently brought a test case against two London bird-dealers (Messrs. Preston and Flowers). The case came before Mr. Biron, the magistrate sitting at Old Street Police Court, and he arrived at the decision that the society's view of the matter was correct, and he condemned the defendants in costs.

The extreme seriousness of this decision will be at once apparent. It means that in protected districts (and they comprise practically all the thickly-populated areas and towns in the British Isles) everyone who keeps a newly-taken British bird, and every dealer who exposes one for sale, can be prosecuted and fined.

We, however, have it on high legal authority that if this decision of Mr. Biron be taken to the High Courts there is every likelihood of it being set aside, and in response to a request, have opened a fund to enable this course to be adopted, and the legal aspect of the question to be adequately thrashed out, as the defendants in this test case have not the means to carry the matter further, the estimated cost being from £50 to £60.

The need of funds is urgent, however, so do not delay; send your contribution at once, addressed to Mr. Geo. Crabb, c.o. the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and state clearly in your letter that it is intended as a donation towards the "Preston and Flowers Defence Fund." Mr. Crabb is the well-known gentleman who for so many years was chairman of the London and Provincial O.S., and has very kindly consented to act as treasurer.

Here is the third list of subscriptions to come to hand:—Messrs. Geo. and A. Brown (Slater Street, London), £1 1s.; West London F.A., 10s.; W. Gore (Birmingham), 10s.; S. Young (Crewkerne), 10s.; "Heskin," 5s.; Leeds Linnet F.A., 5s.; Three Tunns Bird Club (Uxbridge), 5s.; Rev. H. A. Soames (Bromley), 5s.; Larkhall C.B.A., 5s.; National Quality Linnet S.A. (Blackburn), 5s.; Ardwick and Dist. C.B.S., 5s.; J. Bates (Hounslow), 5s.; T. Heath (London, S.W.), 5s.; Raunds and Dist. F.S., 4s.; Coventry Godiva C.B.S., 4s.; "A Hybrid Lover," 4s.; Keighley and Dist. C.B.S., 3s.; R. Stapleton (London, S.E.), 2s. 6d.; H. Jinks (Sheffield), 2s, 6d.; Fred Allen (Hull), 2s.; Chas. K. (Gorleston-on-Sea), 1s.; E. Rowe (Chatteris), 1s.; Chas. Dart (Plymouth), 1s.; and H. Tomkinson (Doncaster), 6d. This makes a total of £6 1s. 6d., and with the two lists previously published brings the aggregate to £20 2s. 1d.

We had hoped this week to have been in the position to make a full announcement as to the progress of the case, but circumstances have arisen which render it necessary to hold this over until our next issue. Then, too, we hope to be able to publish a list of subscriptions which will bring the total well within sight of the sum which it is estimated this appeal may cost, viz., £50 to £60. Many societies have written stating their intention to take the matter up in a practical manner.

I trust every British bird fancier who has read the most able letter by Mr. Trower in last week's CAGE BIRDS, will be infused with fresh vigour and energy to defeat this dastardly attempt to debar the humble of the only enjoyment which is suitable to their position in life. I endorse Mr. Trower's argument and reasoning that were this particular arrogant society to pay more attention to the horrible cruelties practised by the so-called "gentry" in the methods of seeking "sport" in shooting poultry-reared pheasants, badger-baiting, and deer hunting, then could we recognise the title of the N.S.P.C.A., but while they attack poor men they cannot claim to be anything else than part of the machinery which to-day makes one law for the exalted and one for lowly. Seeing that most of their "officers" are ex-butlers, coachmen, and "poor relations" to some of the badger-baiting fraternity, it becomes almost a serious matter that there should be some test to decide their fitness for their appointment. I would go still further re Mr. Trower's suggestion as to the forming of a league at the Crystal Palace, and say, why not have a "Preston and Flowers Box," or boxes, and appoint stewards to tackle the many visitors personally, for I feel sure that there are many British and Canary fanciers who are so shy that they would rather drop sovereigns in a box than send it. Remember, amateur bird-catching aspirants, that if you go for a day's catching to an unprotected town, under this decision of Mr. Biron, immediately you set foot in your own protected area you are liable to prosecution for unlawful possession. So open your pockets to defeat these "kill-sports" and their feudal methods, and let us have English methods for British fanciers, and one treatment alike for the aristocrat and commoner.—H. J. HAWES.

[We are making arrangements to have a collecting box for this Defence Fund placed upon CAGE BIRDS stall at the Crystal Palace Show; but we question whether the Palace authorities would sanction the importunity of visitors in the interests of the fund, as suggested by Mr. Hawes. We trust, however, that fanciers and other bird-loving visitors to the show will swell the Fund to the best of their ability, and that by the help of this collecting box the still considerable balance necessary to enable the appeal to be carried into effect will be subscribed. We will give full details in our next issue.—EDITOR.]

The results of all our recent competitions (except the Literary) will be announced in our next issue.

A NOVEL SCHEME.

At the last meeting of the Lancaster Primrose C.B.A., the date of the annual show was discussed, but not definitely decided upon; also what judge should be selected, this being a heated question. There has been a lot of controversy in the Fancy Press, as to which judge goes for the right type and standard, so it was decided to nominate three judges—Messrs. W. Mundell (Bradford), Battye (Huddersfield), and A. Wellings (Prescot)—and to await the decision of fanciers (intending exhibitors or readers of CAGE BIRDS), the judge securing most votes to be asked to officiate. Everyone may vote on a postcard, giving the judge's name they fancy, and his (or her) name as a guarantee of good faith. All votes must send before February 1st to me.—J. H. NAYLER, secretary, 6, Mary Street, Lancaster.

[This scheme has certainly the merit of novelty; we do not know, however, whether the secretary has obtained the permission of Messrs. Mundell, Battye and Wellings to put forward their names; further, we doubt if an "election" such as this could possibly prove anything, for we question whether many readers would be found to vote.—EDITOR.]

CANARY QUERIES.

Bald-necked Hen.

T. H. D.—Did the bird complete her moult last autumn? If this baroness is of only two months' standing, it is quite likely that the moult was suspended when near the finish. It is also possible that matters may right themselves as soon as the weather gets a little warmer and settled, but if the bird is no longer a youngster, there is a great probability of the disfigurement being permanent. Keep her in a comfortable place, not necessarily overheated, but in a cosy and equable temperature, quite free from draughts, and extreme variations. Search the cage thoroughly to be quite sure there are no red mites about, and keep it strewn with clean gritty sand. Allow bird to bathe freely if not affected by chill afterwards. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape seed as staple, and three times a week give a small piece of bread and milk, slightly dusted once each week with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and then sprinkled with a little soft sugar and gold of pleasure seed. On the other two occasions use the sugar and seed only. On the alternating days give a spray of watercress, if available or a morsel of ripe banana. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of lemon juice every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. Moisten the bare skin twice a week with warm olive oil, but avoid soiling the surrounding plumage. Continue treatment for a month.

After a Change.

T. Foyle.—As you say, the bird's illness dates from the time you moved her into a clean cage from one which was infected with red mites, I suspect the change may have something to do with the illness. Is the cage of the same pattern as the previous one, or did you move her from a box cage to an open wire one, and is the cage in a different position, or had any birds recently died in it? The answers to these queries might throw some light on the matter. In the absence of such knowledge I can only advise you to see that the cage is quite free from draughts and extremes of heat and cold. Also keep red mites at bay, and see that cage and perches are scrupulously clean and strewn with clean gritty sand regularly. Do not allow it to hang near or above any burning light in the evenings. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together, and every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or plain biscuit with four drops of sherry and two of cod-liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a few grains of hemp and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give twenty drops of whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together.

About Feeding and Breeding.

J. T. F.—Your cages and aviary seem to be situated to the best advantage as far as one can tell from the sketch of the room. The method of feeding leaves but little room for improvement, but you must vary it a little differently now to begin to get the birds ready for breeding. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and twice a week on the alternating days give the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp and inga. Once a week give half a teaspoonful of the food you use, and sprinkle it with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. About a fortnight hence begin to give the condition food twice a week, and at the beginning of March again increase it and give either the mixed seed or soft food—each one alternately—every second day, alternately with the rape seed. If there are any birds that appear backward, add an extra pinch of gold of pleasure seed every second day, and give one or two tender young dandelion leaves daily. Do not mate the birds until the end of March or first week in April, according to the weather, and do not mate them until they are ready, irrespective of time or reason. The matings you suggest are quite correct. May good luck attend ye! You have set yourself an excellent ideal in aiming at producing birds like those portrayed on our last coloured plate of Yorkshires. Get CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL when ready, and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. each, post free from our Manager, and you need not go far wrong.

Bald and Hearty.

Esperance.—First of all carefully examine the cage for red mites as frequently advised in these columns, and if any are found, take drastic steps to thoroughly eradicate them. Matters will then probably right themselves with the baldness of the cock, and all you need do further is to moisten the place twice a week for a month with warm olive oil, but avoid soiling the surrounding plumage. The wing or tail feather of a small bird may be used to apply it. If no mites are found, treat it as advised to "T.H.D." in this issue. The hen is doubtless a victim of too generous feeding. Put her on a diet of plain canary seed only as a staple for a few weeks, and limit the supply to a small teaspoonful a day, being careful not to forget the daily supply. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and at the same time reduce the canary seed supply by the same amount. Give a good spray of watercress daily if available, or a morsel of banana three times a week when green food cannot be obtained. Keep a supply of clean gritty sand in cage regularly. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and during the following week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

"Doddering" Crests.

Beaten.—I am not quite clear about what you call sitting violently shaking on the perch. If it is a kind of convulsive shaky movement of the head and neck, I should suspect that the bird was blind, in which case you can do absolutely nothing for her. Examine her to see if this surmise is correct. Then it may be an occasional jerking and twitching of the tail and hinder parts of body, in which case it is simply an effect of constipation. Keep it in a cosy part of the room, not necessarily a very warm one, but where it is as free as possible from variations, and also bright, airy, and not cold. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape twice a week, and on two other days a small piece of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. On each of the remaining days give a spray of watercress or other green food when obtainable in fit condition, or, as a substitute, a morsel of ripe banana. In the drinking water give half a teaspoonful of fluid magnesia every second day for a week, and on the alternate day six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid. Do not allow the bird to bathe until better. The crest-bred cock has probably had a bad chill in some way, and from what you say about the room I can only imagine it is from too free bathing, unless a window has been left open some time for his benefit (?). All birds cannot withstand cold bathing alike any more than all humans can. Treat him the same as the hen in the matter of heat and position. In addition to staple, give half a teaspoonful of rape every second day, and each alternate day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk, with sugar and seed as above, and a scrap of banana three times a week. Give the fluid magnesia for two consecutive days, and afterwards twenty drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and paregoric, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week; every second day for the next week, then miss a week, and repeat again in same order. Do not allow him to bathe until better. Shall be glad to hear how they are in a month.

Ruffled and Sneezes.

Forester.—Look into the bird's surroundings, and see if it is not somewhat exposed to chill or draughts, and also see that it is not allowed to hang near or above a burning light in the evenings. Increase the diet a little above the winter standard, by giving a half-teaspoonful of summer rape every second day in addition to the staple of plain canary seed. On the alternate days give twice each week a morsel of bread and milk, sprinkled with a little soft sugar, and a few grains of a mixture of gold of pleasure seed and inga. On each of the remaining days give a little green food when in fit condition for use. Keep the cage and perches scrupulously clean, see there are no red mites, and supply clean gritty sand regularly. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and for the rest of the next week give twenty drops of whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three. For another week after this give six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Two in Distress.

Two Barrel Organs.—Am afraid from what you say that the birds are more familiar with suffering and length of days than you seem to give them credit for. Keep them rather on the warm side, but do not overdo it, and overheat them. Still, see they are snug and comfortable, and quite away from any sense of chilliness, and, of course, keep them as regular as possible, and quite out of reach of draughts. Do not let them be near or above burning lights in the evening. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give each bird half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately about five days a week, and twice a week the same quantity of crushed sponge cake, or plain powdered biscuit, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. Give a spray of watercress when available three or four times a week; at other times substitute a scrap of ripe banana. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water give five drops each of glycerine, oxymel of squills, paregoric, and chlorodyne, every second day for a fortnight. Then report result, and I will advise further if necessary. Any good chemist will supply you with a small quantity of the mixture; equal parts of ingredients named, and so save you having to buy large bottles of each.

Sib-breeding.

"Shot."—You omit to say whether the buff ticked cock you mated with the Sib hen last season was also a Sib-bred bird. If it was I should imagine one of the birds was very weak in Sib qualities, as their progeny shows there is still a very large proportion of green blood in one or both of them, which is just what Sib breeding aims at obliterating. It is quite as important to have the cocks Sib bred as the hens; a point which you may have overlooked. Unless you are sure the yellow Norwich hen you mention has also been Sib bred, I would not advise you to make the experiment. On the contrary, to go on working off the few birds you have, I would advise you to get, if possible, a clear yellow cock, brother to the hen that died, and mate with the buff marked hen; a clear buff hen, own sister to the hen that died, and mate with the slightly marked yellow cock; and the buff ticked cock you could either pair with the yellow green, or with the clear yellow Norwich, to obtain material as fresh blood for the Sib strain the following season. The latter I should rather prefer, and leave the yellow green out of the Sib strain at this stage, as showing too much affinity for the green blood. The fact of the Norwich hen not being so typical as the other is of comparatively little moment, as typical qualities are not of paramount importance in Sib breeding.

Brevities.

Cause of Death (E. H.).—Thanks for letter. Sorry that after so much improvement the bird should have been seized with sudden death. Only a post-mortem could have shown the real cause of this, though I suspect it was an apoplectic seizure, and you could do nothing to prevent it, or to cure it when it occurred.

Roller not Singing (A Reader).—I really cannot gather from your note whether the bird shows any signs of illness. Is the dark appearance you refer to around the vent on the skin or on the feathers? Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not better write again, and give more particulars. For staple food give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape, and twice each week half a teaspoonful of hemp. On two other days give a bit of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid for a day or two.

Mating (A. B. Ginner).—It is very difficult to advise you from your description as you both say the bird is very good and bred from typical plainheads, and that it looks just like a crest-bred, and you omitted to say whether the bird is a yellow or buff. I should say it is a buff, and probably is a reversion to a former cross. Whether you should really use it in the breeding cage at all, seeing that you are anxious to breed only high-class Norwich, it is impossible to say without seeing the bird and knowing more about its pedigree. If you do use it you would get the best results from mating it with a typical plainhead yellow hen, about the standard size, and with very short close feathers, inclined to bairiness rather than otherwise, and with as little as possible behind the perch. It should also be rather short on leg, but not squatty.

Egg Food Substitute (Can-Can).—Yes, either cod liver oil, or cod liver oil and malt, puppy biscuits, form an excellent substitute for egg food. But do not use any brand containing meat. I do not think it would be best to moisten them with milk instead of water, because there is the risk of the mixed food turning sour and setting up diarrhœa, besides which the biscuits contain quite a sufficiency of nourishing pabulum in themselves. The best way to prepare the food is to break up the dry biscuit into pieces in a saucer, cover with boiling water, and allow to stand until quite soft. Then drain off all the surplus moisture with a little pressure, and stir into a crumbly mass with a fork. If necessary, add a little dry-powdered biscuit to absorb moisture, and bring all to a crumbly consistency. Cut the linseed out of the mixed seed, and reduce the quantity given by one-half.

Dull and Mopes (C.H.H.).—It is doubtless living at peace with itself and the world. It is taking life easy, and laying on fat; and it may get too lazy to brace up when required. In addition to the staple of plain Canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and twice a week on the alternate days give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed, and on each of the remaining days each week give a fair sized spray of watercress, or young leaf of dandelion, whenever the latter can be obtained in good condition, or, in lieu of either of these, a scrap of ripe banana. Continue this feeding for a month, and discontinue all other items you have been giving which are not mentioned here. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, every second day for a week, and the following week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Loss of Plumage (H. J. Rouse).—I am still of opinion that red mite are the cause of the trouble. Your letter seems to infer that you examined the bird for the insects. You should now examine the structure of the cage, and the place where it hangs. With a pin or stiff bristle carefully probe between the joints of the door, and every joint, crack, or small hole, scraping the dust, etc., on to a piece of white paper; then you will probably find the objects of your search. In that case deal with the cage thoroughly, as frequently advised here, and pay similar attention to the place where cage hangs. After this soak a few quassia chips overnight in the bathing water twice a week for a time. The frequent egg-laying may be due to overheating, or over-indulgence in stimulating foods, or both, but as you are quite silent on this point you had better write again, and say how you have been feeding. Meantime, feed on plain canary only, with a good spray of watercress daily, and give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for two days.

Seed Samples and Diarrhœa (J. P. C.).—I suppose the trouble is symptomatic of diarrhœa, and the seeds are most likely the cause. Give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb, in each ounce of drinking water daily for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for the remainder of week. Meantime, get a better sample of seed, and matters will right themselves. No. 1 (rape) is very good, but is probably new, and requires some months' proper storage to make it excellent for use. No. 2 (rape) is a mixture, probably, and a hot acrid sample that is best avoided. No. 3 is a so-called rape; I do not profess to know what species it represents. It is quite cool, and may be good for birds. No. 1 (canary) is quite fair in size, bright, and clean, and fair in quality, but bordering on mediocrity. No. 2 (canary) is very small, contains a lot of extraneous matter, and is decidedly poor. No. 3 (canary) is still smaller than No. 2, and contains a lot of badly ripened seed in addition.

Buff to Buff (Novice).—If the birds' points are as stated in your letter, and you do not wish to get fresh stock for mating, you would do quite right to mate these two buffs. This should give a perceptible increase in size, and if the young should show any tendency to coarseness you must correct this next season by getting a good yellow or two with short and fine feathers, plenty of rich natural colour, to pair up with the young, and do not repeat the double buff experiment with any of these young.

Mate for Border (Will Wimble).—You certainly might have seen it stated that one could get even-marked birds from a green and ticked pair, but in such case, you want to know something of the birds' predecessors as a very great deal depends upon how the green was bred. A green that was bred from a mating of two variegated birds is generally the one to depend upon for these results. I take it from your remarks that this is the result you would like to aim at, and in that case I would advise a clear buff hen bred from an even-marked strain as a mate for the Border cock. If such a bird is not available you may have a very slightly wing-ticked hen, but choose the least possible amount of marking, and insist on the bird coming from a known even-marked strain.

Supposed Asthma (T. D.).—Am inclined to think the supposed asthma merely the results of exposure to draughts or extremes of heat and cold, and unless these causes are removed you will be lucky if you do not find it rapidly becoming much worse. Keep it in a fairly equable temperature, and quite free from draughts. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. If mated at the proper time there is practically no risk of the cock taking the complaint, but if the ailment is at all pronounced or troublesome the bird is certainly the worse for breeding with, inasmuch as none but perfectly healthy birds should be allowed to reproduce their kind.

Very Vague (Joseph Alger).—Sorry, but I must ask you to at least tell me how the birds appear to be affected, as this time you merely tell me what variety you keep, and how you feed them, and then say you cannot give more information as to their illness, that remark being absolutely all the evidence I have that the birds are ill. Meantime, as your feeding is bad put the birds on the following dietary. Staple food, plain canary only. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and on two other days a small piece of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar. Three times a week a spray of watercress or leaf of dandelion, if it can be procured in good condition. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a small pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and on the alternate days six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid.

Goldfinch for Muling.

Silex.—I think your bird ought certainly to prove a muler. He will come into breeding condition in due course, if well fed. Don't forget that the Goldie is naturally a late breeder, May being the month he selects to "keep house" in. House-moulted birds come into breeding condition earlier than those in field plumage. Feed your bird on the following lines: This is the seed mixture I am using at present for my own Goldies; teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower, safflower, summer rape, and charlock half-part each. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure and coraflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads, are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible).

The Eternal Sex Problem.

Brookfield.—You are quite right, unfortunately; many hen Linnets are bought as cocks. The best guide for the novice is to choose a bird with a good edging of white to the tail feathers, and which has the white on the flight (wing) feathers extending right back to the quill (shaft), and white underneath the wing as well as on top. The hens are grey in colour, and heavily streaked with markings on the breast; the cock has a nut-brown back and wing butts, and signs of red are to be observed on the breast feathers, especially if ruffled with a finger, and at the end of winter and the approach of the breeding season the breast of the cock becomes very perceptibly red. On the breast of the cock the tips of the feathers have a "mooned" appearance—an edging of brownish-red colour disposed in a shape resembling that of the new moon. Any red feathers on the breast infallibly denote a cock—unless, of course, the "red" has been applied by human hands. A three-year-old cock Linuet in the breeding season develops a really gorgeous crimson head and breast. To sum up: In an adult bird always look for good whites, a rich nut-brown back, and a "mooned" breast, and you can't go wrong. The cock never carries the heavy, streaky "pencilling" on the breast which is found upon the hen; or so seldom as to be only the proverbial exception that proves the rule.

A Good Snow Bunting.

Mc Innes.—Judging from your description I certainly think you have a very good specimen. The three great show points in a Snow Bunting are size, steadiness, and purity of the white parts of the plumage. They vary a good deal in size, and as a rule only an extremely large bird stands a chance in keen competition—a bird with a wide, bold head, and very wide, rounded chest. The white plumage should be as snowy as possible, and whatever brown it may have across the chest and elsewhere be of a warm, rich tone, while the markings on the wings and tail should be distinct, and dense, glossy black. All the Buntings feed very much alike. The only "stock mixture" you will need is plain Canary seed. Few Buntings will eat any quantity of other seeds, though small oats, wild seed mixture, rape, cracked hemp, coarse oatmeal, maw, and one or two other seeds will be picked over and a few eaten, while some get to like crushed sunflower and safflower. To make a little variety in the diet, it is best to give a feed of soaked ants' eggs frequently, and live insect food (mealworms, flies, scoured gentles, small beetles, and grubs generally), according to season. Fresh (live) ants' eggs are relished exceedingly. "Shop" ants' eggs (get the best quality only) are well liked if soaked in a little new milk, drained on a cloth, and then given the birds; this helps to bring them into condition. It is well to mix a sprinkling of a good insectivorous food among the ants' eggs, gradually increasing the quantity, as in this way Buntings (other species, too) can be got to eat it readily; and it is very good for them. Green food these birds are not keen on, but you can always offer them a sprig of whatever you may happen to have in the place.

Management of Bullfinch.

A.E.N.—Bullies are very fond of hemp, like many other birds, and this is why they eat only this and leave the Canary seed. I certainly think a large percentage of hemp seed is bad for a Bullfinch. They get very fat and wheezy, as a rule, on excess of it. Probably you will know, too, that it is well established that excess of hemp affects the colour of the Bullfinch, and will even cause it to moult out black, or partially black. I have found that safflower and sunflower seeds are far better than hemp, as a regular thing, for the Bullfinch. The following would make your bird an excellent stock mixture, and any good seedsman would put it up for you. Canary and teazle two pints of each, linseed, summer rape, and charlock, half a pint of each, safflower and sunflower a quarter pint of each. In a tin you could keep a mixture of niger two parts, maw one part, and give a pinch twice a week, also a little hemp once a week. Then you have thistle and dandelion seed, and wild seed mixture, small feeds of which may also be occasionally given. For green foods give any of the following, according to season:—Shepherd's purse, daudelion, groundsel tops, chickweed, flowering grasses, watercress, lettuce, rape or Canary seedlings, etc. The seeding kinds may be freely given. Bullies are very fond of many berries (black, privet, etc.), also fruit, and the buds of fruit trees and bushes; on such things they feed largely when wild. Charlock, dock, thistles, hardheads, and many other wild seeding plants these birds are also very fond of; likewise, an occasional mealworm.

In an Aviary.

C. Hobdell.—Sixteen to twenty birds will be plenty for your aviary. It is bad to overcrowd. It would have been better if a foot wider—four feet instead of three. It is impossible to say what birds will agree; all one can do is to indicate birds that ought to agree. Unfortunately they vary much in disposition. Some Greenfinches, for instance, are very peaceable, others regular savage brutes; which kind you will get hold of I, of course, cannot say. Again, birds which have agreed well together through the autumn and winter will often commence to quarrel and fight viciously when the spring and the breeding season come round. Birds, like human beings, are more than one remove from the angels. They have their lapses from grace, and these "break-outs" often surprise (and annoy) their owner. I have known a Yellowhammer, peaceful enough through the winter, behave like a fiend in the coming of the spring. Either keep all cocks, or keep the sexes of each species equal; and have not more than one pair of Chaffinches and Bramblefinches. Generally speaking, it is better not to mix softbills with hardbills. You could try any of the better known Finches (except the Crosshill) and Buntings. It does not matter what part of the country you obtain them from. Creepers and plants are quickly destroyed by the birds. Ivy is suitable, and the evergreens (privet, box, holly, fir, etc.). Hawthorn bushes and the like get their buds and leaves all picked off.

Treatment of Thrush.

C. I.—You say the bird is a male, was born last April, and does not sing a note. Why do you think it a male? So far as I know, the song is the only sure guide to the sex. So may not your bird be a hen? Anyway, it is not getting sufficient variety in the way of food. Soaked chicken-meal is excellent if a little of a good mixture, specially designed for insectivorous birds, is mixed in with it, and some suitable live foods given, also fruit and berries, according to season. But the best (though not the cheapest) method is to feed the bird on the following lines (any good corn dealer would mix you the stock food). Stock mixture (store it in tins): Finely ground chicken (or game or pheasant or partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the chicken (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. "Black-beetles" are very much relished, likewise snails, by the Thrush.

Linnet Mules Wanted.

Ploughboy.—You are wise to follow my advice and try the Linnet-Canary couple. They are the best to make a start with. The stock mixture now should be: canary and teazle two pints each, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one pint each. In the winter (if the birds are in a cold room) and during the moult, about one pint of hemp should be added to the stock mixture. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied) by way of a change. Let them have a little green food, especially rape seedlings, in the winter, and flowering dandelion tops and the young leaves, also seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plaintain and groundsel freely in the spring and the summer. Many good makers put up a special Linnet (or Finch) mixture in packets, and a feed of this occasionally makes an acceptable variation from the ordinary stock mixture. To bring them on to song and in condition quickly the great "secret" is to give them a good daily supply of the best old hemp, and crack it lightly, so that they feed well off it. Also put in the "side-pan," or "tit-bit" drawer, daily a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, plaintain, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower and lettuce. It is the finest "tit-bit" or "refresher" (call it what you will) that I know, and there is no waste. This treatment will bring any bird into breeding condition at the earliest possible moment.

A Linnet-Canary Couple.

J. Jackson.—Your plans seem to be well laid; you certainly are proceeding on the right lines, and ought to meet with success. You must not be impatient, however; many beginners make a mess of things through trying to start before their birds are ready. The best mixture for a Linnet now is: Canary and teazle three parts each, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one part each. As regards the "conditioning," see the reply given "Ploughboy" this week. You should gather shepherd's purse, flowering groundsel, chickweed, dandelion, etc. All these are very valuable in getting one's birds into high breeding condition. Note other replies this week. The hen Canary ought not to have the same mixture as the Linnet. Plain canary seed should be given her, with a little summer rape, daily. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of hemp, and once a week the same quantity of maw and inga mixed (equal parts). This will give variety, and be quite "forcing" enough. A little egg food twice or thrice a week can be commenced about March. But be guided by the condition of your Linnet; you don't want the hen to commence laying eggs before he is "rank," or they will of a certainty be clear. His beak will be blue-black in colour, and his song very vigorous and free when he is in right breeding condition.

Brevities.

A Book (Crescent).—There is not a good up-to-date book published on the subject you mention. One will be issued by CAGE BIRDS in the near future. The two "Nutshell" booklets dealing with the Goldfineh and the Linnet would be very helpful to you.

Linnet Muling (Another New Reader).—See other replies this week about getting Linnets into breeding condition, and the signs of the latter. Was the Linnet which failed last year a housemoulted one? If not, then he may give greater satisfaction this coming season.

More Linnet Mules (Young Hopeful of 16).—Get a Jonque variegated hen of Norwich type, as big as you can. That will be the right bird to breed good Linnet Mules, full of colour. A Linnet born one summer is quite fit to mate up the next summer (i.e., the summer after he himself was bred). I prefer a two-year bird, though, being better developed.

Sib Hens (W. S. Arther).—It is a controversial point. Some people say they do not believe in "Sib" hens; others say the reverse. Personally, I am quite satisfied that certain hens have the faculty of producing light Mules where others fail. Some day I will give my reasons and the results of my experiments. If you do not know of any genuine "Sib" hens, try to get a pink-eyed Yorks type hen bred from as clear stock as possible, or a Lancashire hen.

A Moss-cheeper (Cherry).—What bird do you mean to indicate by the term "moss-cheeper"? I presume the Hedge Sparrow. If so, this bird will live in the house if given one of the soft foods sold for small insectivorous birds (see advertisement columns, or enquire at a seed or bird shop) prepared as advised on the packet. They will also eat a little seed (canary and crushed hemp), and should have a mealworm or two frequently, with flies, etc., as in season. Usually this bird is very unsteady when first caged.

A Bullfinch Disaster (I. F. U.).—I am afraid you alone were to blame. The tail of any Bullfinch will come out if you hang on to it too long. It grows again in five to six weeks. Fresh-caught birds should not be handled at first; it serves to keep them wild by making them nervous of you. Have a door in the side of the cage and run them out (when necessary) through this. Broadly speaking, a bird should be handled by dropping one's hand over its back so as to keep the wings secure against its sides, while the thumb and fingers close around neck and breast. All undue pressure must be avoided.

Three Matters (Silex).—1. The habit mentioned is not a sign of illness. Do you give a sufficient supply of vegetable ingredient in the food? Note another reply this week. 2. This "opening their mouths and panting" is more likely to be due to over-fatness or "congestion" than to bronchial troubles. Dissolve in three tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much sulphate of soda (crusbed) as will lie upon a shilling. Give two doses, on alternate days; plain water in between. Attend to the vegetable ingredient in the food. 3. Tbrushes do not require chopped meat daily. See reply to "C. I." this week.

Still More Linnet Mules (Beginner).—Mules can certainly be bred from cock Linnet and hen Canary, but the reverse mating is the usual one, and the best and easiest unquestionably, for a beginner. I deal with the feeding in other replies this week. Your four field-moulted Linnets can all be run with the hen Canaries you intend to mate up to them. It may be wise to separate them at the end of February, to keep the hens backward; too early nests mean clear eggs, as a rule. If using double breeders (the best, by far) simply run the wired centre slide between them. When the Linnets seem ready, then go ahead.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Pin-tailed Nonpariel.

Martin.—This species is by no means a long liver in captivity. Are you sure no draught reaches it? Give it one or two doses of Dinneford's magnesia (one teaspoonful to one ounce of water), but while the bowels must be made to operate freely, the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose. Follow this by a course of Parrish's chemical food. Your diet is satisfactory, but at this juncture I should add thereto a little milksop, which will certainly be helpful if the bird will take it. I am of the opinion the above will meet the case, but if any evidence of a cough remains after days, then instead of the chemical food, give the following, for, say, three days, to be then followed by the chemical food: Ipecacuahana wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts; take one part of the mixture and two parts of water, and supply this instead of the drinking water, for the period named.

Are Avadavats Soloists?

G.Y.—While I cannot say that the species as a whole are soloists, or that it is constant, yet I have noticed with Avadavats that as a rule only one sings at a time, the rest listen, and then another performer sings his song, and so on. You must also bear in mind that with wild birds the period of song is often confined almost entirely to the courting and breeding season, and in captivity many species retain this characteristic. I do not think you need restrict numbers, it is very interesting sometimes to watch a row of these feathered mites, one will give his performance, while all the rest listen, then he becomes a listener while one of his fellows performs—birds are much more polite than genus homo in this respect, except Canaries, who are even more rude than the humans who have domesticated them, as a rule, for each seeks to drown the efforts of every other bird in their vicinity.

Amazon Ailing.

E.J.H.—This bird is suffering from the effects of the voyage to this country, and should at present be kept rather warm and free from all draught, yet at the same time where it can get light and air. Cleanse the nostrils once or twice a day with diluted glyco-thymoline, and give the bird several doses of Dinneford's magnesia, with two or three days between each dose—one teaspoonful to each ounce of water; when not giving the magnesia well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. Confine its diet to the following: Seed mixture, ripe fruit ad lib, plain biscuit, nuts; a little dry potato may also be given as a treat. Many Amazons are fond of a little boiled maize twice or thrice a week, and this can be given, but it only keeps fresh one day, and stale corns must not be left about. Do not give any slops or messes, table scraps, or any animal food whatever.

Hooded Siskin Ailing.

Constant Reader.—This species usually arrive in rather a critical state, and, personally, I should certainly put all new arrivals on to a little milk sop, supplying the usual seeds, also spray millet, a little of any kind of fruit it will take. Keep a close watch that the bowels move freely, while the voidings should not be allowed to remain watery, yet these should be hard. At any rate, I should give two doses of Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water. Follow the first dose of magnesia with one drop of tincture of opium in the usual quantity (small glass drinker) of drinking water for two days. Crush some cuttle fish to the size of white millet; strew this over sand, and also put a little with the seeds. Personally, I do not believe in any extended use of drugs and usually find if things are taken in time, that an aperient, tonic or cold mixture meets the case. I should advise caging this bird separately for a time—keep it warm and free from draught, yet at the same time where it will get light and air. Maw seed is beneficial in small quantities, but should not be given too freely. Your bird has evidently not yet got over the hardships of importation.

Brevities.

Spermaphila (D.R.).—(1) The Spermaphilæ are the most difficult of any genus I know to name from written descriptions, unless these are very minute. I think, however, your bird is the Reddish Finch, which, though it has been known for many years, has never been imported in any quantity, and of late years has been scarcely heard of. (2) It is a cock, and while the hens are not silent, it is merely a call-note which they utter. (3) Both this and your Waxbill will be quite safe with the Canaries; the only fault of the latter is that they wish to know everybody's business as well as their own—the result of domestication, I presume!

Red-crested Cardinals (V.A.G.).—The Red-crested Cardinal is also known as the Grey Cardinal and the Red-crested Grey Cardinal. I don't consider any of the Cardinals can lay much claim to song, they have some rich notes, but they are not continuous; however, I must qualify this by saying that some Virginians are fairly good songsters, with a little more variety than those named above. A Green, also known as the Black-crested Cardinal, is a handsome bird, worth 15s. to 20s., and has some rather plaintive but peculiar notes, but nothing in the way of sustained song. All the Cardinals are, however, popular favourites and bold and handsome birds.

Green Parrot in Poor Plumage (No Name).—For this bird, even though it is in apparently good health, to have remained so bare for so long a period, points to something radically wrong somewhere, and till you give me full particulars of the bird's demeanour, how you have been feeding and generally treating it, I cannot possibly give you any definite assistance. In the meantime give the bird two or three doses of Dinneford's magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of water), with three days between the doses; on the days you are not giving the magnesia, put Parrish's chemical food in the water. Repeat query, with information as above, and I will try and help you further.

What Troupial? (Folkestone). — (A).—It is a Yellow or Golden Hangnest, an uncommon species, and of which but a comparatively few specimens have reached this country. It was introduced to English aviculture by my esteemed friend, Mr. E. W. Harper, who presented the Zoo with a pair and myself with a young male; since then occasional odd specimens have leaked through, mostly from the continent. Its value is about 50s., though some have been offered for less owing to not being recognised. (B).—I am of the opinion the bird indicated here is the Argentine Silky Cowbird or Troupial. The Zoo called the Red-headed Troupial, the Silky Hangnest. If you would describe the plumage I could then give you a definite answer.

Hand-Rearing Budgerigars (Mrs. Budgerigar).—I must confess to being somewhat of an ignoramus on this topic, never having attempted this feat; for, as a rule, all young Budgies that are hatched out their parents usually rear without difficulty. If I were to make the attempt I should use soaked bread and scalded seed; supply both just warm (that is, with the chill taken off), and to get them used to it gently open their bills at first to accustom them to the food; they soon learn to take it from between the fingers. Unless you wish to have tame hand-reared pets, it is not worth the trouble. If you, however, elect to do so, I should advise you to get "Budgerigars and Cockatells," 6d., plus postage, from "C.B." Office; this booklet I believe gives detailed directions.

What Parrots? (Regular Reader).—No. 1 is a Blue-fronted Amazon; this species, though not as teachable as a Grey, mostly make fair talkers, rare good mimics, and companionable birds—it is very probably a young bird, and will gradually come into good feather. Its present value is from 25s. to 30s., according to condition; this value will increase according to its talent as a talker. No. 2 is, I think, either a Blossom-headed or a Malabar Parrakeet, and should at any rate learn to utter a few words, but it is not usually good practice to let two Parrots out of the cage together, though they can be kept in the same room together, and should emulate each other in speech. They would probably be better with the width of the room between them, but experiment will readily decide this.

Finches for Indoor Aviary Cage (F.T.).—You could keep about a dozen to fifteen birds comfortably in your cage. Neither the Ribbon nor the Nutmeg Finch has any song; at the same time they are not dumb. With the above you could keep Grey Singing Finch, Zebra, Grey and Orange-cheek Waxbills, and Common and Green Avadavats, all the latter have sweet little songs, while the Grey Singing Finch, if you get a good one, is quite an accomplished vocalist. Supply Canary, white, and spray millet, few oats, paddy rice, a little tender lettuce now and again, or a bit of ripe apple. Crush some cuttle-fish to the size of white millet, and mix it both with the seed and sand. In the summer blighty sprays of non-poisonous foliage will greatly conduce to the birds' happiness and well being. Use twiggy branches for perches.

Grey in Moult (Chin-Chin).—I do not think you have cause for any anxiety re your Parrot; the period of the moult is very irregular, and the extremely changeable weather, with the consequent variable temperature indoors, often induces the shedding of a few feathers. While I am inclined to think the dropping of these feathers quite normal, it is best to be on the safe side, and I should advise you to keep the bowels moving freely (not watery loose), with occasional doses of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water—one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water. When not giving the magnesia well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food.

Amazon Parrots (T.H.).—There are over a dozen different species of Amazon Parrots, and of these, in my opinion, the Blue-front is the best and readiest talker, but no hard and fast line can be drawn, as there is so much individualism among the respective species. I am of the opinion your birds are immature Blue-fronts, and in due course they will pick up what they hear going on around them, both words and sounds. To this end keep them where they will hear plenty of conversation, without being alarmed by too much bustle in their vicinity; also talk to them when they are quiet and restful. It needs patience and perserverance, but in due course you will find them responsive.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Answered by FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

Peacock out of Sorts.

G. P.—Try sulphur ointment for the raw place on your peacock's back. I never heard of one being thus affected before. Also examine him to see if he has vermin, and dust him well with insect powder if this is the case. Peafowl do not usually roost with fowls, but in the open on trees or roofs, and it may be that his association with them has caused the mischief. If he is thin and poor, give him some extra food daily, apart from the fowls—a mixture of chopped cooked meat and raw onion would be suitable.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 525, Caledonian Road, Holloway, London, N., will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

E. Dawes.—Replied by post.

T. H. Bowen.—Replied by post.

Cock Canary (Bester).—This bird died from pneumonia affecting both lungs, the left lung principally. It is sporadic in character, there being no evidence of infection, and resulting no doubt from climatic causes. During the prevailing cold weather you should provide extra warmth for your birds, together with a liberal diet.

Hen Gouldian ("Gouldian").—A slow peritonitis, evidently originating from the time you exhibited it, was accountable for the loss of your bird. By the term slow, I mean a peritonitis of a more subacute nature, which would be in its onset slow and insidious in character, not causing any undue distress, but at times manifesting itself in sharp, sudden, painful attacks. Alternating changes of temperature would account for its first onset.

Cock Bullfinch ("Camphell.")—Enteritis was the cause of your bird's death, probably due to some irritant introduced with the food or water, but more probably the former. Your dieting was certainly liberal, but too varied. The intestines were in an inflamed state throughout nearly their whole course, whilst the proventriculus, which never contains much, was in this case perfectly empty, whilst the gizzard contained hardly anything at all; this scarcely coincides with the history you gave me. I should think that the earlier manifestations of the disease were overlooked, and that the bird must have been ailing a day or two before observed. No treatment would have availed at the time the illness became apparent; it would have been too late. You should use care in the selection of the green foods you give your birds, many of which contain active toxic principles which would be quite capable of producing these pathological changes.

Norwich Cock Canary (J. Lamb).—Your birds are suffering from an infectious disease, the true character of which is not yet apparent. I was unable to detect the presence of micro-organisms in the blood or secretions, nor are there any definite lesions sufficiently well marked to be diagnostic of any one particular disease. What I should submit for my inspection any other birds you may lose, which may afford us further evidence. Both lungs were markedly affected with pneumonia, being black in colour, not any one part only being free from attack. The liver substance similarly affected with hepatis, or inflammation of the organ, but the most marked symptom was the connection with the head, the cranial bones being stained with blood. On removing these and exposing the surface of the brain there was found a large effusion of blood, causing pressure, which would result in the irresponsible movements that you describe before death. The meninges, or coverings, were also in an inflammatory condition. This is a specific disease which has invaded [illegible] cies there can be no doubt, and you should take all due precaution to prevent its extension by the isolation of all sick birds, and carrying out a thorough system of disinfection. Get the following prescription made up, and give to the remaining birds in drinking water, one teaspoonful night and morning for a week or ten days. The doses are for one bird; your chemist will prepare according to the number of birds you possess:—Liquor arsenicalis, one grain; acid sulph., two minims; tinct. cardamom Co., six minims; aquam ad., two ounces; one ounce Bis in die.

GENERAL.

Cutting (C. K. Eaton).—Many thanks.

A Suspended Cage (Miss Hampton).—Many thanks; will endeavour to reproduce the next week.

A Presentation (Wilson Nayler).—Pressure on space necessitated the holding over (which we regret) of the account you sent.

A Hybrid (A. Jay).—We will see that your letter reaches our expert. There will be no need to send the number of the exhibit, we think.

The "Annual" (H. Barnes).—We received the subscription, thanks, and the "Annual" shall duly be sent the first week in February. It is not published until then.

The Clarke versus Cutler Controversy (T. J. E.).—We appreciate the spirit which prompts you to write, but think it is better that the controversy should be left to the two parties concerned.

British Bird Queriists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

A Phonograph Record of the Linnet's Song.

SIR,—I would like to ask if there is a record made of the Linnet's song, or if it is possible to get a record made for a talking machine with a Linnet's song on it? If any of your readers could give me an answer through the correspondence columns, I should be very much obliged.

The New Society for Codnor Park.

SIR,—I see in your valuable paper that they have started a new society for Codnor Park and district, and that the majority of the cage-bird members of the Selston Society have resigned. But I should like to know what "majority" it is that resigned—if two or three is a majority? Had Mr. Mitchell finished with one society first, there would have been no complaint. However, he says a committee man has insulted him. In what way has he insulted him the committee man would like to know?

NOM-DE-PLUME.

The Holding Capacity of Aviaries

SIR,—There is one point in Mr. W. T. Page's interesting article in your issue of 15th January which should not pass without comment, because it is likely to altogether mislead beginners—I allude to Mr. Page's remark that "not more than one pair should be kept to each square foot of the ground area." Obviously he has enormously over-estimated the capacity of an aviary. For instance, the aviary he mentions, measuring 50 ft. by 50 ft., would have a ground area of 2,500 sq. ft., and therefore (according to Mr. Page's estimate) would contain no less than 5,000 birds; and a tiny garden aviary, measuring 10 ft. by 4 ft., would hold no less than 80 birds! Further comment is, I think, needless.

ONLOOKER.

Alleged "Faked" Norwich Plainheads in Scotland.

SIR,—I see that it has not been brought to the notice of the Fancy that a prominent exhibitor of Norwich Plainheads was disqualified at Forfar Show at the New Year. I think cases of this kind cannot be given too much publicity, so that it may deter others. Alleged staining matter was taken off a clear yellow hen and a buff variegated hen with a handkerchief dipped in cold water; when rubbed on the tails it is alleged an orange tint was left. For exhibitors of standing to descend to such mean and disgraceful practices is really disgusting, more especially to honest working-men fanciers, who have quite enough to do to keep things going, without being beaten by such. The best thing these exhibitors can do is to retire as gracefully as possible, for the Forfar case does not stand all alone, as it has been noticed that quite a number of the winners this season have been faked, especially on the wings. I think the sooner the exhibitors are brought to book the better it will be for all concerned.

ONE IN THE FANCY.

The Welsh C.B.C. Patronage and Swansea Show.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a short space in reply to the "marvellous mathematician" of the W.C.B.C. Far from evading the question, Mr. Jones, I have, as previously mentioned, given you both statistical and other proofs in previous issue, and verified by CAGE BIRDS. You seem to ignore these substantial facts altogether, and doubtless for the express purpose of concealing your own delinquencies. No, Mr. J., the adoption of the role of injured innocence ill becomes you, and readers have undoubtedly formed a true conception of yourself also, notwithstanding your plausibility and veraciousness. I am fully aware that it was you who practically on our show date despatched a wire to CAGE BIRDS, withdrawing your patronage, and hoping to materially affect our entries. So your committee authorised you to do so. Did they also authorise you to advise your members in open postal communication to boycott our show? If this is illustrative of the mode in which you uplift the Fancy, you surely work by contrarieties. Our supposed non-compliance with your classification was but the mythical outcome of your own bigoted imagination, unless you had a special classification for Swansea only. Although you bombastically endeavour to proclaim the hypothetical merits of the W.C.B.C., I fully realise that "Ad ogni uccello suo nido e bello," and your words need unprejudiced verification, which, in consequence of your recent contemptible boycotting attempt and under-action, you will find extremely difficulty to obtain. So your conscience is still pricking you, Mr. J., concerning the society that your patronage was practically forced upon, regardless of rules or classification. It was no invention of mine, as you know perfectly well, and your "unalloyed satisfaction" is decidedly premature, as you will receive a rude awakening ere long. In conclusion, I beg to ask, does the W.C.B.C. benefit any society which obtains their patronage? Glance at the deplorable result of the recent Pontypridd Show.

A Bullie which Sings the Canary's Song.

SIR,—About two months ago I bought a cock Bullfinch, and I have had him hanging between two Canaries. One morning recently I heard him whistling the whole Canary song quite distinctly, and although, of course, very low, it is quite understandable. I should be very pleased to hear if any of your readers have had a similar experience with a Bullie.

The Brighton Cage Bird Society

SIR,—It was decided at a meeting held on January 20th, at the King and Queen Hotel, Marlborough Place, Brighton, to form a Cage Bird Society, with membership open to the United Kingdom. I shall be pleased to receive the applications of any fanciers who would like to join before the next meeting on February 9th. The subscription is to be 2s. 6d. per year, and 1s. entrance. I hope we shall get a good application for membership. We had the good attendance of 25 fanciers at the opening meeting.

Excursions to the Palace Show

Bradford and Neighbourhood.

SIR,—For those desirous of going to Crystal Palace, the Great Northern Railway Co. are running an excursion to London on Saturday, February 5th, leaving Bradford Exchange Station at 7.25 a.m. This train is due in King's Cross at 11.30 a.m. Return train leaves King's Cross Station at 10.45 p.m. If those who intend going by this excursion will kindly send in their names to me as early as possible, I will arrange for a reserved compartment in order that fanciers can be made as comfortable as possible. Fare, 11s.

Plymouth and the West.

SIR,—I have received information that the London and South-Western Railway will run an excursion to London for the Palace Show as under:—Leaving Friary (Plymouth) at 2.25 p.m. Friday, February 4th, returning on Saturday 12.30 (midnight), fare 12s.; also returning Monday or Tuesday, 17s., or Saturday, February 12th, fare 12s. This train will take up passengers from Wadebridge, Launceston, Exeter, Sidmouth, Yeovil, and Salisbury. The W.C.O.S. are arranging for a saloon, and I should be glad to hear from anyone who would care to join us. The price would be a shilling each extra. The Great Western Railway are running an excursion from Cornwall and Plymouth on Monday, February 7th, leaving Plymouth at 10.45 a.m., returning Tuesday night, fare 12s. I shall be pleased to send on particulars to any enquirers as soon as I receive same from the companies.

Am I a Novice?

SIR,—One of your correspondents needs further information with regard to winning a first prize at an open mixed show. I am very sorry I cannot answer him at greater length, as I have had a rather busy week-end, but I hope that "Novice" will excuse me in this respect if I come straight to the point. The first portion of Rule 37 distinctly states that a novice is one who has not won a first prize in open classes at any show. I take it that those responsible for making this rule saw that unless they made a hard and fast rule on this point, all kinds of minor definitions could be given to a fancier who had taken a first prize, as your correspondent suggests, at a mixed show. Therefore, I personally think that they were very wise when framing this rule to include the words any show. If the show is termed an open show, and competition is not limited in any way, then it doesn't matter how mixed it is; this definition will hold good—that the novice who wins a first prize at the said show in open classes would not be termed a novice any longer, as far as the Yorkshire Union and its rules are concerned. It may seem hard from "Novice's" standpoint, that this rule should be so rigid with regard to novice members of a society in districts that have to run these mixed shows, but it would take a lot of argument to prove it otherwise to me, that as far as the Yorkshire Union is concerned it has saved an endless amount of bother for them in the government of their shows. I hope this will suffice for "Novice."

Catching Magpies.

SIR,—I would like to know the best method of catching Magpies, and hope one of your readers will kindly inform me.

BIRD LOVER.

Breeding & Keeping Bullfinches

SIR,—I wonder if any of your readers would be so kind as to give me some advice as to the keeping of Bullfinches, and how to feed them? And is it possible to breed them in a cage? I have some Canaries, but I have not had any Bullies before.

JAPHETIC.

How Should "Bobbie" be Fed?

SIR,—Would some kind reader please give me a cheap recipe for feeding a Robin without the use of mealworms, which I find very expensive? I have got 20 different kinds of birds, foreign, British and Canaries, but they are all Hardbills, and this is my first attempt at trying to keep a Softbill. Although I have been a bird fancier for the last 10 years, I have never had anything to do with Softbills before. I have taken in your valuable paper for the last five years, and always found it very useful and interesting, and shall be very pleased to hear from some fellow fancier the best means of keeping "Bobbie" in good health.

A. HOLLINGSHEAD.

Mice in the Bird Room.

SIR.—I have tried Dansyz Virus and found it very successful in ridding the bird room of mice. Mr. Williams should get a tube, follow the instructions closely, and he will find the "varmints" depart, as after they have eaten it, they inoculate all others that come in contact with them. After six months I saw one or two, then I repeated the course, and now I am entirely free. I trust Thos. Williams' experience will be as satisfactory as mine, as mice are very detrimental to our songsters, poisoning the seed and frightening the birds into fits.

JAMES STOREY.

SIR,—I gladly give my method of exterminating the mice which periodically find their way to my bird room. Mice usually make two holes, or more, generally to be found in the corners of the room. I make a systematic search and plug them all up with the exception of two. These I leave open, as if plugged up they would simply make another two. Place a trap (one on the spring-drop principle preferred, i.e., "The Nipper") in such a position that the mice are bound to touch the trigger when coming out or going back opposite the holes. Look every morning and you will find your troublesome visitors in such a position as to trouble you no more. I never bait my traps.

FANCIERS' FRIEND.

The Clarke v. Crisp Controversy

SIR,—I cannot allow Mr. R. L. Crisp to escape, cuttlefish fashion, in the cloud of innuendo and irrelevant matter with which he endeavours to obscure the point at issue, and which seriously discounts his expression of regret. Evidently he is still far from concrete. I have in no way provoked the quarrel. What I have done has been in self defence, in order to repel one of the meanest and most persistent attacks that has ever disgraced the Fancy. Under these circumstances, Mr. R. L. Crisp's fresh accusation of self-advertisement, etc., on my part, argues a height of impudence seldom attained to, or a state of mind bordering on distraction on his own part. All the advertisement I have received he alone is responsible for. A greater responsibility also attaches to him in the advertisement he has given himself. That, however, is purely his own affair. Having vindicated myself, I am content. I have no desire to discuss Mr. R. L. Crisp or his affairs, either publicly or privately. My only wish is to live quietly and to forget him and the annoyance he has caused me as quickly as possible.

J. S. CLARKE.

The Value of Hemp Seed for Goldfinches.

SIR,—I was very much interested in a letter published in your valuable paper on Jan. 8th, from Mr. G. Cripps (Oxford), stating that his brother kept a Goldfinch for 11 years on hemp seed and green food in season. About 12 years ago I purchased six Goldies. I sold four and kept two myself. One I had for eight years and the other for ten, in cages. During that time they were kept entirely on hemp seed and the young green leaves of celery, young dandelion leaves and sweet apple. They were two beautiful birds constantly in song, even through the moult, at which time I used to give them Parrish's Chemical Food (a few drops each day) in their drinking water. One died in the moult, and the other, I think, from sheer old age. I found him dead one morning upon removing his cage covering. He was an old bird when I purchased him. A friend of mine, a British bird fancier, bought two from me, and was surprised to see I was feeding them entirely on hemp seed. He told me they would not live longer than twelve months, and that they would eventually go blind if I continued to do so. He kept his in an outdoor aviary, and fed them on Finch seed, in fact, all kinds of seed, including green food in season. One died in ten months and the other he had for about two years. Now, Sir, I think this says a lot for the all-round good qualities of hemp seed, in spite of what we read and are told to the contrary. Of course, for such good results one must purchase the best seed obtainable. Inferior seed of any kind is of no use to any bird and is sure to spell disappointment.

Proposed New Society for North-Western Dis. of Glasgow.

SIR,—A meeting of all lovers of cage birds resident in this district will be held in the Clarendon Halls, St. George's Cross, Glasgow, on Friday, 4th February, 1910, at 8 p.m., with the object of forming a cage-bird club to be run on proper lines.

G. H. Chirgwin's Appeal to Our Readers.

SIR,—I have received a letter from G. H. Chirgwin, Esq., re his Christmas appeal on behalf of the Variety Artistes' Benevolent Fund. I am sending to Mr. Chirgwin one pair of Norwich Plainhead Canaries gratis, for disposal to benefit the fund, which I know is very deserving of help. I hope many others may do the same, and give Mr. Chirgwin a hearty response for a good cause.

Help Wanted from Skylark. Keepers.

SIR,—Your issue of January 8th contains a letter from Mr. Knight, whose persistent attempts to preserve the lives of his Larks have been baffled. The Lark I have at present has been in my possession for over eight months. It was caught when quite young. It was fed on egg and a little oatmeal mixed with it until it was able to eat for itself. Then it got nothing but mixed Canary seed, a little sand (and a bit of turf only in summer). Now, it is in splendid condition, and is becoming a good singer. In answer to his question on open-air treatment, the Lark should be indoors all the winter, and outdoors for the greater part of the day in summer. I had previous Larks that went the same way as his. I think his mode of feeding is entirely wrong.

The Modern Cinnamon Canary.

SIR,—In your issue of Jan. 15, "One in Doubt" wishes to know the chief points in the Cinnamon Canary. I can do little better than refer him to the C.C.C. Standard of points revised at the last general meeting. As for markings in Cinnamons, the C.C.C. leave that optional. I find from my own experience that to produce good Cinnamons you must have markings, but not Green, these being very objectionable in the present-day Cinnamons. If you produce one without markings, it is not as rich in tone of colour, and as a rule they run light at the thighs. If "One on Doubt" will let the C.C.C. secretary have his name and address, he will be pleased to forward him a book of the rules and standard of points, viz.: Colour, 35 points; quality of feather, 15; good wing carriage and compactness of tail, 10; shape and type, good round head, showing no lashing, 20; size, 10; condition, health and cleanliness, 10; total, 100.

Prize Money in Classes with Short Entries.

SIR,—At the late Sutton-in-Ashfield Show I entered a Jay in Class 18, and was awarded second prize. Their schedule reads: Prize-money, 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d., and their regulations state that if not more than eight entries in a class half prize-money will be paid; if not more than four the first prize will be withheld. Now this particular class had only two entries, and instead of cancelling the class, they paid 2s. 6d. for first and 1s. 3d. for second, having first deducted the first prize-money, then paying half on the rest. Knowing the class only contained two entries, they let me send my bird on, at the cost of 1s. 6d. entry and 2s. 10d. carriage. Is this fair to any exhibitor when a class of three is a gain to the show of 9d., and when the top bird can only win 2s. 6d? I received a letter enclosing prize-money, 1s. 3d., and was asked would I kindly let Mr. Longstone (another exhibitor who showed Norwich) know that his bird stood third, but only four entries in class, so there was no prize-money for him. I agree in upholding any show, but I think this is too far-fetched. I wrote the secretary, and he tells me I am the only one to complain, so by this someone else must have had the same treatment. My complaint is on behalf of myself and Mr. Longstone, and I trust we shall have someone else's opinion.

SIR,—During the year 1909 I made 93 exhibits at 41 shows in England and Wales, and won 56 prizes, and at all shows where prize money was due to me I received it, except at one, viz., Oakengates show, held on August 9th. I won a second prize with my Hawfinch. I have written the Secretary three times, and only once has he had the courtesy to reply. The sum is only 5s., but I do not like the way I have been treated, and I am sorry it should have happened in the county of Salop, where I have met some of the best sportsmen of the day in the Fancy. I have never yet pressed a single society for money that has been in financial difficulties, but I do not think this is the case with Oakengates society. I shall certainly withhold my support from the next show. I am very pleased to say that I have received many acts of kindness from Secretaries at different shows where I have exhibited British Birds and they have had to stay over Sunday, etc.; among these I may mention the following societies: Bangor, Harwarden, Wigan, Longton, Wakefield, Cambridge, Barnsley, Crook, Great Horton, Guisborough, Doncaster. I only ask for fair play.

WILLIAM P. BELL.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Show.

SIR,—Since writing last week I have received special prize and a satisfactory reply from Mr. P. G. Sprules.

W. COLLINGS.

SIR,—At the recent Dulwich Show I was awarded 3rd, vhc, and special with three birds. I also wrote repeatedly to the secretary, but received no answer until I wrote to Mr. P. G. Sprules, the donor of the special prize, when I received per return a very gentlemanly and straightforward letter. I received special this week, but up to time of writing have not received prize-money. It was not for the sake of the money that I wrote to the secretary, but owing to the contempt which that official treated me with after patronising their show. A letter of regret sent to each prize-winner would have saved a lot of friction between this society and their customers.

C. H. GOODMAN.

SIR,—Having shown at Dulwich O.S. Show, and won, we have naturally been expecting to hear from the secretaries. A free dinner (according to schedule) was to be given to all special prize winners, and all cups and specials to be given out then; but up to now it is no dinner and no specials and no prize-money! After writing to those secretaries, they not only do not reply, but we have our letters returned in some cases. So I take it they would sooner answer through the medium of the Fancy Press. We want to know if they intend paying prize and special or not? We, as fanciers, regret having to write CAGE BIRDS on this subject, and should not have done so if we could have got a straightforward reply in any other way. We should like to know if the secretaries are still allve, or in London, or have lost their memories? Then, again, such wins make a novice go into a higher section, besides entailing expense. If Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers will try and recall what happened on October 12th and 13th at the Dulwich Municipal Hall, and give a straightforward answer to this letter, they will greatly oblige.

PARES AND LACEY.

P.S.—There is one question we should like to ask readers and that is: Should a novice count a win when he receives no prize-money from an open show? We have; but is it right that it should be so?

City of Glasgow O.A. General Meeting.

SIR,—I would like to direct attention to the farce which occurred at the general meeting of the City of Glasgow O.A. The programme opened with reading minutes of last general meeting and of the several committee meetings held, none of the committee minutes showing amount of any estimates accepted, nor yet of any accounts being passed for payment. The balance-sheet was next taken in hand, and in reply to an inquiry, the auditors admitted that they had the statement of accounts (placed in the hands of the members) before them at the audit on December 7th, but they had not noticed the error in extension. On enquiring after the statement had been printed, they found that two items of expenditure had also been omitted, which just balanced. Then an enquiry was made as to how the great difference between the entries printed in catalogue and those in balance-sheet was accounted for, when the president told the meeting that they had appointed auditors, and they should take their word. Things were correct (not bad). But the self-same auditors had made no mention in their report of any variance in the entries; and, for all the meeting knew, this also had escaped their notice. When the explanation was forthcoming it showed gross carelessness on either the part of the show manager, or some member of the committee, as regards four birds. Then we were told some party, who evidently did not know what he was doing, had entered two birds in wrong class; then that this (holding up a piece of paper) accounts for the other two, and so on. (Very satisfactory, isn't it?) The printers' account was also called in question, it being pounds above estimate, but neither the president, secretary, nor yet the auditors (whose word we had been asked to accept as correct), could give an explanation, nor could the estimated amount be told from the minutes submitted, nor who had authorised the account to be paid. And the meeting had to do without a reason. Again, when the election of committee came up, what a growl was heard when it was proposed to have a voluntary committee (during the discussion it was shown that the only times in recent years that the Glasgow Show added to its banking account was when a voluntary committee was in command). And what a cry about "Trade union rate of wages" was raised when another member proposed that only 5s., dinner, and drink, should be allowed. Although the self-same men would not assist a few minutes previously a party to get trade union, "local," or any other rate of wages for work done to the order of the secretary. Result, Glasgow Association, with its 200 odd members, cannot get a voluntary committee now.

[It is with some reluctance that we publish a letter of this nature, for it seems to us a pity such matters cannot be settled in the club-rooms of societies concerned.—EDITOR.]

Uniform Show Cages for Border Fancies.

SIR,—I was very pleased to see a letter in your last issue on the above subject, and I quite agree with "Looker On," that it is quite time something was done in the matter. It is just the same around London; nearly every exhibitor is using a different pattern show cage, and with the drinkers, seed boxes, and perches in different places. I will own that I can always find my own birds by only catching sight of the cages. I will not go so far as "Looker On" and say I believe it is the cages that win, not the birds; but I certainly think that judges must get to know different exhibitors' cages, and I am sure all judges would be glad to see them all alike. The E.W.B.F.C. rules only state that all cages are to be oval-topped and all black; and they all conform to that. But I think, now that the "Wee Gems" are so popular, it is time we had a club pattern cage, and also all perches and drinkers to be the same pattern. I am sure all true exhibitors would be pleased to see this. If this were done cage-makers would then have something to work to, whereas now they nearly all make different styles and sizes. I hope that exhibitors and judges will let us have their opinions on this matter, and, as I quite expect to be called one, I may as well sign myself as

DISAPPOINTED EXHIBITOR.

Prize Money at the Y.C.C. of Ireland Show.

SIR,—With reference to the letter of the Treasurer of above, which appeared in "C.B." last Saturday week, I wish to say he has my entire sympathy, owing to the way he was fined regarding the payment of prize-money. But that is away from the point altogether. As "Closed Ring" says, why didn't they hold back until they were in a position to pay, and ask those entitled to prize-money to wait? I am sure not one would have refused. Apart from the annoyance caused in not getting prize-money in due course, it does a lot of harm to other societies, because fanciers as a rule like to see how they stand, and often it is the means of their sending another show exhibits, and maybe extra entries, whereas on the other hand when they haven't got the prize-money they cannot enter at all. I must take exception to the remarks of "Closed Ring" re drinkers sent to Dundalk Show. Whether his perusal of the catalogue was hasty or not, Mr. Lavery sent 18 drinkers, and good ones at that, and I sent 6 just ordinary ones. I venture to bet that if it were possible to draw the attention of the exhibitors who got other than their own, and would return them to the Secretary at Dundalk, "Closed Ring" would then see who was right and who was wrong. Strange the Secretary at Dundalk never replied about these drinkers. Nor did the Treasurer of the Y.C.C. reply to mine re cheque being returned. However, I hope we will all live to see another show season, and then!

Is There Trouble Ahead?

SIR,—May I again impose on your generosity for a small space in reply to the letter of Mr. J. Currah in your last issue re the second prize Mule at the late Newcastle Show? Mr. Currah says the reason it could not be found was because the member had placed the label on the top of the cage. Now let me ask J.C. a simple question: does the secretary of the above society keep no books or no records of the entries at their shows? Seemingly the label was the only thing the officiating stewards had to go by (according to J.C.'s explanation). If they do not I will accept J.C.'s explanation as genuine. If they do, a more lame excuse one could not imagine coming from the "Canny Toon." It was the easiest thing in the world to have found the said Mule under such circumstances, as it would be entered in the secretary's books, both in open and members' classes, and as it stood second in the open, there can be no dispute that it was not at the show. Further, it was the only Yellow Siskin Canary in the class belonging to a member, and is catalogued as such in both open and members' classes. I trust to hear a more satisfactory explanation than the above, when readers will be able to judge for themselves, as well as to form an estimate of the character of both "Lover of Justice" and some of the other individnals concerned. There is no spleen whatever, Mr. C., only a desire to see "justice" meted out to whom it ought to be, and the reputation of the N.C.B.S. upheld.

LOVER OF JUSTICE.

SIR,—The Chairman of the Newcastle C.B.S. mentions in his letter something about cliques. At the Gateshead Society's meeting last Wednesday there was a vote taken whether Gateshead should leave the C.B.U. or not. It was carried by a majority of 3 that they leave, 11 voting for leaving and 8 voting for remaining in. What about the "clique" from the Newcastle Society? Out of the 11 in favour, 8 of them comprised the chairman, vice-chairman and six of the committee of the Newcastle Society. Mr. Currah was very anxious that Gateshead Society should take the lead. Why did not the Newcastle Society do so? For the simple reason that it did not turn out as the committee expected at the last general meeting. Mr. C. "People that live in glass houses should not throw stones." Please do not quote Scripture so much; it does not suit you, especially when you are so vindictive about the C.B.U. What more do you know than "Lover of Justice" when you say he is wrong as regards the majority of the members of the Newcastle Society not wanting to leave the C.B.U.? The more I hear about the C.B.U., the more I am convinced it is a clique (never mind what Mr. C. says) that is running this agitation against the C.B.U. If it is the representative for No. 1 District that is causing all this bother (that is one of the opinions I have formed, after hearing a certain member of the Fancy, who said he had been in the Fancy about 40 years, and who would have done better if he had not been so personal and nasty, especially when the man was not there to defend himself) then get him removed. We must have some kind of governing body. I don't care whether it is the C.B.U. or whether a Northern Federation is formed. But will it be any better, if there is a new Federation? You cannot get rules to suit everybody. I do not go in with Rule 17, but let us move with caution, and try to get it removed. I may say I do not agree with "Lover of Justice" in ventilating his grievance the way he has. I have nothing against the officials of the Newcastle Society as regards managing the society, only this, that they should try to be unbiased and look at the situation from both sides.

J. GRAHAM.

SIR,—"Twite's" chief object appears to be to defend his own pet secretary, and to insult the other one, also all other fanciers who cannot see Rule 17 in the same light as he pretends to see it. "Twite" would be well advised to save his powder and shot, as he may need it all in his own defence before he extricates himself from the unenviable position in which he has placed himself. He, of all others, ought to refrain from mentioning the C.B.U. till they get certain little matters (of which he is well aware) cleared up; but more of this anon. "Twite" says that the Newcastle meeting decided by a majority to remain in the Union. This is only another of his misstatements. The resolution passed was in favour of forming a Northern Federation, independent of the C.B.U. Now, in reply to "J. J. Justice," the first fifteen lines of his letter are too utterly contemptible to be worth replying to; he then goes on to speak in favour of coercion, a thing he has never experienced. The coercive Rule 17 only applies to exhibitors who wish to exhibit their birds where they choose. Surely the careers of fanciers in the North who are against Rule 17 will compare favourably with some of the so-called leading lights who have spent so much wind in defending it. How many of those defenders of Rule 17 are exhibitors—I mean exhibitors away from their own doorstep? Those whom Rule 17 does not affect have no right to force it upon others. "Lover of Justice" says the honest exhibitor ought to be protected from those who will stoop to anything to win prizes. Exactly my opinion. But surely he cannot be serious when he makes this statement, and assumes this cloak of innocence. If he is really in earnest then I say charity should begin at home, and a man ought to reform himself and his associates before he undertakes the task of reforming others. Re his question about the Mule, no one is better able than himself to answer this. I will allow him an opportunity to do so; if he fails I will answer it for him, and may also (with the Editor's permission) ask him a few simple, but very pertinent, questions. "Lover of Justice" has adopted a nom-de-plume which is very inappropriate, as he has shown himself to be a lover of injustice and mischief. I will take the liberty of amending his own quotation, and make it read: "The best laid schemes of judge and exhibitor sometimes gang agley." Although in one instance this season the scheme appeared to have succeeded, perhaps this great lover of justice will tell readers who derived most benefit from it.

A MEMBER.

[We publish "A Member's" letter as sent, but we feel it out duty to say that it is written under an entire misapprehension as to the identity of the correspondents who adopted the noms-de-plume of "Twite" and "Lover of Justice."—EDITOR "C. B."]

SIR,—I have to thank you for the opportunity of correcting the secretary's unfair and inaccurate statement, made to your reporter, perhaps with the idea of damaging the C.B.U. The letters from chairman and secretary of the Newcastle Society authenticate my remarks about some officials of societies. Some chairmen, unless they get all their own way, will leave chair, meeting and society at a moment's notice. Men who are elected to these positions should courteously consider both sides of such important questions, striving rather to agree with the majority than to coerce them into their way of thinking. We are promised a federation now. We have a federation, or union at present, composed of the societies who each send a representative, and settle all disputes in the district. What will be the difference?

TWITE.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Lover of Justice," has chosen a nom-de-plume foreign to his letter. No serious-minded man wants hearsay; we want facts. And just as he states that every society affiliated to the C.B.U. became so by the decision of the majority of its members, so did the chairman and secretaries of the Newcastle C.B.S. attain their position, the vote being unanimous. They are hard-working, consistent and self-sacrificing men, respected (even though their views may differ) by every member. They are a credit to the Fancy, and have never shown by word or deed that they desired to rule. In fact, the chairman is always telling us "the matter is in your hands, gentlemen," and he is always encouraging us to give our opinions. The attack is unwarranted and unjustifiable, and discreditable to a "Lover of Justice." Your statement, "Lover of Justice," referring to our last meeting, is not true ("that the majority of our members desired to remain affiliated to the C.B.U. for the present"). What we decided to do is our business, not yours. Further, if you think an injustice has been done to any individual by the N.C.B.S., state your case and show your bona-fides by signing your name and you can rely upon it that the matter will be brought before the members and justice be done. Coming to the question of the C.B.U. in the North, do you deny there is a spirit of dissatisfaction with the C.B.U. in the North, not only in the N.C.B.S., but in others? You fail to see where there is coercion. I have heard men try to justify the C.B.U. But I have never had the pleasure to hear one who could justify or get away from the fact that rule 17 was coercion. Further, have you a C.B.U. official that can explain to the satisfaction of your readers that rule 17 is otherwise? Now, Mr. Raynes, here's your chance, before things become more serious, to show us men of the North the beauties and advantages of such a rule. I hope our Editor will leave his columns open, so that C.B.U. officials and fanciers in general will lay hold of the opportunity to thrash out the question in a friendly, brotherly spirit in the interests of the Fancy.

The Exhibiting of British Birds.

By GAVIN ALSTON (Darvel).

A Lecture recently delivered before the Ayr and District C.B.S.

The keeping of live stock has a greater fascination for many people than anything else. A great painter was once pointing out the beauties of one of his paintings to a friend when the latter replied that he saw no beauty in it; it contained no life. So it is that living animals have a great attraction for some people. But in the cases of many animals the life only must be the attraction. Their outline is not beautiful, their movements not graceful, nor is their colour attractive; and the smell inseparable from them in captivity is not agreeable. Flowers are certainly beautiful; their colours are so pure, and their scent so fragrant; but then they have no living movements to attract us, they emit no sweet sounds to charm us, they have no eye to look us in the face, and they can return no gratitude for love bestowed on them. But birds are fairy creatures. In many species every movement is gracefulness itself. Their voice is musical and their song rapturous. The variations of their plumage are endless; some are chaste and others gorgeous. And above all, they can fly, and that is what we are aspiring to nowadays. No wonder we want to have them near us, and wish to cater for their wants and have them in the best feather we possibly can. Some people keep birds for their song, others keep them for their plumage, and still others keep them for exhibition purposes, and it is these I will speak about.

Birds of the same species differ greatly in their size, in their shape, in their colour and also in their general character. Some are large and stout, others are small and slim. Some are very pronounced in their colour and clear in their markings; while others are comparatively dull in colour and blurred in marking. Some are bold and fearless, and others are wild and untameable. So standards have been drawn up by fanciers for the different species with so many points for the different qualities the bird possesses, so many points being counted for size and shape, so many for colour, so many for quality and condition, and so many for steadiness, making 100 points in all.

The Deciding "How."

The first and most important question that confronts us in our subject is: How are we to become successful exhibitors? We require to know when a bird possesses the points required to make an exhibition specimen. By reading the Press we may learn a great deal, but we must do more than this, we must visit the bird shows and see the birds that are winning, and compare their respective merits with those of the other and less successful birds. We will hear the remarks of fanciers about the different birds; we must read the reporters' opinion in our paper, and we must keep the winning birds in our mind's eye, and try and get some for ourselves like them.

How are we to go about getting birds that will be winners? The experienced fancier looks over the exhibits at a bird show, and also their catalogue prices, and if he sees any that are likely to prove winning birds and reasonable in price, he buys them. This is the surest way of getting a winner. You buy the finished article. You have often to pay a big price, but as a rule you get a good bird. But every body cannot afford to dip their hand so deeply into the pocket. Many of us require to buy at a cheaper rate. We have to buy prospective winners and do the making of them ourselves.

Procuring Birds for Moulting.

What is the best way to get extra good birds for moulting? There are several ways. If you are acquainted with a catcher you can often get the pick of his catch by paying a shilling or two extra, and if we get the pick of one hundred, we will probably get about half a dozen that are worth the trouble of moulting for exhibition. Another way is by purchasing from a catcher who himself selects the good birds out of his catch and advertises them. This method answers well. If you do not know a catcher personally, the next and probably the most common way is to buy them from a dealer. Most of the dealers "grade" their birds, charging about a half more for selected ones and about double the price for "extra specials." Then there are others who make a business of picking birds from the catchers and advertising them. Unless you know that they have a reputation to lose, you are often safer in giving them a wide berth. Of course, when real fanciers have surplus stock to part with (if they are successful exhibitors themselves), you are likely to get something really good from them.

A Good Bird Worth Its Price.

In any case, endeavour to have the birds sent on approval, offering to pay all carriage. Be prepared to give a good price for a good bird, and make it plain to the party you are dealing with that you do not want rubbish, and more likely than not you will get birds which, if they are not just everything you would like, have sufficient excellent properties to enable you to make up your mind to keep them.

Another and the last way I shall mention is to purchase from some one who has moulted the birds and has them ready for immediate exhibition. This is a rather dear way to buy, but if you get the birds on approval the fault is your own if you keep birds that are not likely to do more than pay their way during the show season. A large proportion of the winners are obtained in this way every season and sold again as soon as the show season is over. But the most successful exhibitors stick to their winning birds and endeavour to bring them out the following season better than ever, and this is possible all the more by the fact that a bird's show properties improve as the bird gets older.

The Steadying-Down Process.

We will suppose that you have got a bird that is well worth moulting; you must now endeavour to get it as steady as you can. Some birds are naturally steady, and these make the best exhibition specimens. But the majority need to be worked upon. Always handle them carefully. Offer them a tit-bit occasionally when you go near them. Keep them where they are occasionally seeing some one, and as a rule, with a moult, they will at least be decently steady.

Sometimes one meets with a very good bird, a champion, in fact, if it could be steadied; but it is so wild it will not allow you to even look at it. I don't hold out much hope that you will ever make it a winner, but to deepen your experience there is no harm in trying. The ordinary methods of steadying it are of no avail, and you have to resort to extreme measures. Put your hand cautiously into its cage every day and catch it. Take it out and stroke it gently on the head and back, and let it see that you have no intentions of hurting it. Wash it occasionally; it is fine for experimenting on. Keep it low down in the kitchen, where the children can play with it, and after several years some day you may be amply rewarded for your patience.

These wild specimens I do not now consider worth troubling about, as life is too short to have to wait so long on anything so doubtful. On a big, steady young bird I would willingly wait a second year, supposing it had not just the colour one would like after the first moult.

A Chat About My Yorkshire Canaries.

By W. DEANS.

We now place our lovely box upon the table and scratch our heads in pleasant delight, wondering how it is we have become so clever. It is a real fair and square work of art, with not a split nor a crack nor a cranny to invite Mr. Redmito to take up his abode. We look all round the box and notice two or three ends and edges overlapping a little, so take a sharp (all cutting tools must be sharp) chisel, plane, or pocket-knife and level all of them nicely flush and flat.

Now for the front woodwork. Take the rule or a straight strip of wood and place it on the spare piece of wood which was cut from the back of cage 1in. from the edge. Pencil down rule and cut with saw. We now have the two front pieces necessary to complete the cage woodwork. To slip behind the cage for a moment, as it were, it should have been said that before nailing on the back it is as well to run the fingers along the back edges to make sure all are nice and level, or a serious gap or opening may remain.

We slide round to the front, and find that the two pieces need smoothing up at the edges a little. We do so with the plane, taking no more wood off than is necessary. Now place these pieces on the lower part of the cage front so that they do not cover bottom edge. But leave a nich of 1-16th in., as it is very desirable to have the bottom piece slack for easy removal when cleaning out cage. Mark off on cage body at points indicated, and remove the parts. Now take the saw and cut down the marks into the cage body half-an-inch deep, or as deep as the thickness of wood; mark off parallel with edge, and carefully cut out the piece marked at each end to allow the two front pieces to fit nicely into the body. The front pieces will now slip easily into place. Push up the top piece close into position, and hold firm. Prick two holes at each end, and wait. The lower loose piece will be slack enough to allow for swelling, and so will not get jammed.

The woodwork of our cage now being complete we proceed to the details. If the birds take their soft food at the front, there will be some thrown out of the cage, and as this is not pleasant, we shall not have an egg-drawer as usual at front, but place this food in the far corner of cage in a suitable vessel. So we shall not need to make any opening in front piece of cage at all. The loose front piece cannot sink in the cage out of place, for it rests at each end in its recess on the edges of cage. It can, however, come forward out of place. We therefore take two nails, each about 1-16th in. thick, and 1¼in. long, and bend at right-angles (¼in. one way and ¾ the other) and cut off the heads, which should be on the ¾in. length. In the top front piece, about 6in. from each end and ¼in. from the lower edge, prick two holes, not too large, and then take the bent nails or wires in the pliers and carefully work the shorter and pointed ends into the holes as far as they will go. They should fit rather tight, and then they will never wear slack. When these wires are turned down, they will hold the loose piece nicely in position.

The Cage Fitments.

We have already purchased half-a-dozen good-sized, well-glazed (circular) water pots. One of these we must fit to the cage. We have also purchased about 3lbs. of strong tinned cage front wire (sufficient for the three cages is required). Take a piece of this (about 9in. long) to make our water pot holder. Then take a water pot and place the middle of the piece of wire at the back of the pot, bending it nicely round, so as to make it fit the pot easily, and the trick is done. Place the holder wire with the ends (which should be of equal length) on the front piece of cage—left-hand side, about 2in. from outer edge, each end of the wire to be ¼in. from the upper edge of wood. Press the wire in a little, so that you are able to mark the position of holes, and then prick the holes, not too large. Now insert the ends of wires in the holes, and with the pliers gently, and with care, force first (it is better to point the ends a little) one side and then the other a little further through the wood until the holder is so far forward as to just easily admit the pot. The ends will now protrude into the cage. Cut them off level inside the cage with wire-cutters. The pot should rest in the holder nice and level, and its top edge should be almost level with the upper edge of the wood.

We next make and fix the little perches on which the birds will perch to feed. The best and simplest is made and fixed as follow: Procure a piece of pine or deal free from holes or cracks 5in. long and ¾in. square. Cut off the corners and make round and smooth. Round each end smoothly and then saw in two in the middle. Now see that the sawed ends are made very square or at right-angles with the sides of perch, or they will not fasten up squarely. It is better to have the glue melted for fixing these. Down the centre of the flat ends prick a small hole to take the nail. Also prick another hole about level with the underneath of water-pot and midway between the wires. Now place the flat end of perch a little into the hot glue for a few moments and insert the nail in the hole in cage front. Place the perch in cage so that the hole in perch is to the hole in front of cage. Press to fix glue. Now push the nail forward a little so that it finds the hole in the perch. Take a heavy hammer or weight and hold to end of perch to take the shock or force of hammering. Then take a small hammer and drive the nail home and allow glue to harden.

Fix the other perch in the same manner at the other side of cage for seed box. In this case we fix the perch about 4in. from side of cage so as to come to the middle of the seed-box, which will be wider than the water-pot. Our perches are neat, strong, reliable and very simple, and though fixed very fast, can be cleaned easily. They will not be under the other two perches, and so will not catch the bird's droppings, and will thus never become very dirty—a very important item to see to when cage-making. We have made progress, and are perhaps as happy with our half-finished cage as if we had the whole world at our feet.

Singing and Nesting in Winter.

Here and there a few Missel Thrushes are to be seen in flocks, but they are very small, as the majority of these fine birds have paired off, and the cocks may be heard from the tops of tall trees singing lustily. They have acquired the name of storm cocks from their habit of singing in wet and stormy weather. One perches on the topmost branches of an elm tree at the end of my garden, and although his song is not the most melodious, it has occasionally some very sweet notes, and the rough climatic conditions under which he sometimes sings appear to enhance his value. A day or two ago, when the wind swept across the Surrey hills in fierce gusts, he clung to his exposed position, singing fiercely. One could only catch a note occasionally, the rest being carried away by the storm. The Storm Thrush has been very shy and difficult to approach since the autumn months. He and his fellows have kept well out in the country, frequenting the open fields or resting in some isolated tree or bush, well away from frequented paths. But now the breeding season is approaching he is gradually losing this shyness, and when actual nesting commences will be bold and even rash, especially in defence of home. The Missel Thrush is one of our earliest birds to nest, frequently commencing operations during February or the early days of stormy March. There are no leaves to protect his home, but I have frequently found it quite at the extremity of a very frail sapling, much too high to reach. The eggs generally number four, and are very handsome; they are marked with reddish brown on a grey ground colour. This bird has evidently acquired its name from its fondness for the berries of the mistletoe. It does not swallow the berries whole, but eats the pulp around the seed. After feeding it wipes its beak on the branch where it stands (as most birds do), and by this means scatters the seed in all directions, for should it be standing on an apple or black poplar tree, which are soft-bark trees, the seed remains till the spring, when it germinates, and in time becomes the "mistletoe bough." Another tree that is frequently sown by wild birds is the common elder; these are constantly springing up near where Starlings perch.

The Crystal Palace Show.

A Magnificent Entry Obtained for the 51st Annual Event.

Once again it is our very pleasing duty to record another magnificent entry for the Crystal Palace (51st) Show. The schedule has proved to be as popular as ever, and the entry of 2,373 more than gratifying. The enthusiasm of fanciers (both exhibiting and non-exhibiting) seems to rule even higher than ever, and there is every reason for believing that the number of visitors to the show will be as great as on any previous occasion.

The show, it should be remembered, is to last for four days, viz., Feb. 4, 5, 7 and 8. It will open on Friday, Feb. 4, at 3 p.m., and at 10 a.m. on each of the other days, and close at 9.30 each evening except the Tuesday, when it will close at 4 p.m. There is no charge for admission to the show, which is free to all comers, beyond the shilling charged for admission to the Crystal Palace itself.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden, of 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, S.W., again has the solo management of the show. Mr. Ramsden will also pay all prize and sale money. Letters intended for him during the holding of the show should be addressed direct to the Crystal Palace on the show days. Exhibitors should make a special note of the fact that all specimens must be in the exhibition on Thursday, February 3; any that arrive at the Palace after this date will have to be marked "too late for competition." The show attendants will be at the Palace to receive birds at 10 a.m. on February 3.

The L. and P.O.S. annual judges' lunch will be held in the Grill Room of the Palace on February 4 (covers at 1.45 p.m.), when Mr. G. Crabb will preside. Admission is by ticket only, obtainable at 2s. 6d. each, from the Show Manager, Mr. Ramsden.

CAGE BIRDS will have its usual stall at the entrance to the show, where we shall be pleased to meet old friends and make the acquaintance of new ones. Our "Visitors' Book" has become quite a feature of the exhibition, and we have no doubt the majority of visitors to the show will leave their signatures therein as on previous occasions.

Results of the Judging.

No results of the judging can be forwarded to exhibitors by the management. CAGE BIRDS has, therefore, undertaken to supply results to any exhibitors requiring them, upon compliance with the following rules:—

1. Fully-stamped telegrams or postcards must reach us at 154, Fleet Street, E.C., not later than February 3 (mid-day).

2. The number and class of each exhibit must be clearly stated, and spaces left for the writing in of the awards (if any); a telegraph form or postcard should therefore read, for instance—"Jones, 89, Darlington Street, Birmingham—Class 28, 268 ——; 38, 420 ——"; and so on.

3. All applications for results of judging must be marked "Result" at the top left-hand corner of the envelope.

NOTE.—Letters will be the last to be dealt with; telegrams or postcards only (fully stamped) should be sent. We will do all in our power to despatch results as soon as the judges' decisions have been arrived at, and applicants will help us much by conforming strictly to the above rules, and by making their communications as brief and as simple to understand as possible.

Particulars of the Entry.

With his usual courtesy Mr. J. W. Ramsden granted CAGE BIRDS representative an interview on Tuesday evening last, when we were informed that a magnificent entry had been obtained, one which, with the exception of last year's (the "Jubilee" record), has only been twice beaten since Mr. Ramsden first took over the management of the Palace shows in 1901. The total number of entries for this year's event is 2,373, which, while it is below last year's phenomenal total of 2,820, is only 24 below that of 1908, which was the largest since 1901. So that this year's entry is considerably above the average for the past nine years.

The total number of exhibitors is 700, which includes "a whole crowd of new ones," to quote the genial show manager, who assured us also that there were a large number of exhibitors of one and two birds only. "And these," he added, "are the ones we want."

The only disappointing feature of the entry is the paucity of entries in the Champion Crest and Crestbred sections, only 17 birds all told being entered; and it is a moot point, we were informed, as to whether or not these will have to be cancelled. The novices, however, have done better, with 20 entries all told. All other sections have been well patronised.

The Norwich Plainheads received 140 entries in the Champion section, and 128 in the Novice section, making a total of 268. The Yorkshires in both Champion and Novice sections total 331, which is only 18 below last year's total, when there was more prize-money to be won. The Greens (both Yorkshire and Norwich) total 117, the Cinnamons 54, and the Limit Classes no less than 236. The Border Fancies scored better than any, the total entry in this section being 161 (giving an average of over 20 per class), which is larger even than last year's by eight. This is a very gratifying response, and one of which Mr. Ramsden felt justly proud. And we heard casually that several entries had been refused, being made too late. We append a statement giving the figures in the various Canary sections:—

Canary Classes.

Nor. Plainheads ...	268	Border Fancies ...	161
Yorkshires	331	Scotch Fancies ...	20
Crests	37	Belgians	26
Greens	117	Dutch Frills ...	13
Cinnamons ...	54	A.O.V. Canary ...	32
Lancashires ...	15	Rollers	80
Lizards	21	Limit	236

The above figures include both the champion and the novice entries.

The Mules and Hybrids.

The eleven Mule and Hybrid classes provided for have drawn an entry altogether of 170, which gives an average of 16 per class. There were only four more Mules at the "Jubilee" show.

British and Foreign Birds.

The entries in the British Bird section must also be voted good, the grand total here being 437. Mr. J. F. Dewar's classes (Bullfinch cocks and Bullfinch hens), have drawn a total entry of 55; the seven classes for Goldfinches, Linnets, Chaffinches, Lesser Redpolls, Twites, Siskins, and Bramblefinches (judge, Mr. G. E. Weston), a total of 172; Mr. Allen Silver's eight classes (Greenfinch, Hawfinch, Yellowhammer, A.O.S. Bunting, Blackbird, Song Thrush, Starling, and Magpie, etc.), a total of 120; and Mr. W. Swaysland's seven (pied, etc., Britisher, British hens, Nightingale, etc., Lark, etc., Grey Wagtail, etc., Wheatear, etc., and A.O.S. Insectiv. large), a total of about 70. The Limit Finch class has a total of 20.

In the Foreign Bird section, in Mr. H. T. Camps' classes (Budgerigars, Parrakeets, and Parrots), 30 birds nearly have been entered. In the remaining classes (which were to have been judged by Mr. Russell Humphrys, but which will be adjudicated upon in his absence from England by Mr. Frank Finn, F.Z.S.), the total number of birds entered is 58, making the total in the Foreign Bird section nearly 90. No fewer than 280 birds have been entered in the Extra Stock class (six more than last year), and the cage classes have received an entry of 45.

The Ideal Schedule.

We understand that under pressure Mr. Ramsden agreed to provide two separate classes for Lesser Redpolls and Twites in this year's schedule, instead of only one as in former years; but he did not do so without expressing it as his opinion that it would be better not to. And events have justified his opinion, for whereas last year the single class for Lesser Redpolls and Twites drew an entry of 31, the total in the two separate classes this year is only 29. A similar thing occurs in the Foreign Bird section where, at the urgent request of a prominent member of the Foreign Bird Club, Mr. Ramsden decided to divide the "A.O.S. Foreign" this year into "A.O.S Small and A.O.S. Large." The result here was a total entry of 16 in the two classes, against 21 last year. These two instances have served to prove conclusively to Mr. Ramsden the impolicy of dividing the classes named, and he is of opinion, after many years' experience of show management, that the schedule of the Crystal Palace Show (not last year's, as that was a special one for a special occasion), is just about the ideal, and that to attempt to improve it is only to invite failure in one form or another.

The rare-feathered British bird class will include a white Reed Bunting, a white Jackdaw, two white Sparrows, a white Blackbird, and a clear yellow Yellowhammer. The foreigners will include the Hunstein's Bird of Paradise shown recently at the Horticultural Hall. The Hybrid class will include a rare, absolutely black Goldfinch-Canary Mule. Birds have been entered from as far away as Cork, Fort William, Dublin, Isle of Man, and one from Dresden (Germany).

Club Meetings at the Palace.

Clubs desirous of holding meetings during the Palace Show should make early application to Mr. J. W. Ramsden, the show manager, who has the lotting of the board-room, and other convenient rooms, for this purpose. The Crest Club are holding their meeting at 3 o'clock in the Board Room, where the National British Bird and Mule Club will also hold theirs at 6 o'clock. The meeting of the Cage Bird Union will be held at 3.30 o'clock.

THE LAWS RELATING TO THE PROTECTION OF WILD BIRDS.

By ALEX. G. FORREST (Solicitor), Perth.

In view of the recent decision of Mr. Biron at Old Street (London) Police Court, it has occurred to the writer that this article may be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS.

As most people are aware, the law of Scotland, speaking generally, differs in many respects from that of England, but in the matter of the protection of wild birds the same laws are equally applicable to both countries. All Acts dealing with the preservation of wild birds prior to 1880 were abolished by the Act passed in that year. This Act (The Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880), with an amending Act passed in 1881, forms the principal Act for the preservation of the birds themselves, while in 1894 a further amending Act was passed extending the principle of preservation to the eggs of wild birds. The subsequent Acts were passed in 1896, 1902, and 1904.

By the 1880 Act a close time is provided for all wild birds from 1st March to 1st August, and any person who between these dates destroys any wild bird or uses any line, trap, snare, net, or other instrument for the purpose of taking any wild bird, or exposes or offers for sale or has in his control or possession after 15th March any wild bird recently taken renders himself liable to a penalty not exceeding £1 for each bird, and costs in the event of the bird taken being one of the following:—American Quail, Auk, Avocet, Bee-eater, Bittern, Bouxie, Colin, Cornish-chough, Coulterneb, Cuckoo, Curlew, Diver, Dotterel, Dunbird, Dunlin, Eiderduck, Fern-owl, Fulmar, Gannet, Goat-sucker, Godwit, Goldfinch, Grebe, Greenshank, Gnillemot, Gull (except black-legged Gull), Hoopoe, Kingfisher, Kittiwake, Lapwing, Loon, Mallard, Marrot, Merganser, Murre, Night-hawk, Night-jar, Nightingale, Oriole, Owl, Ox Bird, Oyster-catcher, Peewit, Petrel, Phalarope, Plover, Plover-spage, Pochard, Puffin, Purre, Razorbill, Redshank, Reeve or Ruff, Roller, Sanderling, Sandpiper, Scout, Sealark, Seamew, Sea Parrot, Sea Swallow, Shearwater, Shelldrake, Shoveller, Skua, Smew, Snipe, Solan Goose, Spoonbill, Stint, Stone Curlew, Stonehatch, Summersnipe, Tarrock, Teal, Tern, Thicknee, Tystey, Whaup, Whimbrel, Widgeon, Wild Duck, Willock, Woodcock, Woodpecker.

By the 1881 Act the Lark was added to the above list, and the 1894 Act gives power to the Secretary of State on the representation of any County Council to order that the principal Act shall apply within that county or any part or parts thereof to any species of wild bird not included in the foregoing list. In the writer's county (Perthshire, Scotland) sixteen birds have been added by the above method, including the Bullfinch.

The penalty for all other birds is a reprimand and costs for a first offence, and five shillings per bird and costs thereafter.

In the principal Act it is laid down that the above penalties shall not be exigible provided it is proved that the bird was killed, taken, bought, or received during the period in which such bird could be legally killed or taken from some person residing out of the United Kingdom. Doubts having arisen with regard to the construction of the above exception, it was by the Act of 1881 repealed and replaced by the following: "A person shall not be liable to be convicted under Section 3 of the Wild Birds Protection Act of 1880 exposing or offering for sale or having the control or possession of any wild bird recently killed if he satisfies the Court before whom he is charged either (1) that the killing of such wild bird if in a place to which the said Act extends was lawful at the time when and by the person by whom it was killed, or (2) that the wild bird was killed in some place to which the said Act does not extend, and the fact that the wild bird was imported from some place to which the said Act does not extend shall until the contrary is proved be evidence that the bird was killed in some place to which the said Act does not extend." It will be noticed that the principal Act mentions the killing or taking or buying or receiving, while the amending Act mentions only killing.

Any person may require an offender against the Act to give his name and address, and if he refuses or gives a false name or address, an additional penalty of 10s. may be imposed. The Secretary of State may extend the close time for any district or may prohibit the taking of eggs of any specified wild birds or of any wild birds whatever. He may also prohibit the taking of particular kinds of wild birds during the whole or any part of that period of the year to which the protection of wild birds under that Act does not extend, or the taking of all wild birds in particular places during the whole or any part of that period. Due intimation is given in the local newspapers and also by fixing notices of the order in conspicuous spots within and near each place in which the order operates, and in such other manner as is thonght fit with a view to making the order known to the public.

In Perthshire 17 species of birds are protected throughout the whole year, the Goldfinch being probably the only one of the number which closely interests cage bird fanciers. The eggs of 45 species of birds are protected, including the Bullfinch, Goldfinch, and Skylark. The penalty for contravening the order is £1 for every egg taken or destroyed and £1 for every scheduled wild bird. The order remains in force for three years, when it is again renewed. It is understood that in some counties in Scotland wild birds are protected on all Sundays during the year; but such is not the case in Perthshire at present.

Where a person is convicted of any offence under the Wild Birds' Protection Acts the Court may, in addition to imposing a penalty, order any trap, net, snare, or decoy bird used by such person for taking any wild bird, to be forfeited, together with any wild bird or wild birds' eggs in respect of which the offence has been committed.

The Use of Decoy Birds.

At Lawford's Gate Petty Sessions on January 20th, Stanley Buckley (19), collier, and George Buckley (14), were charged with "ill-treating and torturing a Goldfinch" at Wadley's End, Winterbourne, on December 31st.

P.C. Holmes deposed as to catching the defendants at 12.30 p.m. in a field using an apparatus for trapping birds. A string was tied round the body of the Goldfinch, and its wings were left free to flutter. By means of another string attached to a stick the bird was jerked up in the air, with the intention of attracting other birds.

George Buckley did not appear, and his brother said he had nothing to do with the birds.—The Magistrates' Clerk said George Buckley was evidently assisting.

The bench characterised the offence as a most cruel one, and the defendants were fined 10s. and costs each, or seven days' hard labour. —"Bristol Evening Times and Echo."

Two Months' Imprisonment.

Last week we published details of the case in which a Dublin bird dealer named King, was charged with false preaences. The prisoner was brought before the Recorder on the Monday for sentence, which was two months' imprisonment.

Under the White Rose.

THE list of shows arranged by the Yorkshire Union has now completed its course, Hoyland being the last of the fixtures. Up to the Christmas vacation entries came up exceedingly well, only two shows having any cause for complaint; but since then they have been exceedingly bad, the last three shows being very meagrely supported by exhibitors. No doubt a good number of birds were about "knocked out," this probably accounting for a few "shorts."

YORKSHIRE County B.B. and M.C. completed their list of patronage shows with Yarm on January 8th, and a glance through the table of points and entries, goes a long way to prove that this is one of the coming clubs. In all the patronage was given to seven shows, and at these the members of the club put down the grand total of 285 birds, an average of above 40 birds per show. In the champion section, Mr. D. Duncan, jun., leads the way with 98 points, Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby and Mr. J. P. Stamp tieing for second place with 77 points each, Mr. T. H. Inman being fourth with 58 points, closely followed by Mr. W. Woods with 51 points, Next in order come Mr. T. Boyle 46, and Mr. J. Bousfield 25. The run for CAGE BIRDS prizes for amateurs proved very keen, Mr. J. Meadows scoring 44 points, and Mr. J. Isherwood 43, truly a tight race; 3rd place was secured by Mr. B. H. Wilson with 30 points, Mr. James Wilson being runner up with 28 points, followed by Mr. J. Lane, 18 points. Exhibitors are now looking forward to the Great National Show at the Palace, and it is fully expected that the Yorkshiremen will be well represented both personally and, I was going to say, "birdally."

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Robin that Lives in a Shop.

A Robin has taken up its abode in a florist's shop in the main street of Leicester. It flies in and out of the shop during the day, roosts in a basket hanging from the ceiling, and takes grapes from the hands of the assistants. Taken from "The People."—Sent by Dorothy P. Lawrence (age 11), Mill Lane, Robin's Bridge Road, Coggeshall, Essex.

*Long-Lived and Lively Linnet.

My dada has a Linnet which is 13 years old. One night a cat knocked "Joey" and his cage to the floor, and pulled his wings and tail out. This was not the first time the cat had knocked him about, for it had its paw on "Joey's" head once, which left a mark just above his beak. But with all his troubles he is as lively as ever, and sings day and night.—Sent by Nellie Botts (age 8), 30, Brook Street, Longton, Staffs.

The Cuckoo Rhyme.

The Cuckoo's a merry bird,
She sings as she flies;
She brings us good tidings,
And tells us no lies.

She sucks all the small birds' eggs
To make her voice clear,
And she never sings "Cuckoo"
Till summer is near.

She comes in in April,
In full song in May;
In June she decreases,
In July--"Good day!"

The Shows.

MARGATE.

For an end of the season show, run in the midst of the local election, the fixture of the Isle of Thanet F.S., which was held in the Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate, on Jan. 26 and 27, was a very nice little affair. Competition was restricted to the County of Kent, yet the entry was fairly good, and the quality well up to the average. Messrs. Boncey and Moore made a pair of indefatigable and courteous secretaries, and their efforts were most ably seconded by the committee, who worked hard and well under the leadership of their chairman, Mr. Jones. The weather was fine, but fearfully cold, and many of the birds seemed to be suffering from its effects. Mr. C. W. Evans, the local bird specialist, of Duke Street, had a nicely-arranged stall upon which were displayed, in addition to his own wares, a nice assortment of the publications issued from the office of CAGE BIRDS. Mr. J. Robson judged.

COLDSTREAM, N.B.

Coldstream held their first annual show on Jan. 22nd, and, taken all round, the entry was very creditable. Norwich, on the whole, were good and competition was keen. Borders were a choice selection, all the noted winners being forward. The medal for best Border was secured by a grand Green, admirably staged by Mr. Lloyd, and tho win was a very popular one. An offer of £3 was refused, we heard, for this bird at the show. These classes were handled by an old veteran, Mr. Bell (Earlston, late of Jedhurgh), and his awards were well received. Mules and British, as was only to be expected in this hot-bed, were a grand collection, and here again some of the best specimens were present. All the classes were keenly contested, many good birds having to give way to others. Mr. Mason, the well-known Scotch exhibitor, judged these classes, and his awards were well received. The show was held in the Mechanics' Hall, an ideal place for a show; it is capable of staging over 1,000 entries, is splendidly lighted, and free from draughts. The committee were composed of hard-working fanciers, and the stewards were: For the Border section, Messrs. A. C. Bruce and G. Ford; for British, Messrs. J. Dickson and A. Smith; and they carried out their duties admirably. We were pleased to see Mr. J. Smith, the now well-known exhibitor of Border fancies present; unfortunately for over a year he has been confined to his room; but a few visits the same as he had on Saturday works him up to his former self. Mr. J. W. Bruce had the secretarial duties in hand, and everything passed off AI. We hope to see Coldstream again to the front in the holding of a great show as in days gone by.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER O.O.

The Provincial Roller C.C. held their second annual contest at Belle Vue, Manchester, on Jan. 14th and 15th. The judges were Messrs. F. E. Lester (London), T. W. Walton (Leeds), and F. Oldroyd (Wakefield), and their awards gave general satisfaction. The rooms set apart for the show were the best we have seen for a Roller contest; they were light and warm, and there were plenty of convenient places for the judging. The number of entries was 184, which, we believe, is a record for Rollers. With one exception, all the exhibits faced the judges. Mr. Cole (Llanelly) had the honour of winning the P.R.C.C. trophy—a very handsome silver cup. First prize winners in Classes 1 and 2 were both claimed at catalogue prices. The attendance hardly came up to expectations, but doubtless the weather (it turned out very wet) and the election would account for this. Mr. Lester judged Classes 1 and 4, Mr. Walton Classes 3, 5, and 6, and Mr. Oldroyd Classes 2 and 7. The bulk of the birds were removed on the Saturday. Quite an innovation is taking place at this show.

AUCHTERARDER, N.B.

The Auchterarder F.S. held their annual show on January 22nd in the Aytoun Hall, which is one of the best and well-lighted halls he have had the pleasure of being in. The weather was all that could be desired from a visitor's point of view, although some of the birds seemed to feel the effects of the cold journeys, but as the day wore on they picked up and looked better. The Canary section, although not large, contained birds that were good in quality. The British birds were the feature of the show, especially the Bullfinch, Linnet and Goldfinch classes, which were well filled with some of the best seen out. In fact, all present said that it was the best turn-out of Britishers they had ever had. The judging was rather late in commencing, but was well got through, the public being allowed in at one o'clock. Mr. Dow, junr., is to be complimented on the splendid way he got through his work, and he and a good committee to back him up deserve the greatest praise. The judges, Messrs. R. McLay (Kirkintilloch) and R. V. Raine (Cathcart) appeared to give every satisfaction.

BROTTON.

This fixture, held on Jan. 22, was unfortunate, first of all in clashing with the general election, entries closing just when everybody was excited about the results in the district, and secondly on account of the show day being marred by a blinding snowstorm. The entry and and gate consequently suffered. The prizes were awarded on the principle of a class being full at eight and first prize withheld at less than six. The room in which the birds were staged was comfortably warm, but the bad weather made it necessary to have artificial light. The Secretary, Mr. Beaglehole, is a capable official, and it is unfortunate that this year's event had to contend against the difficulties referred to. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

EASTFIELD SIDE.

The Eastfield Side (Sutton-in-Ashfield) C.B.S. held their annual members' show in the large club-room of the Masons' Arms on January 15th. Eight open classes were also provided. Entries came up well considering the time of year, and the quality of the exhibits in most classes was of the highest order. The Norwich were a grand lot, containing birds that had done credit to their owners before this season. The Crest and C.B.s were not very numerous, but the lacking in quantity was made up for in quality. Mr. J. Carlin, the secretary, and his committee deserve the highest praise for the way in which the show was carried out. The birds were staged three-deep, and so arranged as to get the full benefit of the light. At night, when the ball was lit up, the birds and cages were quite a picture to look at. Mr. J. Bertie (Nottingham) judged, and his decisions gave every satisfaction.

FORT WILLIAM O.S.

Eighth annual show held in the Town Hall on January 13. The rain came down in torrents all day, which unfortunately told its tale as regards the "gate." However, it was a most successful show as regards the quality and numbers of exhibits, and many winners were staged. The Scotch Fancies were a nice level lot, and here that keen fancier Mr. Fotheringham secured all the prizes. The Norwich were a fine lot, and Messrs. Skinner and McDougall had it all their own way. Yorkshires were here in force, too. Mr. McDougall captured Hyde's special. Borders were a good show, and the variety class contained fine Crest-breds. The matched pairs were headed by pair of Fancies of fine position. The Mule class contained some fine birds, and the British were a splendid lot. The boys' class was fine; a really good Siskin headed the class, and should be heard of again. The cup (given by D. Machiven), was won by Mr. D. M. D. Skinner, the runner-up being W. H. McDougall, only 4 points separating them. The president, Mr. Colin Young, keeps the committee busy. Special praise should be given to them; they are Messrs. W. Swan, W. McMaster, J. Hope, R. Cameron, P. Chisholm, J. L. Blair, Wm. Fraser, jun., W. H. McDougall, Angler (E. F.), jun., Jas. Forsyth, and the able secretary, Mr. W. Simpson, who is giving up the secretaryship, we heard. We hope the show will turn out on the right side. Mr. G. Marlin (Hamilton) placed the cards.

The Cage Birds were located in one of the side rooms, a great improvement on the platform method formerly adopted. There was good light, and the position was entirely free from draughts. As usual, the show was well patronised by the public and Fanciers. Sec. McEwan and his band of workers had everything in apple-pie order. Pres. W. Hamilton carried off the two principal Specials, Clock and Gold Medal, with his handsome Blue Fronted Amazon Parrot. Mr. P. McQuiston was also a notable winner—eight firsts in eight classes. Borders and British were a fine lot, some good birds being staged. Mr. Smillie's awards were well received. The show was a big success.

EAST BOWLING AND DIS. B.F.A.

The first show of the year was held on January 22 at St. John's School, Paley Road, we having changed from the Bailey Mow Hotel. The show was a success, both in number of entries and financially. There were 129 birds in 16 classes. Some grand Yorkshires were on view, and the competition for points was very keen. Mr. J. Wilman (Baildon) had no light task in judging the cards, but the awards gave entire satisfaction.

WIGAN.

The Roller Canary section of the Wigan and Dist. C.B.S. held their first open singing contest in the large room at the Fleece Hotel, Market Street, on January 21 and 22. Entries came up fairly well, numbering nearly 60 in 4 classes, whilst the quality was of the very best. The winner in the novice section is a particularly good bird, having a grand variety of notes, and a good delivery, and would take some beating in the champion section. Mr. W. Massey (Bolton) judged, and gave every satisfaction, not a single grumble being heard in the room. Mr. W. Ridge, the secretary, had everything in first-class order, and the show was excellently conducted in every detail

HOYLAND.

The Hoyland and Dist. O.S. held their ninth annual show on January 22nd. The Town Hall, in which the exhibits were housed, is light, lofty, well ventilated, and of nice size. The weather was cold, but by the aid of a fire and the gases being lit up, the room was of a cosy description. The officials are to be complimented for so looking after the comfort of both visitors and the birds. This being a Y.U. show (last one previous to the Palace Show), one fully expected to see a very fine array of feathered gems present competing for the various trophies. Expectations, we are sorry to have to record, were, however, rudely shaken. The schedule provided 20 classes, five of which had unfortunately to be cancelled. The 15 classes that stood contained only 104 entries, barely seven birds per class. This, we were informed, was by far the worst open fixture as regards entries ever experienced at this noted colliery district. Hoyland fanciers are true to the core, and our sympathy is with them; they deserved every support for the admirable way they carry out their work. The staging was of a very neat order, and every bird could be seen at a glance. The president, Mr. T. Taylor, is quite an enthusiast, and a capital worker; the vice-president, Mr. T. Whittinghaun, makes a most capable understudy. The support rendered was of a most liberal character. The stewards were Messrs. T. Taylor (president), Thompson, Hanson, A. Taylor, Waters, Guest, and Oakley. Praise is due to each and everyone of them. As each class was adjudicated upon cards were displayed, and the show was open in good time. Mr. J. Warrender, the worthy sec., is the right man in the right place. Nothing is too much for Jabez to do, has the society at heart, and the only thing that was not to his liking was the poor response. Mr. J. N. Harrison judged. Ramsden's medal, Mr. A. H. Waters.

LARNE (Ireland).

First annual open show of the Larne C.B.A., was held on January 20th and 21st, in the M'Garil Town Hall. This hall is an ideal one for the purpose, being well lighted, spacious, and free from draughts. Mr. J. Wilcock (Ecclesbill) judged, and his awards were well received. The entries did not come quite up to expectations, but, owing to the season getting so late, many exhibitors are keeping their birds at home, preparing them for the breeding season. The Norwich classes were small as regards entries, but some very taking birds were put down. The Yorkshires were a grand lot, some of the finest birds being staged. The show was held under the patronage of the Y.C.C., Y.C.S., and N.P.H. of Ireland. The various challenge cups, medals, etc., were contested for, and special prizes were won by Messrs. Neill, Stewart, Geddis, Owen and Magee, Loughridge, Barclay, Lavery, Keating, Fleming, M'Neill, Gaskin, Mulligan, Kane, Harvey, and Haste. Mr. Geddis, the courteous and energetic secretary, with a hard-working committee consisting of Messrs. Kane, Haste, Smith, Gillesby, Mann, Owens, Rogan, Streight, McConkey, Buchannan, Gilchrist and Fullerton, had everything well in hand, and this being their first venture, we heartily congratulate them upon the able and willing manner in which each man performed the duties entrusted to him. The exhibits were all packed and away in good time, and when the balance-sheet is made up, it will probably be found that there will be a few pounds to bring forward to next year's fixture.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.
